PUBLISHERS' NOTE.

IN presenting this New Dictionary to subscribers and the public, the publishers desire to draw attention to one important respect in which it differs from its predecessor, "Deacon's Dictionary of Foreign Phrases." Although the price of the present work is only about double that of the former, it contains nearly ten times as much information. It forms, in fact, the largest collection of Quotations, Proverbs, etc., which has hitherto been brought together in a single volume.

INTRODUCTION.

“Omne tulit punctum, qui miscuit utile dulci.”

IN an age when we are said to suffer from a superfluity of dictionaries of every kind, it may seem that an apology is required for the production of a New Dictionary of Foreign Quotations.

It is, therefore, necessary to explain that the present volume owes its existence to the extraordinary success of a book which, although far smaller both in size and design than the present work, had a somewhat similar aim. The book alluded to is “Deacon’s Dictionary of Foreign Phrases,” a little volume—now out of print—which was intended to assist those who, in these days when scarcely a single column of a newspaper is without a foreign phrase, find such a dictionary almost as much a necessity as a convenience.

That such a book was something more than the long-felt want of advertisement was amply proved by the fact that it speedily passed through several editions.

The success of “Deacon’s Dictionary of Foreign Phrases” has encouraged the belief that there is room for a more ambitious work which, while preserving all the advantages of its predecessor, would, by the enlargement of its scope, deserve the approval of a wider circle of readers. It is true that the addition of innumerable quotations and the complete revision of the whole have left little resemblance in the present volume to the former one, but all that has been proved useful is carefully retained.

It is, perhaps, scarcely necessary to demonstrate to anyone who has the most superficial acquaintance with the English writers of to-day, whether they be those who address the public through the medium of the Press or of the bookseller, that it is becoming more and more common to seize upon some happy quotation from a foreign tongue in order, if not to point a moral, at least to adorn their tale. The writings of the Press constantly contain allusions and references which presuppose some knowledge of foreign languages and literature on the part of both the writer and reader. The same may be said of our public speakers. Although it has ceased to be a habit in the House of Commons for honourable members to denounce one another in a phrase borrowed from Lucan or Virgil, and although Prime Ministers do not now imitate the example of Walpole, and make guinea bets about the correctness of a quotation with leaders of the Opposition, still a happy phrase from the treasury of the classics is often found to be no mean ally in enforcing an argument.

Nowadays we are all citizens of Cosmopolis, and we do not hesitate to import a phrase, even if clothed in a strange dress, should it serve our purpose better than the more familiar words of our mother tongue. It might be thought by some that this borrowing from languages not our own is sometimes carried to excess. Still, the fact remains that very many phrases from foreign languages have become part of our own literary currency. For example, how common is the use of such Latin phrases as : Deus ex machinâ ; Quantum mutatus ab illo ; Nolo episcopari ; Non possumus ; Pro bono publico ; Tempus fugit ; Cui bono ? De mortuis nil nisi bonum, and countless others. Such French phrases as Bon chien chasse de race ; Voguez la galère ;

Autres temps, autres mœurs; Du sublime au ridicule; Point d'argent, point de Suisse; Such Italian phrases as Vedi Napoli e poi mori; Se non è vero, è ben trovato; Dolce far niente, etc., etc

At the same time, while these and numerous other phrases are in common use, it must not be forgotten that a large number of the reading public—indeed, an ever-increasing multitude—are often in doubt as to the meaning of the commonest phrases of this kind. A great majority have never had the opportunity of cultivating any language other than their own, while, in the present day, technical education has very properly diverted the attention of many from the study of languages to what is of more immediate practical utility. Such people, when confronted by a quotation from a foreign language, may be tempted to exclaim with Berchoux, *Qui nous délivrera des Grecs et des Romains?*² A confession of ignorance is always unpleasant, and it is for the convenience of those troubled ones that this book is primarily designed.

Nevertheless, it must not be thought that the object of this work is merely to help those to whom such common expressions as, shall we say? Après moi le déluge, or Vox populi, vox Dei, present difficulties. The intention has been rather to deserve to the full the motto which has been set at the head of these prefatory remarks. The collection and translation of common phrases is the contribution to the utile of the design. Let me now proceed to show how far an effort has been made to mingle the dulce of quotations, chosen for their beauty, with the utile of hackneyed expressions.

To the many phrases which, either because they are commonly employed by English writers, or because they are very familiar to those who are acquainted with the language from which such phrases are taken, have an obvious claim to inclusion, a large number of longer quotations has been added. These have been selected chiefly on the ground that they have become "winged-words" in the languages whence they have sprung; that is to say, they are well-known to all who have an intimate knowledge of the literature of those languages. In some few cases passages have been selected on account of their own intrinsic merit, apart from any popularity they may have gained.

Furthermore, it is hoped that all lovers of proverbs will find in these pages an adequate number of those sententious sayings which, perhaps better than anything else, illustrate a nation's peculiar habit of thought. It will, doubtless, be interesting to many to find the same or a similar proverb possessed by many nations, a fact which may well be taken to confirm the good knight Don Quixote's view, that proverbs are true, being opinions extracted from the same experience. Wherever a proverb, or proverbialism, requires explanation, the literal translation has been given in brackets, while the explanation or English equivalent follows afterwards. The same plan has been pursued with many of the idiomatic phrases.

I will now deal with each section separately.

Paradoxical though it may seem, the Latin section has given the greatest difficulty, because quotations from that language

Latin. are most frequent. For, in addition to the many Latin legal phrases which are in common use, there are an enormous number of short quotations which are, so to speak, shreds from the fabric of a well-known passage of a Latin author. These passages are so familiar to those who are themselves well versed in the literature of the Romans that a word or two quoted from them becomes a finger-post to the entire passage. But I fear that to the average man the information that virginibus puerisque is a quotation from Horace, or that cacoëthes scribendi are words of Juvenal, would not materially add to his respect for the genius of these writers. It may be given to a few, to apply a phrase of Horace, to recognise a poet even in his dismembered limbs, but such people are, I imagine, in a minority. In these cases, therefore, the name of the author, from whom such a quotation has been taken, is sometimes omitted; but if the full passage is also familiar as a quotation, the full text will be found in the alphabetical order of its first letters, with the name of the author appended. Such an arrangement has, of course, disadvantages, but the advantages are equally obvious. If the long form alone of the quotation were given, it would necessitate the addition of very full indexes to enable the diligent inquirer to discover in what long passage the short quotation is buried, and he would then be left unaided to thresh out the meaning of the shorter phrase. Experience has shown that such indexes, however sufficient they may be for the man who has a good acquaintance with the foreign language quoted, are of little service to the man who has no such equipment. Moreover, we live in days when time means money, and few are disposed to spend time over the scrutiny of an index, when they can gain the same information with less labour.

The arrangement adopted has the further advantage of giving both the popular and the correct form of a quotation. Thus Non ignara mali, miseris succurrere disco will be also found in its popular, but incorrect, form of Haud ignara mali, etc. Sometimes, too, the popular sense given to brief excerpts from the Latin is different from the meaning of the original. For example, Noli me tangere, which is the Vulgate version of the risen Christ's "Touch me not!" addressed to the Magdalene, is now commonly used to indicate a threatening attitude. Again, Horace's Vestigia nulla retrorsum and Virgil's O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint are often applied in a way not meant by the poets. Consequently, the plan followed admits of giving the now generally accepted interpretation of these phrases without doing open violence to the authors of them.

When, however, the author's name has been attached to a quotation, every attention has been paid to the correctness of both the Latin and the interpretation. In one case of a familiar passage, Facilis descensus, et seq., one line has been omitted, but this has been done in deference to a long-established custom and also to the fact that the line is rather a parenthesis than an integral part of the sentence.

It may be noted that, while many of the more popular law maxims are included in this section, several which often find a place in dictionaries of phrases have been omitted. This has been done because a large number of such phrases are of no interest to the general public, while their meaning is not infrequently so obscure as to require one learned in the law to explain them. Even lawyers themselves, unless rumour lies, have been known to hold serious, not to say costly, differences of opinion upon the subject.

I fear that some people, on seeing that more than fifty pages of this book are devoted to Greek quotations, will be inclined to exclaim: Que diable allait-il faire dans cette Greek. galère? Greek has, unfortunately, ceased to be popular as a subject for study. "What is the use of Greek?"—a question often put to long-suffering pedagogues by their charges—is now more often heard from the lips of those whose age ought to have given them more wisdom. But, as in the past:

"Græcia capta ferum victorem cepit, et artes Intulit agresti Latio"—

so we may be permitted to hope that Greek literature is only receiving a temporary rebuff. At any rate, the attack made upon it in one of the ancient seats of learning was repulsed, and this, perhaps, may be taken as a happy augury for the renewal of interest in the literature which contains the noblest thoughts written in the noblest language.

In making a selection of Greek quotations, a difficulty is caused by an embarras de richesse, for there are an immense number of passages which might reasonably be included on the ground of merit. Still, it is hoped that the quotations selected are fairly representative, and are sufficient to show what pithy sayings we owe to the Greek writers. Many of these are well known in a Latin or English dress. For instance, such popular sayings as : "Call a spade a spade !" "Speak no ill of the dead !" "Nothing in excess !" "Those whom the gods love, die young !" "Life is short, Art is long," can all be traced to Greek sources.

It is true that we seldom hear Greek quoted nowadays ; but this is a fault that may be remedied. I am told that, within recent years, an alderman has been heard to adorn his speech with excerpts in the language of Sophocles. Why should not this wholesome infection spread even to our Lord Mayors ? I can conceive of nothing that would be more in harmony with the spirit of a civic feast than the recitation of an ode of Anacreon.

The Greek quotations are, for the most part, given exactly as written by their authors. A few passages have been slightly altered in their structure where absolutely necessary ; that is to say, when a few words or lines have been taken from a passage too long to quote in its entirety.

Every effort has been made to include in this section as many as possible of those French words and phrases which are to be found in the newspapers, periodicals, and novels of French. to-day. It must be owned, however, that it is a difficult task to keep pace with the constant influx of French words and idiomatic expressions into our language, as this Gallic invasion continues to make such great advances.

A very large number of literary quotations will also be found in this portion of the book. They have been chosen carefully, and it is believed that none of the best-known passages have been omitted. A considerable number of authors has been drawn upon, and both the old and the modern writers are represented. For example, by the side of extracts from the Chevalier Balzac, La Rochefoucauld, Molière, etc., will be found passages from such moderns as Paul Bourget, Emile Zola, and Edmond Rostand. The great writers of maxims and reflections, such as La Rochefoucauld, La Bruyère, and Vauvenargues, have been laid under heavy contribution; for these pithy sayings, both for the knowledge of human nature they show and for their terseness of expression, must commend themselves to every age. The apothegms of Vauvenargues are especially noteworthy on account of their loftiness of thought.

The remark has often been made, that in France many men have owed their reputation to the coining of smart sayings, and it is an undoubted fact that no nation possesses a larger number of memorable phrases which have been uttered on historic occasions. These remain fixed in the memory even when the events that occasioned them are forgotten, and so numerous are they that Mr. Max O'Rell is not very wide of the mark in declaring that "the history of France might be written between quotation marks." Many of these sayings are as well known in England as in France. Phrases like: L'Etat c'est moi; C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre; Tout est perdu fors l'honneur; De l'audace, encore de l'audace; Nous avons changé tout cela; J'y suis, j'y reste; La Garde meurt et ne se rend pas, are on the lips of all.

When we consider the authenticity of many of these historic sayings we are on dangerous ground. M. Fournier, in his books L'Esprit des Autres and L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, holds the brief of Advocatus Diaboli against their acceptance. From him we learn that Louis XIV. probably never exclaimed L'Etat c'est moi; that Francis I. did not write, in the hour of defeat, Tout est perdu fors l'honneur; and, worst of all, that the credit of the immortal La Garde meurt et ne se rend pas is due, not to the courage of the soldier Cambronne, but to the inventiveness of the journalist Rougemont. Reading M. Fournier's onslaughts upon cherished popular traditions, one is inclined to regret his passion for truth at all hazards. Popular prejudices are stubborn things to grapple with. We know that the Duke of Wellington himself denied that he ever uttered the words "Up Guards, and at 'em," at Waterloo. But these words are still accepted as historical by the great majority of people, and similarly, M. Fournier notwithstanding, faith in the authenticity of many of those French sayings will be difficult to destroy.

This section owes much to Büchmann's Geflügelte Worte, wherein are collected the "winged words" taken German. from the literatures of various countries.

The German portion of that book is, as is natural, the most complete, and is most useful because it contains the extracts from authors that are most often quoted by Germans themselves. A very large portion of the passages selected for this Dictionary are taken from the writings of Goethe and Schiller, but other authors of repute have not been neglected. German writers are, as a rule, too verbose to be a prolific source of supply for the collector of concise maxims; but several examples of the aphorisms of Schopenhauer and Lichtenberg are given. Several of the most famous sayings of Bismarck, who was a phrase-maker as well as a maker of empires, will also be found recorded. Some of these, such as Nach Canossa gehen wir nicht, Macht geht vor Recht, and Eisen und Blut have almost become part of our own language.

From the most widely-known works of the classic writers, the Divina Commedia of Dante, the Gerusalemme of Tasso, and Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, many extracts have been Italian. made. Petrarch and Boccaccio do not lend themselves so readily to brief quotations, and the latter is, therefore, but meagrely represented. Of the maxims contained in the works of Guicciardini and Machiavelli numerous examples are given. It will be noticed that, as an inditer of Machiavellianisms, if such a word may be coined, the latter is disappointing. To judge from his writings, Machiavelli's code of ethics appears to have obtained a worse reputation than it merits.

Many of the pretty conceits to be found in Il Pastor Fido of Guarini are included, although it is an open question whether some of these are not merely glosses on Petrarch and other writers rather than due to Guarini himself. So much for the older writers. The more modern ones, as Metastasio, Monti, Alfieri, Manzoni, Pellico, etc., have provided many of the quotations. The Italian proverbs are, in general, excellent specimens of popular adages neatly expressed, and are well worth perusal. A very full list of Italian musical terms is also given in this section. It may seem somewhat banal to find selections from Dante sandwiched between the prosaic directions that are found on a musical score. These terms, however, have been included on the ground of practical utility. The insertion of them proved to be an acceptable feature in "Deacon's Dictionary of Foreign Phrases," and on that account they have been retained in the present volume.

The comedies of Calderon and Lope de Vega, as well as those of Tirso de Molina, have supplied many of the Spanish quotations.

Spanish. Baltasar Gracian and Antonio Perez, the two great writers of maxims, the former terse though sometimes obscure, the latter occasionally trivial but always clear, have been often drawn upon. Numerous selections have also been made from the writings of Cervantes. Of the more modern writers, Yriarte and Campoamor are most frequently quoted.

It will be seen that a large proportion of the Spanish section is taken up by proverbs. This is explained when we consider the high place that sayings of this kind—the refranes, adagios, and proverbios—hold in the estimation of the people of Spain. If France may be said to be the land of the bon mot, assuredly Spain is the country of proverbs. Probably no nation possesses a greater number of sententious sayings, and nowhere is the study of them more diligently cultivated. Around the subject an extensive literature has grown, and continues to grow, for the Spaniards take a warm pride in the numerous wise saws that abound in their language. Whether the Moorish strain in his blood is responsible for the Spaniard's love of sententious sayings we need not inquire. It is sufficient to say that many of their proverbs are so full of practical wisdom as to deserve our close study. It has been well said, too, that without doubt the purest Spanish is to be found in these proverbs, and for that reason alone they are attractive to the student. Sancho Panza has made most of us acquainted with many of the wise sayings current in Spain. Indeed, honest Sancho is not a Sam Weller. His maxims are not peculiarly his own, for he often merely repeats the adages popular among his countrymen.

Some of the Spanish proverbs are histories in brief. We may learn something of the misrule of the monarchs of Spain from Allá van leyes do quieren reyes, of the terrors of the Inquisition from Con el Rey y la inquisición chiton! while El diablo está en Cantillana reminds us that Don Juan, the prototype of all gay deceivers, was something more than a fiction of dramatists and poets.

Needless to say, it has not been possible to cull more than the choicest flowers from the abundant stores of the proverbs of Spain. The best, and all of the widest application, have been diligently collected.

The proverbs included in this section will show that the inhabitants of Portugal are not far behind their neighbours in practical wisdom. The fact that Camoens is the only Portuguese writer to be quoted by name, might lead the uninitiated to think that writers in Portugal have something in common with snakes in Iceland. This is not the case, but many Portuguese writers of eminence have chosen the sonorous Castilian as their medium of expression in preference to using their own native tongue.

In conclusion, the Editor feels very conscious of the truth of Dr. Johnson's dictum that a dictionary maker seldom fully attains the purpose with which he sets out. Yet it cannot be doubted that this book will be of practical utility to many as a handy work of reference, and that it will be acceptable for general perusal on account of the words of wisdom and of beauty, gleaned from so many sources, which are herein contained.

Numerous explanatory footnotes will be found throughout the book. If these sometimes err on the side of appearing superfluous, I hope that this will be considered an error in the right direction. With St. Augustine of Hippo, I hold that "It is better to endure blame at the hands of the critics, than to say anything that the people might not understand."

The motto of a compiler of a dictionary of quotations must necessarily be that of Molière : Je prends mon bien où je le trouve. Most of those to whom, for whatsoever merit this book may have, the credit is due, have gone where appreciation of their services will not affect them. To the others, whose assistance I have frequently acknowledged in the footnotes, I now desire to offer my most grateful thanks. In the case of translations, where made use of, every care has been taken to attribute them to their authors. Finally, to Mr. Robert D. Blackman—the editor of "Deacon's Dictionary of Foreign Phrases"—I am greatly indebted for much practical advice and assistance.

- A cuspidē corona* (A crown from the spear.) A kingdom won by the sword.
- Ac veluti magno in populo quum saepe coorta est Seditio, saevitque animis ignobile vulgus; Jamque faces et saxa volant; furor arma ministrat; Tum pietate gravem ac meritis si forte virum quem Conspectere silent, arrectisque auribus adstant; Iste regit dictis animos, et pectora mulcet.*—Virgil. And as in a mighty throng of men, when some tumult has arisen, and the rabble has been roused to fury; firebrands and stones fly this way and that, since rage lends weapons. Anon, if they chance to see among them a man whose probity and merits give him influence, silence takes them, and they hearken attentively to his counsel; he diverts their angry thoughts with his words, and soothes their savage rage.

* The Romans reckoned all dates from 753 B.C., the year when, according to tradition, Rome was built by Romulus and Remus. Ab urbe condita is usually expressed by the letters A. U. C.

† Acheron, the river of Woe, was one of the seven streams which were supposed to flow round the lower world.

Ad amussim.	(By the plumb-line.) Correct in every particular.
Ad arbitrium.	At pleasure; at will.
Ad astra per ardua.	(To the stars through difficulties.) To win eternal renown in spite of all opposition.
Ad calamitatem quilibet rumor valet. — Publius Syrus .	(Any rumour is good enough to use against the unfortunate.) Give a dog a bad name and hang him.
Ad Calendas Græcas.	(At the Greek Calends.) When two Sundays come in one week.*
Ad captandum vulgus.	To catch the rabble; to tickle the ears of the mob.
Ad clerum.	To the clergy.
Ad damnum adderetur injuria.— Cicero .	That would be adding insult to injury.
Addecet honeste vivere.	It much becomes us to live honourably.
Addendum.	Something to be added.
Adde parum parvo, magnus acervus erit.	(Keep adding little to little, and soon there will be a great heap.) Many littles make a mickle.
A Deo et Rege.	From God and the King.
Adeo in teneris consuescere multum est.— Virgil .	(So strong is custom in youthful minds.) Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.— Pope .
A Deo lux nostra.	Our light cometh from God.
Ad eundem (gradum).	To the same degree (rank).†
Ad extremum.	To the extremity; at last.
Ad finem.	To the end; finally.
Adhibenda est in jocando moderatio. — Cicero .	(There should be a limit observed in joking.) Jokes should not exceed the bounds of good taste.
Ad hoc.	For this purpose; unto this end.
Adhuc sub iudice lis est.	The case is not yet decided.
Ad infinitum.	To infinity; without limit or end.
Ad interim.	In the meanwhile.
Ad internecionem.	To extermination.
Adjuvante Deo labor proficit.	With God's help, work prospers.
Ad libitum.	At pleasure.
Ad literam.	(To the letter.) Minutely exact.
Ad maiorem Dei gloriam. (A.M.D.G.)	For the greater glory of God.
Ad mensuram aquam bibit.	(He drinks water by measure.) Penny wise and pound foolish.
Ad nauseam.	(To produce sickness.) To produce a feeling of disgust.

* The Calends was the name given by the Romans to the first day of each month. As this was a usage peculiar to the Romans, to say that something will happen on the Greek Calends is an emphatic way of saying "never."

Adversis major, par secundis.

Modesty is a becoming ornament to a young man.

(To throw the helve after the hatchet.)
To give up all hope.

For the perpetual remembrance of the thing.

(He that comes too quickly to a decision is fast on the road to repent.) Marry in haste and repent at leisure.

(Show your trappings to the common folk; I know you inside and out.) Your hypocrisy may impose on others, but I know your real character.

(Eggs to-day are better than chickens to-morrow.) A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

To what damage.*

To be further considered.

To the thing, point, purpose.

(Attached by law to the soil.) Originally a class of Roman serfs.

(Constant attention to one subject frequently produces better results than mere natural ability and skill.) Practice makes perfect. Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains.

In short; in a word.

The crafty race of flatterers praises the conversation of an uneducated boor and the features of an ugly friend.

To the nail; to a T; to a nicety.†

All to a man; everybody without exception.

(For the Dauphin's use.) An expurgated book.‡

Prepared for either event; ready for good or ill fortune.

According to value.§

By courage I repel adversity.

Brave men ought not to be overcome by adversity.

Superior to adversity, equal to prosperity.

* A writ issued to ascertain whether the granting of a privilege to some district, such as the right of holding a fair, is likely to prove detrimental to the interests of any portion of the inhabitants of that district.

† Horace speaks of a man factus ad unguem, meaning a "perfect gentleman." The origin of the expression is the practice of sculptors testing the smoothness of marble by passing their finger-nail over it, just as makers of billiard balls test them by rubbing the ivory against the sensitive nerves of the cheek.

‡ This was the title of a celebrated edition of classic authors, which was prepared for the use of the Dauphin by order of Louis XIV.

§ A tariff ad valorem is the imposition of certain duties on imported goods, the rate of duty being fixed on the commercial value of these imports.

Adversus solem ne loquitor.

(Do not speak against the sun.) Do not argue against a fact which is clear as daylight.

Ad vivum.

(To the quick.) To the life.

Advocatus Diaboli.

The Devil's advocate.*

Ægis fortissima virtus.

Virtue is the strongest shield.

Ægrescit medendo.

(The disease grows worse by attempts to heal it.) The remedy is worse than the disease.

Ægri somnia.

The empty visions of a sick man.

Munro.

Æquam memento rebus in arduis

In times of adversity remember to preserve equanimity, and equally in prosperous moments restrain excessive joy.

Servare mentem, non secus in bonis

Ab insolenti temperatam

Lætitiâ.—Horace.

Æqua tellus

The impartial earth is opened alike for the pauper and the children of the rich and noble.

Pauperi recluditur, Regumque pueris.—Horace.

Æquitas sequitur legem.

(Equity follows the law.) The rules of equity modify the strict letter of the law by taking into account the circumstances of the case.

Æquum est,

It is right that the man who asks pardon for his own faults, should be willing to pardon others.

Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.—Horace.

Æra nitent usu; vestis bona quærit haberi;

Brass shines by use; a good garment ought to be worn; deserted houses soon fall into ruin and decay.

Canescunt turpi testa relicta situ.

—Ovid.

* When it is proposed to add a new name to the list of saints, the Roman Catholic Church appoints a person to examine and oppose the claim. This individual is known as the Advocatus Diaboli. Hence the term is applied to anyone who supports an unrighteous course of action.

† These are the opening lines of the De Rerum Naturâ, the famous poem in which Lucretius expounds his theory of the creation of the world. The poet invokes Venus, the Goddess of Love, as being the chief motive power in the universe. She is called "Mother of the Æneadæ," because the Romans claimed descent from her, through Æneas, the Trojan hero.

Ære perennius.	More enduring than bronze; everlasting.*
Ærugo animi, robigo ingenii.— Seneca.	(The rust of the mind is the blight of genius.) A mind not used is a mind abused.
Æs alienum.	(Money belonging to another.) Debt.
Æs debitorem leve; grave inimicum facit.— Publius Syrus.	(A small debt produces a debtor; a heavy one an enemy.) Lend and lose; so play fools.
Æsopi ingenio statuam posuere Attici, Servumque collocarunt æterna in basi, Patere honoris scirent ut cunctis viam. — Phædrus.	The Athenians erected a large statue to Æsop and placed him, though a slave, on a lasting pedestal: to show that the way to honour lies open indifferently to all.
Ætatis suæ.	Of his or her age.
Æthiopem lavare (or dealbare).	(To wash a blackamoor white.) To lose one's labour.
Afflatus.	(A breathing on.) Inspiration; the divine afflatus.
Afflavit Deus et dissipantur.	God sent forth his breath, and they are scattered.†
A fonte puro pura defluit aqua.	(From a clear spring clear water flows.) A man is generally known by the company he keeps.
A fortiori.	(With stronger reason.) If one horse can pull a cart, a fortiori ten horses can do it more easily.
A fronte præcipitium, a tergo lupi.	(A precipice in front, wolves behind.) Between the devil and the deep sea.
Agenda.	Things (business) to be done.
Age quod agis.	(Do what you are doing.) Mind the business you have in hand.
Agnosco veteris vestigia flammæ. — Virgil.	(I feel the symptoms of the former flame.) Having loved once before, I know the symptoms.
Agnus Dei.	The Lamb of God.‡
Ah, quam dulce est meminisse!	What joys doth memory give!
Albæ gallinæ filius.	(The son of a white hen.) A man born with a silver spoon in his mouth.§
Alcinoo poma dare.	(To give fruit to Alcinous.) To carry coals to Newcastle.
Alea jacta est.	The die is cast.¶

* See Exegi monumentum.

† This was the inscription on the medal which was struck by the order of Queen Elizabeth, to commemorate the defeat of the Spanish Armada.

‡ The name given to part of the office for the burial of the dead in the Roman church, Agnus Dei being the opening words of one portion of the service.

§ It is related that an eagle dropped a white hen into the lap of Livia, the wife of the Emperor Augustus, and this was accepted as a favourable omen.

|| Alcinous, King of Corcyra (the modern Corfu) possessed such fertile orchards, so tradition says, that their excellence became proverbial.

¶ The words of Julius Cæsar when he led his army across the Rubicon, an action tantamount to a declaration of civil war.

Aleator, quanto in arte est melior, tanto est nequior.— Publius Syrus .	(The better the gambler, the greater the knave.) Success in gambling is not a good recommendation for honesty.
Alere flammam.	To feed the flame; to add fuel to the fire.
Alias.	(Otherwise.) At another time.
Alibi.	(Elsewhere.) In law the plea of a person who alleges that he was in some other place than that stated in the charge.
Aliena vitia in oculis habemus, a tergo nostra sunt.— Seneca .	(The vices of others we keep in our eyes, our own on our back.) We see the mote in our brother's eyes, but do not observe the beam in our own.*
Alieni appetens, sui profusus.— Sallust .	Covetous of the possessions of others, and prodigal of his own.†
Alii sementem faciunt, alii metentem.	(Some do the sowing, and others the mowing.) One beats the bush, and another catches the bird.
Aliorum medicus, ipse ulceribus scates.	(The physician of others, you yourself are full of sores.) Physician, heal thyself.
Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus.	(Even the good Homer sometimes nods.) The greatest writers are occasionally prosy.
Aliquis malo sit usus ab illo.	Some advantage may come of that evil.
Alitur vitium vivitque tegendo.— Virgil .	Vice thrives and lives by concealment.
Aliud nihil est agendum.	There is no more to be done.
Alium silere quod voles, primus sile.— Seneca .	(If you wish another to keep your secret, first keep it yourself.) Speech is silver, silence is golden.
Alma mater.	(A foster mother.) Generally applied to a University.
Alta sedent civilis vulnera dextræ.— Lucan .	Deep are the wounds that civil strife inflicts.
Alterâ manu fert lapidem, panem ostentat alterâ.— Plautus .	(In one hand he carries a stone, while in the other he shows a piece of bread.) A treacherous fellow. One who carries fire in one hand and water in the other.
Alter ego.	Another self.
Alter ipse amicus.	A friend is a second self.
Alterius non sit, qui suus esse potest.	Let no man be the hireling of another if he can be his own master.
Altiora peto.	I seek higher things, a higher life.

* The writings of Seneca contain so much that resembles the teachings of Christianity that he has been regarded as a Christian writer. His sentiments, however, present the loftiest ideals of the Stoic school of philosophy. He had the misfortune to be the preceptor of Nero, which only proves the best teachers do not produce the best pupils.

† So the historian describes Catiline, the Thistlewood of Roman history. The phrase is now applied to political adventurers by their opponents.

Altius ibunt qui ad summa nituntur.	They will rise highest who strive for the highest place.
Alumnus.	(A nursling; foster-child.) The students of a college or university are said to be its alumni , foster-children.
Amabilis insania.	An amiable madness; a pleasing illusion.
Amantes sunt amentes.	(Lovers are madmen.) Love and pride stock Bedlam.
Amantium iræ amoris integratio est. ---Terence.	The quarrelling of lovers is the renewal of love.
Amare et sapere vix deo conceditur. —Publius Syrus.	To love, and to be wise at the same time, is scarcely possible even for a god.
Ama tanquam osurus. Oderis tanquam amaturus.	(Love as though you might hate. Hate as though you might love.) Do not run to extremes either in love or hatred.*
Amat victoria curam.	(Victory loves care.) Victory and prudence are close friends.
A maximis ad minimos.	From the greatest to the least.
Ambigendi locus.	Room for doubt; dubious.
A mensâ et toro.	(From table and bed.) A legal formula to indicate a divorce.
Amica pax, magis amica veritas.	I love peace, but I love truth even more.
Amicitia sine fraude.	Friendship without deceit.
Amicum perdere est damnorum maximum.	To lose a friend is the greatest of all losses.
Amicus certus in re incertâ cernitur. —Ennius.	(A sure friend is made manifest in a doubtful matter; when one is in difficulty.) A friend in need is a friend indeed.
Amicus curiæ.	(A friend of the court.) A person who gives an opinion or contributes information on the invitation of the judge, although not otherwise engaged in the cause.
Amicus humani generis.	A friend of the human race.
Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed major veritas.	Plato is my friend, Socrates is my friend, but truth is greater.†
Amicus usque ad aras.	A friend even to the altars—to the last extremity.
Amicus vitæ solatium.	A friend is the comfort of life.
Amissum quod nescitur non amittitur. —Publius Syrus.	(The loss that is not known, is no loss at all.) What the eye does not see, the heart does not grieve for.
Amor et melle et felle est fecundissimus.—Plautus.	Love is very rich both in honey and in gall.

* This precept, the truth of which is somewhat dubious, is apparently of Greek origin, for Sophocles puts the same idea into the mouth of a character in one of his tragedies.

† The author of this phrase is unknown, but the idea is expressed by Aristotle.

Amor gignit amorem.	(Love begets love.) Love is the load-stone of love.
Amor magnus doctor est. — St. Augustine.	Love is a great teacher.
Amor patitur moras.	(Love endures delays.) Love is a sweet tyranny.
Amor patriæ.	The love of our country.
Amor timere neminem verus potest. — Seneca.	(True love can fear no one.) Perfect love casteth out fear.
Amoto quæramus seria ludo.— Horace.	A truce to jesting; to serious matters let us now give our attention.
Anceps forma bonum mortalibus. — Seneca.	Beauty is a doubtful boon.
Anguillam caudâ tenes.	(You hold an eel by the tail.) You have caught a Tartar.
Anguis in herbâ.	(A snake in the grass.) A hidden danger.
Aniles fabulæ.	Old women's tales; prosy nonsense.
Animadverto, enim, etiam deos ipsos, non tam accuratis adorantium precibus, quam innocentia et sanctitate laetari.— Pliny the Younger.	I perceive that the gods themselves are propitiated, not so much by the prayers of their worshippers, as by singleness and holiness of life.
Animi labes nec diuturnitate vanescere nec omnibus ullis elui potest.— Cicero.	Stains that affect the soul are not obliterated by time, nor can rivers of water wash them away.
Animo et fide.	By courage and faith.
Animo imperabit sapiens, stultus serviet.— Publius Syrus.	A wise man will be the master of his passions, a fool their slave.
Animo non astutiâ.	By valour, not by craft.
Animula, vagula, blandula Hospes, comesque corporis! Quæ nunc abibis in loca, Pallidula, frigida, nudula, Nec, ut soles, dabis joca.	Dear little fleeting soul of mine; my sometime guest and comrade! Now whither wilt? To what unknown climes wilt thou go, so pale, and cold, and tiny as thou art, forgetting thy former playful ways, a stranger now to mirth.*
Animum curis nunc huc nunc dividit illuc.— Virgil.	This way and that the anxious mind is torn.
Animum fortuna sequitur.	(Fortune attends on courage.) Fortune gives her hand to a bold man.
Animum picturâ pascit inani.— Virgil.	And with the shadowy picture feeds his mind.
Animum rege, qui, nisi paret, imperat. — Horace.	Rule your passions, or they will rule you.
Animus lætus bene afficit vultum.	A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.
Animus meminisse horret luctuque refugit.	My heart shudders at the remembrance, and shrinks from the thought.

* The celebrated verses which the Emperor Hadrian addressed to his soul, as he was approaching death. The Latin is very beautiful, but anything like an adequate translation is hopeless.

Animus non deficit æquus.

From possibility to realization.

(From the latter.) An argument from effect to cause.

A few appear swimming here, and there in the seething surf.*

Let your desires be ruled by reason.

(From the former.) Arguing from cause to effect.

The best armour of old age is an early life well spent in the practice and ex-ercise of virtuous deeds. For when you are advanced in years your pre-vious good actions bring a great re-ward, seeing that your habits of virtue still abide with you even in extreme old age. Moreover, the conscious-ness of a well-spent life and the mem-ory of many kind actions is in itself a very sweet consolation.

(To weave spiders' webs.) To elabo-rate feeble arguments; to split hairs.

(The ruler of the drinking.) The mas-ter of the feast among the ancients gave directions when to fill the cups.†

An authority on matters of elegance or taste.

Arcadians both, well matched in sing-ing, each ready to cap the other's verse.‡

(The mysteries of government.) State secrets.

(Insane intoxication discloses a secret.) In vino veritas. What soberness conceals drunkenness reveals.

(A bow too much kept on the stretch breaks.) A bow long bent at last waxeth weak.

A favourite quotation when a critic wishes to say a book contains some good things among much inferior stuff.

† This arbiter was not necessarily the giver of the feast. The choice was decided by casting dice. One of the duties of the position was to decide the proportion of water to be mixed with the wine, for to drink wine neat was considered the act of a profligate.

‡ The meaning that Byron, in "Don Juan," attaches to Arcades ambo is "blackguards both," and this is now their usual connotation.

Ardua molimur: sed nulla, nisi ardua, virtus.—Ovid.	We essay a difficult task; but there is no merit save in difficult tasks.

Beatus ille, qui procul negotiis,
Ut prisca gens mortalium,
Paterna rura bubus exercet suis,
Solutus omni fenore;
Neque excitatur classico miles truci,
Neque horret iratum mare;
Forumque vitat, et superba civium
Potentiorum limina.—Horace.

Bella detestata matribus.—Horace.
Bella, horrida bella!—Virgil.
Bella suscipienda sunt ob eam causam, ut sine injuriâ in pace vivatur.
—Cicero.

Bello flagrante.
Bellum internecinum.
Bellum nec timendum nec provocan-dum.—Pliny the Younger.
Belua multorum capitum.

Bene est tentare.

Benefacta male locata, malefacta, arbitror.—Ennius.
Beneficia tacite danda sunt.

Beneficium accipere, libertatem est vendere.—Publius Syrus.

From words to blows.
(The words of a statute must be strictly adhered to.) Judges must interpret the laws literally.

The Muses' lonely haunts.
The bounty of nature is too little for the greedy man.

From the bond of marriage.
He flourishes upon ancestral honours.

(Philosophers as far as the beard.)
People who have the pretence of knowledge without the reality.
Firmness is the foundation of the virtues.
(Happy, fortunate are they who are in possession.) Possession is nine points of the law.

He is the happiest man, who depends upon himself, and is entirely selfreliant.

Blessed is the man who, far from the business of the town, ploughs with his own oxen his ancestral fields, with mind free from all cares about money.
This was the life of the ancient race of men. Such an one is not like the soldier, roused by the bugle's loud note, nor does he fear the angry main; he shuns the law courts and the proud portals of the rich.

Wars, the dread of mothers.
Wars, horrid wars!—Dryden.
Wars are to be undertaken in order that we may live in peace without suffering wrong.

During hostilities.
A war of extermination.
War ought neither to be dreaded, nor provoked.

(The many-headed monster.) The multitude; King Demos.
(It is as well to try.) Nothing venture, nothing have.

Benefits bestowed upon the undeserv-ing are no kindness.
(Benefits should be given silently.) Let not your right hand know what your left hand doeth.

(To accept a kindness is to sell one's freedom.) He that goes a-borrowing goes a-sorrowing

Beneficium non in eo quod fit aut datur constitit, sed in ipso facientis aut dantis animo: animus est enim qui beneficiis dat pretium.—Seneca.

Bene qui latuit, bene vixit.—Ovid.

Bene si amico feceris, ne pigeat fecisse.
—Plautus.

Benignus lumine.

Benignus etiam dandi causam cogitat.
—Publius Syrus.

Bibamus, moriendum est.—Seneca.

Bibliotheca.

Bis dat qui cito dat.

Bis peccare in bello non licet.

Bis pueri senes.

Bis vivit qui bene.

Bœotum in crasso jurares aere natum.
—Horace.

Bonâ-fide.

Bona opinio hominum tutior pecuniâ est.

Boni pastoris est tondere pecus non deglubere.—Suetonius.

Bonis nocet, quisquis pepercerit malis.
—Publius Syrus.

Bonis quod bene fit haud perit.
—Plautus.

Boritas non est pessimis esse meliorem.
—Seneca.

Bonus arator agricultione se oblectat, cultu sæpe defatigatur, culturâ ditescit.—Cicero.

Bonus atque fidus
Judex honestum prætulit utili.
—Horace.

A benefit consists not in that which is done or given, but in the spirit in which it is done or given; for it is the spirit in which a kindness is done, that makes it valued.

(He who has lived unknown to the world has lived well.) Who lives obscurely, lives securely.

If you have conferred a favour upon your friend, repent not of having done so.

By the favour of heaven; by the favour of Providence.

The benevolent man always seeks an excuse for charity.

(Let us drink, for die we must.) Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die.

A library.

He gives twice who gives in a trice.

To blunder twice is not allowed in war. (Old men are twice children.) Bodily and mentally.

Last stage of all is second childishness.—Shakespeare.

He lives twice who lives well.

You could swear it had its birth in Bœotia's sluggish air.*

In good faith.

A good name is better than riches.

(It is the duty of a good shepherd to shear his sheep, not to slay them.) Taxation should be imposed with due discretion.

He hurts the good who spares the bad.

(A benefit done to the good is never lost.) Cast thy bread upon the waters.

To be better than the worst, is not goodness.

(A good husbandman takes delight in agriculture; he is often wearied with his labours, but by culture he gets rich.) The labour we delight in physics pain.—Shakespeare.

A good and faithful judge prefers honesty to expediency.

* The damp air of Bœotia was supposed to be the cause of the dull wits of its inhabitants. Still the country produced Pindar and Epaminondas.

Bonus dux bonum reddit comitem.	(A good leader makes a good follower.)
Bos lassus fortius figit pedem.	A good master makes a good servant. (The tired ox treads surest.) Slow and sure wins the race.
Bovi clitellas imponere.	(To put a pack saddle on an ox.) To impose a duty on one not fit to discharge it.
Breve et irreparabile tempus vitæ est omnibus.— Virgil .	To everybody life is short, nor can it be recovered.
Breves haustus in philosophiâ ad Atheismum ducunt, largiores autem reducunt ad Deum.— Bacon .	Small draughts of knowledge lead men to Atheism, but deeper draughts bring them back to God.
Brevi manu.	With the short hand. Off-hand; summarily.
Brevis esse laboro, obscurus fio. — Horace .	In trying to be concise, I become obscure.*
Brutum fulmen.	(A harmless thunderbolt.) A vain menace. Empty vessels sound the loudest.
Cacoethes scribendi.	An itch for writing.
Cadit quæstio.	(The question falls to the ground.) There is an end of the discussion.
Cæsarem vehis et fortunam ejus.	You carry Cæsar and his fortunes.†
Cætera desunt.	(The remainder is wanting.) The rest (of the speech, poem, &c.) is wanting.
Cæteris paribus.	Other things being equal.
Calamitas virtutis occasio est.— Seneca .	(Misfortune is the test of a man's merit.) Calamity is a man's true touchstone. — Beaumont and Fletcher .
Callida junctura.	(Skilful or clever joining of literary composition.) Cunning workmanship.
Calumniare fortiter, et aliquid adhærebit.	(Slander stoutly, and something will stick.) Throw plenty of mud, and some of it will stick.
Camelus desiderans cornua etiam aures perdidit.	(The camel desiring horns, lost its ears as well.) Be thankful for small mercies.
Candida pax.	White-robed peace.
Candide et constanter.	Frankly and firmly.
Cane pejus et angue.	Worse than a dog or a snake.
Canes timidi vehementius latrant.	Timid dogs bark the loudest.
Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator. — Juvenal .	(The penniless wayfarer will sing before the robber.) The poor man has little to lose.

* So Mr. John Morley says of Tacitus, "Beyond almost anybody, he suffered from what a famous writer of aphorisms in our time has described as 'the cursed ambition to put a whole book into a page, a whole page into a phrase, and the phrase into a word.'"

† In 48 B.C. Julius Cæsar was caught in a squall, while sailing in a small vessel off the coast of Illyria. Tradition says that he encouraged the frightened pilot with the remarks given above.

- Capax imperii, nisi imperasset.
—Tacitus. He would have been thought capable of governing if he had never come to the throne.*
- Capias. (You may take.) A writ for arresting a debtor.
- Câpiat qui capere possit. (Let him take who can.)
The simple plan,
That they should take who have the power,
And they should keep who can.
- Captantes capti sumus. — Wordsworth.
(We catchers are caught.) The biter is bitten.
- * Caput mortuum. (A dead head.) The residuum left by a process of chemical analysis; a worthless person.
- Carendo discimus quam cara amiserimus. — Seneca. We learn the value of a thing when we have lost it.
- Carent quia vate sacro. (See Vixere fortes.) Because they lack the inspired poet's aid.
- Caret initio et fine. It wants both beginning and end.
- Caret periculo, qui etiam tutus cavet. — Publius Syrus. He is best secure from dangers who is on his guard, even when he seems safe.
- Cari sunt parentes, cari liberi, propinqui, familiares: sed omnes omnium caritates patria una complexa est; pro quâ quis bonus dubitet mortem oppetere, si ei sit profuturus? — Cicero. We love our parents, we love our children, our relatives, and our friends: but the love of our native land embraces all these affections: for his country, therefore, what good patriot would refuse to endure death, if, by so doing, he could confer any benefit upon it?
- Caritate, benevolentiaque sublata, omnis est e vitâ sublata jucunditas. — Cicero. When affection and kindly feeling are removed, all sweetness is taken away from life.
- Carpe diem quam minime credula postero. — Horace. (Enjoy the present day, trusting as little as possible to what the morrow may bring.)
- Cassis tutissima virtus. Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying. — Herrick.
- Castigat ridendo mores. (Virtue is the safest helmet.) An honest man has nothing to fear.
- Casus belli. (It corrects faults by laughing at them.)
When preaching has failed to reform a man, try a little ridicule.†
(An occasion for war.) Something that causes or justifies war.

* This is the verdict of Tacitus on the character of Galba, the Roman general who wrested the sovereign power from Nero, but was assassinated in A.D. 69, the fatal year that saw three Roman Emperors, all of whom met with a violent death. Galba had too many virtues and too few graces to make a successful ruler of a turbulent nation.

† The French poet Santeuil's description of the true function of comedy.

Catulæ dominas imitantes.	(Puppies imitating their mistresses.) High life below stairs.
Caudæ pilos equino paulatim oportet evellere	(You must pluck out the hairs of a horse's tail one by one.) Little strokes fell great oaks.
Causa causans.	(The cause that causes all other things.) The Great First Cause; the Supreme Being.
Causa latet, vis est notissima.— Ovid.	The cause is secret, but the effect is known.— Addison.
Caveat.	Let him take care, or look out.
Caveat emptor.	(Let the purchaser beware.) The buyer must take the risk.*
Cavendum est ne major poena quam culpa.— Cicero.	Care must be taken that the punish- ment does not exceed the crime.
Cave tibi cane muto et aquâ silente.	Be on your guard against a silent dog and still water.
Cedant arma togæ.— Cicero.	(Let arms yield to the gown.) Let military power yield to the civil authority.†
Celerius occidit festinata maturitas.	(Forced ripeness falls away more quickly.) Premature development of one's powers ends in an early grave.
Celsæ graviore casu decidunt turres.	(Lofty towers fall down with heavier crash.) The highest tree hath the greatest fall. Climb not too high, lest the fall be the greater.
Censor morum.	Censor of morals.
Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus asper.— Horace.	(The young man) is as wax to the bent of vice, but unbending to its re- provers.
Cernit omnia Deus vindex.	An avenging God marks all things.
Certa amittimus, dum incerta petimus. — Plautus.	We lose what is certain, while we pur- sue uncertainties.
Certamina divitiarum.— Horace.	Struggles of riches, or after wealth; to strive to be richer than others.
Certiorari.	(To be made more certain.) A writ to call up the records of an inferior court.
Certis rebus certa signa præcurrunt. — Cicero.	(Certain events are preceded by certain signs.) Coming events cast their shadows before.
Certum est quia impossibile est.	It is true, because it is impossible.‡
Certum voto pete finem.— Horace.	Seek to limit your desires.

* The law requires that the purchaser must show reasonable care, in buying anything, to find out that the vendor has the right to dispose of it. Otherwise, he has no legal title to the property bought.

† The toga was the garment worn by Roman citizens when taking part in any civil business. Hence it is frequently used in the sense of the civil, as opposed to the military authority.

Consuesse deos immortales, quo gravior homines ex commutatione rerum doleant, quos pro scelere eorum ulcisci velint, his secundo interdum res, et diuturniorem impunitatem concedere.—Cæsar.

The immortal gods, when they wish to punish some men for their sins, sometimes grant them prolonged prosperity and immunity from punishment, in order that when change of fortune comes upon them, they may feel remorse more keenly.

Consuetudinem benignitatis largitioni numerum longe antepono. Hæc est gravium hominum atque magnorum. Illa quasi assentatorum populi, multitudinis levitatem voluptate quasi titillantium.—Cicero.

I esteem a habit of benignity greatly preferable to munificence. The former is peculiar to great and distinguished persons; the latter belongs to flatterers of the people, who tickle the levity of the multitude with a kind of pleasure.

Consuetudo pro lege servatur.

(Custom is to be held as law.) Where there is no law on some point, it is to be decided by usage.

Consuetudo quasi altera natura.

Habit is, so to speak, second nature.

Coram nobis.

(Before us.) Before the court.

Coram non iudice.

(Before one who is not the judge.) Before an irregular tribunal.

* The Romans distinguished the years by the names of the consuls who held office in them. Plancus was consul in 42 B.C., when Horace was 23 years of age.

† The phrase is common in Virgil, who uses it rather in the sense of "an opportunity of speaking."

Coram populo.	In the presence of the people, publicly.*
Cornix cornici non effodit oculos.	(A crow does not peck out the eyes of a crow.) Dog does not eat dog.
Corpus delicti.	The whole body or nature of the offence.
Corpus sine pectore.	(A body without soul.) A human clod.

Crambe bis cocta, or repetita.	(Cabbage twice cooked, or served.) To harp on the same string; the same old story.
Cras ingens iterabimus æquor.	(To-morrow we shall resume our voyage o'er the mighty sea.) Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof.
Cras mihi.	My turn to-morrow.
Credat Judæus Apella.— Horace .	(Let the Jew Apella believe that.) Tell that to the marines.†
Crede Deo.	Trust to God.
Crede quod habes, et habes.	Believe you have it, and you have it.
Credite posteri.— Horace .	Believe it, future generations.
Creditur, ex medio quia res arcessit, habere sudoris minimum.— Horace .	To write on vulgar themes, is thought an easy task.
Credo quia absurdum est.	I believe it because it is so unlikely.
Credula res amor est.	(Love is a credulous thing.) Love sees no faults.
Credula vitam	Hope, ever confident, cherishes life, and
Spes fovet, ac melius cras fore semper ait.— Tibullus .	always tells to-morrow will be better.
Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.	(The love of money increases as fast as the money itself increases.) The more a man has, the more he desires to have.
Crescit eundo.	It increases as it goes.
Crescit sub pondere virtus.	(Virtue increases under a weight.) Oppression fosters manly determination.

* Horace uses the phrase, when he warns the would-be dramatist not to allow a murder to take place in sight of the audience. It was contrary to ancient usage to allow the representation of killing on the stage.

† The Jews were as unpopular among the Romans as they are in certain European countries to-day. The satirists showed them no mercy, and failing to comprehend their religious beliefs, accused them of gross superstition.

Cretâ an carbone notândi ?	(Are they to be marked with chalk or with charcoal ?) Are they wise men or fools ?

Crux criticorum.	The cross or puzzle of critics.
Crux mihi ancora.	The cross is my anchor.
Cucullus non facit monachum.	(The cowl does not make a monk.) Do not look at the coat, but at what is under the coat.
Cui bono ?	Who will be the better for it ? What good will it do ? *
Cui malo ?	Whom will it harm ?
Cui mens divinior, atque os Magna sonaturum, des nominis hujus honorem.— Horace .	On him confer the poet's sacred name, Whose lofty voice declares the heavenly flame.
Cui multum est piperis etiam oleribus immiscet.	He that has plenty of pepper can season his cabbage well.
Cui peccare licet, peccat minus.	If a man has it in his power to commit a sin, he is less inclined to do so.
Cujusvis hominis est errare, nullius nisi insipientis in errore perseverare. — Cicero .	Every man is liable to err, but it is only the part of a fool to persevere in his error.
Culpam poena premit comes.	Punishment presses hard upon the heels of guilt.
Cum diis volentibus.	With heaven's help.
Cum grano salis.	With a grain of salt ; with some reserve.
Cum multis aliis, quæ nunc præscribere longum est.	With many others, which it would be tedious to mention now.
Cum privilegio.	(With privilege or license.) A book published by leave of the authorities.
Cum vulpibus vulpinandum.	(When you are with foxes you must act like a fox.) Diamond cuts diamond.
Cunctando restituit rem.— Emmius .	By delay he saved the fortunes of the State.†
Cupido dominandi cunctis affectibus flagrantior.— Tacitus .	The desire of ruling is stronger than all other human feelings.
Curæ leves loquuntur, ingentes stupent. — Seneca .	(Slight griefs find utterance, but great ones are dumb.) The grief that does not speak Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.— Shakespeare .

Literally, "for whom for good." The meaning "what good will it do," is not strictly correct, but that is the sense which is usually attached to the phrase.

† This praise was given to Quintus Fabius Maximus, who saved his country by avoiding a pitched battle with Hannibal. The phrase is now usually applied to those who get the better of their opponents by the exercise of sagacity and caution.

Cura pii Dis sunt.	The good are Heaven's care.
Curia pauperibus clausa est.— Ovid.	Parliament keeps its doors closed to the poor man.
Cur in theatrum, Cato, severe venisti?	(Why have you come to the theatre, Cato, with such a solemn face? (Sour looks are out of place in scenes of mirth.

Da spatium tenuemque moram: male cuncta ministrat impetus.— Statius.	Take time for consideration in all matters; too much haste ill serves the progress of any business.
Data.	Things granted; statements that have been acknowledged to be true.

* This is the criticism of Petronius on the style of Horace, denoting that the latter understood the truth of ars est celare artem. The words are now generally translated "a curious felicity," but this is not precisely their original meaning.

Dat Deus inimiti cornua curta bovi.

(To the fierce ox, God gives short horns.)
God sends a curst cow short horns.*
—Shakespeare.

Date obolum Belisario.

Give a farthing to Belisarius.†

Dat Galenus opes; dat Justinianus honores.

(Galen gives riches; Justinian gives honours.) Physicians acquire wealth. Lawyers attain high rank.

Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.—Juvenal.

(The doves are censured, while the crows are spared.) The guilty are left in peace, but the innocent are persecuted.

Davus sum, non Œdipus.

(I am Davus, not Œdipus.) I am a poor, uninstructed, plain man, not a genius. You have applied to the wrong person—I can't help you.‡

De alieno corio liberalis.

(To cut large thongs from another man's leather.) To be very liberal out of another man's pocket.

De asini umbrâ disceptare.

(To dispute about an ass's shadow.) Little things attract light minds.

Debitum naturæ.

The debt of nature; death.

Decies repetita placebit.

(Though ten times repeated, it will please.) A good story cannot be too often told.

Decipimur specie recti.—Horace.

(We are deceived by the appearance of what is right.) Fair appearances are necessary to the purposes of deception.

Decipit frons prima multos.

(The first appearance deceives many.) We must eat a peck of salt with a man before we know him.

Decori decus addit avito.

He adds glory to the glory of his ancestors.

Decus et tutamen.

Honour and protection.

Dedecus ille domus sciet ultimus.
—Juvenal.

The master of the house will be last to know the disgrace that has befallen him.

De die in diem.

From day to day.

Dediscit animus sero, quod didicit diu.
—Seneca.

(The mind is slow to forget what it has been a long time learning.) Habit is second nature.

De duobus malis, minus est semper eligendum.—Thomas à Kempis.

Of two evils always choose the least.

De facto.

In fact, in reality.

De fide et officio judicis non recipitur quæstio.

(No question is allowed concerning the good intention and duty of the judge.) It is illegal to suggest that a judge is administering the law unfairly, unless undoubted proof exists.

* Sterne expresses the reverse of this idea in "He tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."
† The great general, Belisarius, in his old age was neglected and allowed to beg in the streets by the Emperor Justinian. Gibbon denies the story, but it is useful to point a moral.
‡ Davus was the usual name given to the faithful slave in Roman comedies, a character much resembling Shakespeare's clowns.

De fumo in flammam.	(Out of the smoke into the flame.) Out of the frying-pan into the fire.
Degeneres animos timor arguit. — Virgil .	Fear convicts degenerate souls.
De gustibus non est disputandum.	(There is no disputing about tastes.) Everyone to his liking.
Dei gratiâ.	By the grace of God.
Dei memor, gratus amicis.	Mindful of my God and grateful to my friends.
De jure.	By right in law.
De lanâ caprinâ rixari.	(To wrangle about goat's wool.) To split straws.
Dele.	Erase.
Delectando pariterque monendo.	By pleasing while instructing. Omne tulit, &c.
Delenda est Carthago.	Carthage must be destroyed.*
Deliberandum est diu, quod statuum dum semel.	What can be decided only once, should be long pondered over.
Deliberat Roma, perit Saguntum.	(Rome deliberates, Saguntum perishes.) While the doctors are deliberating the patient dies.†
Delirium tremens.	(Trembling delirium.) The delirium with trembling, a brain disease of great drunkards.
Delphinum natare doces.	(You are giving swimming lessons to a dolphin.) You are teaching your granny to suck eggs.
De lunatico inquirendo.	A writ to a commission to inquire whether a person is or is not a lunatic.
De male quaesitis gaudet non tertius hæres.	(A third heir seldom enjoys property dishonestly got.) Ill gains go apace.
Deme supercilio nubem.	Remove the cloud from your brow; smooth out those wrinkles.
De minimis non curat lex.	The law does not regard trifles.
Demitto auriculas ut iniquæ mentis asellus. — Horace .	I make my ears droop, like an ass of a stubborn disposition.
De mortuis nil nisi bonum.	(Of the dead nothing but good.) Let nothing be said of the dead but good.‡
Denique cœlum.	Heaven at last.§
De non apparentibus et de non existentibus eadem est ratio.	(The reasoning is the same as to things that are not seen, and things that do not exist.) What is not apparent must be considered as non-existent.

* This was the constant advice of Cato the Elder to the Roman Senate. The destruction of Carthage and Corinth, her two great commercial rivals, are considered to be Rome's worst political crimes. The words are now used to signify a war fought out to the bitter end. Carthage was destroyed in the year 147 B.C.

De novo.	Anew ; afresh.
Deo dignus vindice nodus.	A knot worthy of a god to undo it ; a supreme difficulty.*
Deo duce, ferro comitante.	God being my leader, and my sword my companion.
Deo et regi fidelis.	Loyal to God and my sovereign.
Deo favente.	With God's favour.
Deo gr̃atias.	Thanks to God.
De omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis.	Concerning everything and other matters.†
De omni re scibili et quibusdam aliis. •	Concerning every known thing and a few things in addition.
Deo, non fortunâ.	From God, not fortune.
Deo, patriæ, amicis.	For my God, my country, and my friends.
Deo volente (D. V.)	God being willing.
De paupertate tacentes plus poscente ferent.—Horace.	(They who are silent concerning their poverty will receive more than those who beg.)‡
De pilo pendet.	(It hangs by a hair.) The affair is in a critical condition.§
Deprendi miserum est.—Horace.	It is wretched to be found out.
De profundis.	Out of the depths.
De quibus certus es, loquere opportune.	Speak at the right moment, and on those subjects that you are master of.
De quibus ignoras tace.	Hold your tongue about things that you know nothing about.
Desideratum (pl. desiderata).	A thing desired, much wanted.
Desine fata deûm flecti sperare precando.—Virgil.	Cease to think that prayers can alter the fixed decrees of Heaven.
Desinit in piscem mulier formosa superne.—Horace.	(A woman beautiful above, ends in the tail of a fish.) A bad literary style presents similar incongruities.
Desipere in loco.	To unbend on occasion.
Districtus ensiscui super impiâ Cervice pendet, non Siculæ dapes Dulcem elaborabunt saporem, Non avium citharæque cantus Somnum reducent.—Horace.	Sicilian dainties will have no delightful flavour for the man over whose impious neck ever hangs the naked sword ; the songs of birds and of the lyre will not restore his sleep.
Desuetudo omnibus pigritiam, pigritia veterum parit.—Apuleius.	Dis-use produces sloth, and sloth incapacity.
Desunt cætera.	The remainder is wanting ; the quotation is incomplete.
Desunt inopiæ multa, avaritiæ omnia.	The poor man needs much, the miser desires everything.

We are all the worse for uncontrolled liberty of action.

To detract anything from another, and for one man to multiply his own conveniences by the inconveniences of another, is more against nature than death, than poverty, than pain, and the other things which can befall the body, or external circumstances.

Let it be given to the most deserving.

Let it be given to the fairest.

Worship God and serve the king.

(A god or a beast.) The nature of man is either godlike or bestial.*

There is a God who rules all things.

God is the chief good.

(A god out of a machine.) A person or thing that saves the situation in a crisis.†

God is the pilot of the ship.

God made us these comforts.

God will provide.

When the life of a man is at stake, no delay is too long.

To shake hands as a pledge of confidence.

(Good words should be spoken on a good day.) The better the day, the better the deed.

Thou clearly knowest when to speak, and when to keep silent.

Report upon hearsay.

A word is enough to the wise man.‡

I have lost a day.§

Time assuages the griefs of men.

(A day given.) The day appointed for hearing a law-suit.

A lucky day.

An unlucky day.

The day of wrath.||

(A day on which judges do not sit.)

A day on which legal proceedings cannot be taken.

* One of the dicta of Aristotle.

Domino (or. Deo) Optimo maximo (D.O.M.).	To the Lord God, the supreme and mighty ruler of the world.*
Dominus illuminatio mea.	The Lord is my light.
Dominus providebit.	The Lord will provide.
Dominus videt plurimum in rebus suis.	The master has the keenest eye in his own affairs.
Domus et placens uxor.	A house and pleasing wife.
Donec eris felix, multos numerabis amicos :	While you are prosperous you will have plenty of friends ; but when your sky is cloudy, you will be left to yourself.
Tempora si fuerint nubila, solus eris. — Ovid.	(He gave or gives, presents, dedicates.) An inscription often written in pre- sentation books before the name of the giver.
Dono dedit or Dat, donat, dicat.	(He who has no anxious duties, sleeps well.) Far from court, far from care.
Dormit secure, cui non est functio curae.	The virtue of parents is a great dowry. (The persons of the drama.) The characters.
Dos est magna parentium virtus.	(To ride at two anchors. To be in har- bour.) To have two strings to one's bow.
Dramatis personæ.	(To sit in two saddles.) To hold with the hare and run with the hounds. To play a double game.
Duabus ancoris fultus	The love of country leads me.
Duabus niti ancoris.	War is magnificent to those who never tried it.
Duabus sellis sedere.	(Sweet homeward.)†
Ducit amor patriæ.	(It is sweet to unbend on proper occa- sions.) To play the fool, to lay aside one's wisdom and gravity. A little nonsense now and then is relished by the wisest men.
Dulce bellum inexpertis.	It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country.
Dulce domum.	How bless'd is he who for his country dies,
Dulce est desipere in loco.-- Horace.	Since death pursues the coward as he flies ;
Dulce et decorum est pro patriâ mori.	The youth in vain would fly from fate's attack
Dulce et decorum est pro patriâ mori : Mors et fugacem persequitur virum, Nec parcat imbellis juventae Poplitibus timidoque tergo.-- Horace.	With trembling knees and terror at his back.— Swift.
Dulce quod utile.	What is useful is sweet.
Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, Dulce loquentem.— Horace.	I shall continue to love my sweetly smiling and sweetly speaking Lalage.

(Be merry while fate permits.) Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die.

As long as fortune lasted.

Time is flying while I speak.

(Provided he can raise a laugh, he will not spare the feelings of a friend.) Better waste your wit than lose your friend.

While I am reading my compositions over again, I am ashamed of having written them.

Whilst I breathe, I hope.

(Though they keep silence, they cry aloud.) Their silence speaks louder than words.

Work hard while you have youth and strength; for soon weak old age will creep on you with silent tread.

While there is life, there is hope.

(While striving to shun one vice, fools run into its opposite.) Fools are ever in extremes.

Whilst we live, let us live.

(When two persons do the same thing, it is not, the same thing.) No two persons do the same thing in an exactly similar manner.

Ecce signum.

Behold the sign; here is the proof.

Editio princeps.

A first edition of a book.

Effodiuntur opes irritamenta malorum.
—Ovid.

Riches, which are incentives to evil courses, are dug out of the ground.

E flammâ petere cibum.—Terence.

(To snatch food from the flames.) To be utterly desperate.†

Ego de caseo loquor, tu de cretâ respondes.

(I talk of cheese, and you of chalk.) We are at cross-purposes.

Ego et rex meus.

My king and I.

Ego illam periisse puto cui periit pudor.
—Plautus.

I consider the woman who has lost her modesty, lost indeed.

Egomet mihi ignosco.—Horace.

(I myself pardon myself.) I am on the best of terms with myself.

Ego nec studium sine divite venâ
Nec rude, quid possit, video ingenium:
alterius sic

I neither see what art can do without natural talent, nor natural talent without artistic training; each requires the aid of the other, and united they assist one another to reach the desired goal of success.

Altera poscit opem res, et conjurat amice.—Horace.

* The words of Pilate to the Jews at the trial of Christ. Hence pictures representing the Saviour wearing the crown of thorns, bear this title.

† The Romans used to throw food on the funeral pyres, where the bodies of the dead were burning. Only starving folk would be likely to wish for this food.

Ego spēm pretio non emo.— Terence.	(I am not giving cash for hopes.) No pig in a poke for me.
Ego sum rex Romanus et super grammaticam.	I am the king of the Romans, and am superior to rules of grammar.*
Egregii mortalis altique silenti.	A man of uncommon silence and reserve.
Eheu! fugaces labuntur anni!	Alas! the years glide fleeting by.
Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume, Labuntur anni; nec pietas moram Rugis et instanti senectæ Afferet, indomitæque morti.— Horace.	Alas! friend Postumus, the fleeting years glide away; nor will reverence towards the gods stay the advance of wrinkled old age, or of invincible death.
Ejusdem farinæ.	(Of the same flour.) Of the same kidney.
Ejusdem generis.	Of the same kind, or sort.
Elephantem ex muscâ facis.	(You are making an elephant out of a fly.) You are making a mountain out of a mole-hill.

Esse oportet ut vivas, non vivere ut edas.—Cicero.

We ought to eat in order to live, not live in order to eat.

Esse quam videri.

To be, rather than seem to be.

Est brevitate opus, ut currat sententia.
—Horace.

Let brevity dispatch the rapid thought.

Est deus in nobis.—Ovid.

(God is within us.) Ye are the temples of the Holy Ghost.

Est mihi namque domi pater, est injusta noverca.

For at home I have a father and an unjust stepmother.

Est modus in rebus; sunt certi denique

You, too, Brutus.*

To stake one's life on the truth.

(To put the same shoe on every foot.)
Every shoe fits not every foot.

(To succour the down-thrown age, or times.) To be a saviour of society.

No argument against the use of a thing can be drawn from the abuse of it.

Out of a heap.

From the opposite side ; in opposition.

* The traditional dying words of Cæsar, when Brutus stabbed him. There seems to be no real evidence that these words were ever spoken, and, like Wellington's "Up guards and at 'em," they belong to the category of things that ought to have been said.

An ass is known by his ears.

Out of one's head; from memory.

(From the chair.) With authority, real or supposed.*

Higher; aiming at higher achievements.

The exception proves the rule.

The due exceptions being made.

To be spirited, not inactive.

From what has been granted, or admitted (by an opponent).

A sally; a digression; a special disquisition.

By or from the gift of God.

(Let him depart.) The leave given for temporary absence from a school or college.

Let him who would be virtuous shun the courts of kings; for virtue and regal power seldom go hand in hand.

I have raised a monument more enduring than one of brass, and loftier than the pyramids of kings; a monument which shall not be destroyed by the consuming rain, nor by the mad rage of the north wind, nor by the countless years and flight of ages.†

(Study diligently the writings of the Greeks both day and night.) Give your days and nights to the Greek authors.

By way of example.

We live more by example than by reason.

(Every man is in a small degree the image of God.) God made man after his own image.

(Practice is the best master.) Practice makes perfect.

All retire.

Strong through faith.

(Many grains make a heap.) Every little helps.

* A cathedral is so called because it contains the cathedra, the throne, or official chair of the bishop of the diocese.

† Horace concludes the third book of his Odes with this proud prophecy of the permanent quality of his work, intending it to be his last word as a poet. He was afterwards induced to add a fourth book to the Odes.

According to the hypothesis; according to the supposition assumed to be true.

An orator is expected to have a poetic style of diction.

Small in number, but full of courage in war.

From that time the fortunes failed and took a backward course.

(The issue proves deeds.) All's well that ends well. The evening crowns the day.

From a great distance.

Of his own accord; spontaneously.

Nothing comes of nothing.*

By virtue of his office.

An introduction; the opening words.

May some avenger arise from my bones.†

On one side only.

(Hercules from his foot.) Judge of the whole from a part, as you can guess the size of Hercules from seeing only his foot.

Weigh the dust of Hannibal. How many pounds will you find in that great leader? ‡

Experience teaches.

Experience is the mistress of fools.

(The experiment or trial of the cross.) A bold and dangerous experiment.

(Trust one that has tried.) Believe one that has had experience.

(Having had experience, he feared it.) The burnt child dreads the fire.

Adversity tries men.

From something done afterwards; retrospective.

* The dictum of Lucretius, who, in his De Rerum Naturâ, declares the world to have been created by the fortuitous union of atoms falling from space.

† The poet puts these words into the mouth of Dido, the Carthaginian queen, who utters them when she is deserted by her lover, Æneas. Virgil thus makes the victories of Hannibal over the descendants of Æneas to be an act of poetic justice. These words have been quoted on many historic occasions. They were uttered by Diego Leon, the Spanish General, who was shot by order of Espartero in 1841, to the soldiers who carried out the execution. Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons also quoted these words with great effect in his notable speech on the Reform Bill of 1866.

(Every man is the architect of his own fortune.) Fortune helps those that help themselves.

Jests; witty and pleasant sayings.

(The powerful have long memories for jests.) Laugh with a king, but never at him.

(Your face shows your years.) There is no need to ask your age.

It is an easy task to rule good men.

(It is easy to add to things invented.) To improve an invention.

The acknowledged chief; an easy first. The descent to the nether world is easy, but to retrace one's steps thence and to regain the air above, this is the toil, this the laborious task.

(It is easier to add to a dignity when won, than it is to gain it in the first instance.) Nothing succeeds like success.

Guilt places on a level those whom it contaminates.

Facis de necessitate virtutem. — St. Jerome.	You are making a virtue of necessity.
Facit indignatio versum.	(Indignation produces the verse.) Anger makes even dull wits bright. Glowing coals sparkle oft.
Factotum.	A do-all, a general agent, servant, or deputy.
Fac ut sciam.	Tell me.
Fæx populi.	The dregs, scum, of the people.
Fallentis semita vitæ.— Horace.	(Path of declining days.) The course of an obscure, humble life.

Falsi crimen.	A charge of forgery.
Falsus in uno, falsus in omni.	False in one point, false in every point.
Famæ damna majora quam quæ aestimari possint.	(Injuries to reputation are too great to be estimated.)
	Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
	Is the immediate jewel of their souls. — Shakespeare.
Famæ laboranti non facile succurritur.	(It is not easy to repair a character when falling.) Give a dog a bad name and hang him.
Fama malum quo non aliud velocius ullum.— Virgil.	Nothing travels more swiftly than scandal.
Famam extendere factis.	To extend one's fame by deeds.
Fama semper vivit.	Fame lives for ever.
Fare, fac.	Speak and act.
Fare quæ sentias	Speak what you think.
Farrago libelli.	The hotch-potch, or miscellaneous contents of the little book.
Fasces.	A bundle of rods and an axe, carried before the highest Roman magistrates, and indicating their power to scourge and behead criminals.
Fasciculus.	A small bundle, packet, parcel.
Fas est ab hoste doceri.	It is allowable to learn even from an enemy.
Fata obstant.	(The Fates oppose.) The thing is impossible.
Fata volentem ducunt, nolentem trahunt.	The Fates lead the willing, and drag the unwilling.
Fatetur facinus, qui iudicium fugit.	He that shuns judgment acknowledges his crime.
Fato prudentia major.	Wisdom is stronger than fate.

Favete linguis.

(Favour with your tongues.) Avoid uttering any ill-omened word to interrupt the religious rite. Maintain a holy silence.

Fax mentis incendium gloriæ.

The passion of glory is the torch of the mind.

Felices sequeris, Mors, miseros fugis.

—Horace.

Thrice happy they, whom an indissoluble union binds together, and whom love, unimpaired by angry complainings, does not separate before the last day.

Felicitas habet multos amicos.

(Happiness has many friends.) In time of prosperity friends will be plenty.

Felicitè sapit, qui alieno periculo sapit.
—Plautus.

(That man gets experience in a pleasant fashion, who gains it from another's dangers.) Better learn fræ your neighbours' scathe than fræ your ain.

Feliciū multi cognati.

Rich people have many relations.

Felix est qui sorte suâ contentus vivit.

Happy is the man who lives content with his own lot.

Felix qui nihil debet.

(Happy he who owes nothing.) Out of debt, out of danger.

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere

Happy is the man who has been able to learn the causes of created things, and has put under his feet all fears and unyielding Fate, and has heeded not the noise of Death's devouring stream.

Felix se nescit amari.—Lucan.

(A prosperous man does not know that he possesses friends.) Adversity tests friendships.

Felo de se.

(A felon upon himself.) A suicide.

Feræ naturæ.

Of a wild nature.

Fere libenter homines id, quod volunt, credunt.—Cæsar.

People are generally willing to believe that a thing is true, when they wish it to be so.

Fere totus mundus exercet histrionem.

Feriant summos fulmina montes.

(Thunderbolts strike the tops of mountains.) Huge winds blow on high hills.

Ferrum ferro acuitur.

Iron sharpens iron

Fervet olla, vivit amicitia.

(While the pot boils, friendship endures.) The man who gives good dinners has plenty of friends.

Fervet opus.

The work thrives.

Fessus viator.

A weary traveller.

Festina lente.	(Hasten slowly.) Forward, but not too fast.*
Festinatio tarda est.	(Haste is slow.) The greater hurry the worse speed. He who is hasty fishes in an empty pond.
Fiat.	(Let it be done.) A peremptory order.
Fiat Dei voluntas.	God's will be done.
Fiat experimentum in corpore vili.	(Let the experiment be tried on a worthless body.) Try your skill in gilt first, and then in gold.
Fiat justitia ruat cœlum.	*Let justice be done though the heavens should fall.

Ficus ficus, ligonem ligonem vocat.	To hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure.— Shakespeare.
Fide abrogatâ, omnis humana societas tollitur.—Livy.	He calls figs figs, and a spade a spade.
Fide et amore.	If you abolish confidence between man and man, every human bond of union is broken.
Fide et fiduciâ.	By faith and love.
Fidei coticula crux.	By faith and confidence.
Fidei defensor (F.D.).	The cross is the touchstone of faith.
Fidelius ridet tuguria.	Defender of the Faith.
Fidem qui perdit perdere ultra nil potest.—Publius Syrus.	(The laughter in cottages is the most genuine.) Free from greatness, free from care.
Fide, non armis.	He who loses his good faith, has nothing further to lose.
Fides ante intellectum.	By faith, not by arms.
Fides et justitia.	(Faith before intellect or understanding.)
Fides non timet.	The pupil must accept without questioning his master's instructions.
Fides Punica.	Fidelity and justice.
Fides servanda est.	Faith has no fear.
Fides unde abiit, eo nunquam redit.	Punic (or Carthaginian) faith; treachery.†
—Publius Syrus.	We must keep our plighted word
	Trust, when once lost, never returns.

* A favourite maxim of Augustus Cæsar.

† The Romans were very fond of accusing the Carthaginians of perfidy, an accusation in which there appears to have been as little truth as there is in Perfide Albion, which our Gallic neighbours are pleased to apply to us.

Perhaps it may one day be a pleasure to remember these sufferings; bear up against them, and reserve yourself for more prosperous days.

Perhaps better days may be in store for the unfortunate.

(Pray for a strong will.) O well for him whose will is strong.—Tennyson.

Pray for a strong will, and a heart so fearless of death, that it will count the closing hours of life among the gifts of Nature.

Fortune helps the brave.

Nothing is difficult to the faithful and brave.

(More valiant is he that conquers himself than he that takes the most strongly fortified city.) He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city.

The brave may fall, but cannot yield.

A man of firm and courageous character ought not to be over-anxious in critical times, nor ought he to allow himself to be jostled and knocked off the step, as the saying goes.

Brave and trustworthy.

With firmness in action.

By fortitude and prudence.

Fortitude and Justice are invincible.

(I commit the rest to Fortune.) I cannot think of any better precautions or arrangements.

We have before us a person accused, who pleads guilty.

Books have their own destiny.

Habeo te loco parentis.

Habet.

Habet et musca splenem.

Habet in adversis auxilia, qui in secundis commodat.—Publius Syrus.

Habet natura ut aliarum omnium rerum sic vivendi modum; senectus autem peractio ætatis est tanquam fabulæ. Cujus defatigationem fugere debemus, præsertim adjunctâ satietate.

—Cicero.

Hac mercede placet.

Hæc olim meminisse juvabit.—Virgil.

Hæc studia adolescentiam agunt, senectutem oblectant, secundas res ornant, adversis perfugium ac solatium præbent, delectant domi, non impediunt foris, pernoctant nobiscum, peregrinantur, rusticantur.—Cicero.

Hæ nugæ in seria ducent mala.

—Horace.

Hærent infixi pectore vultus.—Virgil.

Hæret lateri lethalis arundo.

Hæreticis non est servanda fides.

Hæ tibi erunt artes; pacisque imponere morem,

Parcere subjectis et debellare superbos.—Virgil.

Hanc veniam petimusque damusque vicissim.—Horace.

Hannibal ad portas.

Haud facile emergunt, quorum virtutibus obstat,

Res angusta domi.—Juvenal.

I love or regard you as a parent.

He has it; he is hit.*

(A fly even has its anger.) Even a worm, will turn at last.

He who lends in the day of his prosperity, finds help in his day of adversity.

Life, as well as all other things, hath its bounds assigned by nature; and its conclusion, like the last act of a play, is old age, the fatigue of which we ought to shun, especially when our appetites are fully satisfied.

I am satisfied with these conditions.

To remember these things hereafter will be a pleasure.

These studies (literary pursuits) employ youth, give pleasure to old age, make prosperity more prosperous, are a refuge and a solace in sorrow, amuse us when at home, do not hinder us in our duties abroad, make our nights less lonely, and in our travels and sojournings are our constant companions.

These trifles will lead to serious evils.

Her looks were deep imprinted in his heart.

The deadly spear-shaft sticks to his side.

(No faith should be kept with heretics.)

That is, with such as claim to think on religious matters for themselves, and refuse the teaching of Roman Catholicism.

This will be thy task; to give the nations peace, to spare the humbled and crush the rebellious.†

(We grant this concession ourselves, and receive in return.) Give and take is a right policy to follow.

(Hannibal is at the gates.) We are in imminent danger.‡

(Those people do not easily emerge from obscurity whose abilities are cramped by narrow means at home.) Slow rises worth by poverty oppressed.

* The cry of the spectators when a gladiator received a fatal blow.

† In these words Virgil describes the imperial destiny of Rome.

‡ The name of Hannibal had been such a terror to the Romans, that Hannibal ad portas became a proverb indicating that the country was in peril. Cicero uses the words in one of his diatribes against Antony, whom he regarded as a public enemy.

Haud ignarâ mali, miseris succurrere disco.

Haud ignota loquor.

Haud passibus æquis.

Helluo librorum.

Heredis fletus sub personâ risus est.

Hæc quam difficile est crimen non pro dere vultu!—Ovid.

Hiatus valde desendus.

Hibernis ipsis Hiberniores.

Hic amor, hæc patria est.—Virgil.

Hic et ubique.

Hic finis fandi.

Hic funis nihil attraxit.

Hic jacet.

Hic murus æneus esto,
Nil conscire sibi, nullâ pallescere culpâ.

—Horace.

Hic niger est: hunc tu, Romane, caveto.—Horace.

Hic nigrae succus loliginis, hæc est erugo mera.—Horace.

Hic patet ingenii campus.—Claudian.

Hinc illæ lacrimæ.

Hinc subitæ mortes atque intestata senectus.—Juvenal.

Hirundinem sub eodem tecto ne habeas.

Hoc erat in votis.

Hoc est
Vivere bis, vitâ posse priore frui.

—Martial.

Hoc indictum volo.

Hoc maxime officii est, ut quisque maxime opis indigeat, ita ei potissimum opitulari.—Cicero.

Hoc opus, hic labor est.

Hoc sustinete, majus ne veniat malum.
—Phædrus.

Not ignorant of misfortune, I learn to succour the unfortunate.

I speak of well-known events.

Not with equal steps.

(A glutton of books.) A book-worm.
The weeping of an heir is laughter under a mask.

How in the looks does conscious guilt appear!—Addison.

A gap, or deficiency, much to be regretted.

More Irish than the Irish themselves.

My heart is there, for there's my native land.

Here, there, and everywhere.

Here was an end to the discourse.

(This line has taken no fish.) The attempt is a failure.

Here lies.

That man is a knave: Roman, beware of him.

This is the essence of malice, this is pure jealousy.

Here is a field open to talent.

Hence those tears.

(Hence arise sudden deaths, and an intestate old age.) The results of a profligate life.

(Do not have a swallow under the same roof.) Beware of fair-weather friends.

This was my wish.

The present joys of life we doubly taste, By looking back with pleasure to the past.

(I wish this unsaid.) I withdraw the statement.

(It is a most important duty to assist another most, when he most needs assistance.) A friend in need is a friend indeed.

This is the labour, this is the work; this is the great difficulty.

(Endure this evil, lest a greater come upon you). Better to bear the ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of.—Shakespeare.

* Sir Robert Walpole once misquoted these words in the House, and Pulteney wagered a guinea that Walpole's Latin was wrong. The clerk at the table decided in Pulteney's favour, and the guinea was promptly tossed across the floor of the House.

Hoc volo, sic jubeo, sit pro ratione voluntas.—Juvenal.

Hodie, non cras.

Hodie tibi, cras mihi.

Hominem non odi sed ejus vitia.

Homines ad deos nullâ re propius accedunt, quam salutem hominibus dando.—Cicero.

Homines amplius oculis quam auribus credunt.

Homines nihil agendo discunt malum agere.

Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.

Homo est sociale animal.—Seneca.

Homo extra est corpus suum quum irascitur.

Homo homini lupus.—Plautus.

Homo multarum literarum.

Homo proponit sed Deus disponit.

Homo, qui erranti comiter monstrat viam,

Quasi de suo lumine lumen accendat, facit

Nihilo minus ipsi lucet, cum illi accenderit.—Ennius.

Homo qui in homine calamitoso est miscricors meminit sui.

Homo sum; humani nihil a me alienum puto.—Terence.

Homo trium literarum.

Homunculi quanti sunt.—Plautus.

Honesta mors turpi vitâ potior.

Honesta paupertas prior quam opes make.

Honesta quam splendida.

Honora medicum propter necessitatem.

(I wish this, I order it, let my wish stand for reason.) The fact that I wish it is sufficient argument.

To-day not to-morrow; without procrastination.

Your turn to-day, mine to-morrow.

I hate not the man, but his faults.

Men resemble the gods in nothing so much as in doing good to their fellow-creatures.

Men trust their eyes more than their ears.

(By doing nothing, men learn to do ill.) Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do.

A learned man always has riches within himself.

(Man is a social animal.) Men were not intended to live alone.

A man when angry is beside himself.

(Man to man is a wolf.) Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn.—Burns.

A man of great learning.

Man proposes, God disposes.

He who shows the right path to one that has gone astray, lights, so to speak, the other's lantern from his own. Yet, though he has given light, his own doth still burn bright.

(A man who is merciful to the afflicted, remembers what is due to himself.) A touch of nature makes the whole world kin.

I am a man, and deem nothing that relates to man foreign to my feelings.

(A man of three letters.) A thief. Latin fur.

What an insignificant creature is man.

An honourable death is preferable to a base life.

(Poverty with honesty is better than ill-acquired wealth.) Honesty may be dear bought, but can never be a dear pennyworth.

Respectable things rather than splendid ones.

(Make much of a physician through necessity.) Honour a physician before thou hast need of him.

Honores mutant mores.*

Honor fidelitatis præmium.

Honos alit artes.

Memento cita mors venit, aut victoria læta.—Horace.

Honæscō referens.

Horribile dictu.

Hortus siccus.

Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter hon-ores.—Virgil.

Hostis honori invidia.

Hostis humani generis.

Humano capiti cervicem equinam jun-gere.

Humano capiti cervicem pictor equinam

Humanum est errare.

Humiles laborant, ubi potentes dissident.—Phædrus.

Hypotheses non fingo.

Ibidem (Ibid.)

Ibi omnis effusus labor.

Adprime in vita esse utile, ne quid nimis.—Terence.

Idem quod (i.g.)

Idem sonans.

Id est (i.e.).

Id genus omne.

Idoneus homo.

Honours alter manners.

Honour is the reward of loyalty.

Honour nourishes the arts.

In a moment's flight Death, or a joyful conquest, ends the fight.—Francis.

I shudder at the recollection.

Horrible to tell.

A collection of dried plants.

I wrote these versicles, another carried off the credit of them.*

Envy is the bane of honour.

An enemy of the human race.

To put a horse's head on a human body (said of a painter); out of character.

If in a picture, Piso, you should see
A handsome woman with a fish's tail,
Or a man's head upon a horse's neck,
Or limbs of beasts, of the most different kinds,

Cover'd with feathers of all sorts of birds;

Would you not laugh, and think the painter mad?

Trust me that book is as ridiculous,
Whose incoherent style, like sick men's dreams,

Varies all shapes, and mixes all extremes.
—Roscommon.

To err is human.

When the great quarrel, the lowly suffer.

(I do not frame hypotheses.) I make no suppositions; I concern myself solely with facts.

In the same place.

There all the labour was expended (or wasted).

(I take to be a principal rule of life, not to be too much addicted to any one thing.) Too much of anything is good for nothing.

The same as.

Sounding alike; having the same sound or meaning.

That is, that is to say.

All persons of that sort.

A fit man; a man of known ability.

* See Sic vos, non nobis.

Ignaviâ nemo immortalis factus; neque quisquam parens liberis ut æterni forent, optavit; magis ut boni honestique vitam exigerent.—Sallust.

Ignavis semper feriæ sunt.

Ignem ne gladio fodito.

Ignis aurum probat, miseria fortes viros
—Seneca.

Ignis fatuus.

Ignoramus.

Ignorantia legis neminem excusat.

Ignoratio elenchi.

Ignoscas aliis multa, nil tibi.

Ignoscito sæpe aliis, nunquam tibi.

Ignoti nulla cupido.

Ilum fuit.

Illam, quicquid agit, quoquo vestigia
flectit,
Componit furtim, subsequiturque decor.
—Tibullus.

Ille crucem pretium sceleris tulit, hic diadema!

Ille mi par esse Deo videtur,
Ille (si fas est) superare Divos,
Qui sedens adversus, identidem te Spectat et audit.

Dulce ridentem; misero quod omnes
Eripit sensus mihi, nam simul te,
Lesbia, adspexi, nihil est super mi.
—Catullus.

Ille potens sui

Lætusque deget, cui licet in diem Dixisse, 'Vixi.'—Horace.

Ille, velut pelagi rupes immota, resistit.
—Virgil.

Illi scelorum suorum conscientia cruciati poenas dabunt.

No man ever won undying fame by idleness: no parent has ever wished his children never to die, but rather, that they should employ their lives in a good and honourable manner.

(With idlers it is always holiday.) Doing nothing is hard work.

(Stir not the fire with the sword.) Put not fat into the fire.

As fire tests gold, so misery tests brave men.

Will-o'-the-wisp.

(We do not know.) A person who is always pleading ignorance. An ignorant fellow.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

(Ignorance of the refutation.) Missing the point of the argument; arguing outside the case.

Forgive many things to others, nothing to thyself.

Forgive others often, thyself never.

(No desire is felt for a thing unknown.) Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise.

Troy has existed, but exists no longer.

Whate'er she does, where'er her steps she bends,

Grace on each action silently attends.

One man receives crucifixion as the reward of his guilt; another, a crown

Peer for the gods he seems to me

And mightier, if that may be,

Who, sitting face to face with thee,

Can there serenely gaze;

Can hear thee sweetly speak the while,

Can see thee, Lesbia, sweetly smile,

Joys that from me my senses wile,

And leave me in a maze.

—Martin.

Happy he

Self-centred, who each night can say,

My life is lived.—Conington.

He, like a rock that billows vainly buffet, stood firm.

(Those who are tortured by the consciousness of guilt will soon be punished.)

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.—Shakespeare.

Illotis pedibus ingredi.

(To enter with unwashed feet.) To enter a shrine in that state. To treat holy things with scorn.

Illud maxime rarum genus est eorum, qui aut excellenti ingenii magnitudine, aut præclarâ eruditione atque doctrinâ, aut utrâque re ornati, spatium deliberandi habuerint, quem potissimum vitæ cursum sequi vellent.

— Cicero.

The number is especially small of those, who, either by surpassing genius, or by remarkable erudition and knowledge, or by being endowed with either, have enjoyed the opportunity of deciding what path of life they prefer to follow.

Illuminati.

Enlightened ones; scholars.

Imitatores, servum pecus.

Servile herd of imitators.

Immensa est finemque potentia coeli. Non habet, et quicquid Superi voluere, peractum est.—Ovid.

The power of heaven is immense and without limit, and whatever the heavenly powers wish, comes to pass.

Immersabilis est vera virtus.

True virtue cannot be overwhelmed.

Imo pectore.

From the lowest breast; from the bottom of one's heart.

Impedimenta.

Things which impede us; luggage; baggage.

Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique.

Money is always either our master or our slave.

Imperator.

Military commander; Emperor.

Imperium et libertas.

Empire and liberty.*

Imperium in imperio.

A government within a government.

Imperium Trajani, rarâ temporum felicitate, ubi sentire quæ velis, et quæ sentias dicere licet.—Tacitus.

The reign of Trajan, those rare and happy days, when you may think what you please, and say what you think.

Impotens sui.

(Without power over one's self.) Without self-control; passionate.

Imprimatur.

(Let it be printed.) Authority to publish; approval; assent.

Imprimis.

In the first place.

Impune.

With impunity.

In actu.

In the very act.

In ære piscari; in mare venari.

(To fish in the air; to hunt in the sea.) Fish are not to be caught with a bird-call.

In æternum.

For ever.

In amore hæc omnia insunt vitia, injuriæ,

In love are all these ills: suspicions, quarrels,

Suspiciones, inimicitia, inducia, Bellum, pax rursus.—Terence.

Wrongs, reconcilements, war and peace again.—Coleman.

In angustiis amici apparent.

Adversity trieth friends.

In arduis virtus.

Virtue in difficulties.

In articulo mortis.

At the point of death.

In banco.

(In bench.) A judge sitting in banco, in court, not in chambers.

In bello parvis momentis magni casus intercedunt.—Cæsar.

In war, important events are the results of trivial causes.

* One of Lord Beaconsfield's famous expressions.

In caducum parietem inclinaræ.	(To lean against a falling wall.) Lean not on a reed.
In camerâ.	In chamber; in private.
In capite.	In the head; in chief.
Incerta pro certis deputas.	(You reckon the uncertain as certain.) Don't count your chickens before they are hatched.
Incessu patuit dea.	Her stately walk showed her to be a goddess.
Incidis in Scyllam cupiens vitare Charybdim.	(You fall into Scylla in endeavouring to escape Charybdis.) Out of the frying-pan into the fire.*
Incipe; dimidium facti est, cœpisse. Supersit	Begin; to have begun makes the work half done. Half still remains; again
Dimidium: rursum hoc incipe, et efficies.— Ausonius .	begin this, and you will complete the task.
Incipit effari, mediâque in voce resistit. — Virgil	He begins to speak, but breaks off in the midst of his words.
In cœlo quies.	There is rest in heaven.
In commendam.	In trust for a time.
Increduli odimus.	We are sceptical about it and detest the subject.
Incudi reddere.— Horace .	(To return to the anvil.) To reconsider and repolish a literary composition.
Inde iræ.	Hence this anger.
Index expurgatorius.	A list of prohibited books.†
Index rerum.	A student's note-book, or catalogue of reference.
In diem (or In horam) vivere.	To live for the day, or the hour; from hand to mouth.
Indocilis pauperiem pati.	A man who has not learnt to endure poverty.
In eâdem conditione.	In the same condition or category; under the same circumstances.
In eâdem re utilitas et turpitudine esse non potest.— Cicero .	It is impossible for the same conduct to be both expedient and dishonourable.
In equilibrio.	Equally balanced.
In esse.	(In being.) In a state of existence.
Inest et formicæ bilis.	(Even an ant has a temper.) Even a worm will turn.
Inest sua gratia parvis.	(Little things have their value.) Trifles are not to be despised.
In extenso.	(In full.) Without abridgment.
In extremis.	In extreme difficulties; at the last gasp.

* The line of some mediæval writer founded on the account in The Odyssey, where Scylla, the rock dwelling of a hideous monster, and Charybdis, a dangerous whirlpool, threatened danger to the ship of Ulysses and his companions. These prodigies were supposed to exist near the Straits of Messina.

† The record of the books forbidden to be read by loyal Roman Catholics is so-called. M. Zola's Rome, for example, was recently added to this list by the Pope's advisers.

Infandum, regina , jubes renovare dolorem.— Virgil .	(You command me, O queen, to renew an unspeakable grief.) Said by Æneas, with reference to the destruction of Troy, when requested by Dido to relate the history of the downfall of that city.*
In flagrante delicto.	Taken in the act of committing the offence; red-handed.
In flammam flammam, in mare fundis aquas.	(You are adding flame to the flames, and water to the sea.) You are carrying coals to Newcastle.
In flammam ne manum injicito.	(Thrust not your hand into the fire.) Don't run into danger with your eyes open.
In fore.	In prospective.
In formā pauperis.	(As a pauper.) A term applied to the privilege, whereby a man, without means, can obtain the aid of the law.
In foro conscientię.	Before the tribunal of conscience.
Infra dignitatem (Infra dig.).	Beneath one's dignity.
Infra tuam pelliculam te contine.	(Content yourself with your own skin.) Do not imitate the ass that puts on the lion's skin.
In futuro.	In the future.
Ingens æquor.	The mighty ocean.
Ingens telum necessitas.	Necessity is a powerful weapon.
Ingentum foribus domus alta superbis Mane salutantum totis vomit ædibus undam.— Virgil .	His lordship's palace view, whose portals proud Each morning vomit forth a cringing crowd.— Hartton .†
Ingenuas didicisse fideliter artes emollit mores, nec sinit esse feros.— Orat.	Faithful study of the liberal arts softens men's manners and polishes their minds.
Ingratum si dixeris, omnia dicis.	(If you say he is ungrateful you say everything.) Gratitude is the least of virtues, but ingratitude the worst of vices.
Ingratus unus miseris omnibus nocet.	One ungrateful man does an injury to all the wretched.
In gremio legis.	In the lap (or bos-om) of the law.
In hoc signo spes mea.	In this sign is my hope.
In hoc signo vinces.	In this sign thou shalt conquer.‡
Inhumanum verbum est ultio. — Seneca .	Revenge is an inhuman word.
In infinito.	Perpetually.
In initio.	In the beginning.

* Quoted by a Westminster boy to Queen Elizabeth, when she asked him how he liked a birching.

† The poor Roman called on his rich patron every morning, and received a dole for his trouble.

‡ The Emperor Constantine is said to have had a vision of a fiery cross, with these words below, crux vixit, appearing in the sky. Tradition says that this circumstance led to his conversion to Christianity.

Iniquissimam pacem justissimo bello antefero.

Injuriae addis contumeliam.

Injuriam qui facturus est jam facit.

—Seneca.

Injuriarum remedium est oblivio.

—Publius Syrus.

In limine

In loco parentis.

In magnis et voluisse sat est.

—Propertius.

In mari aquam quærit.

In medias res.

In mediis rebus.

In medio tutissimus ibis.—Ovid.

In mortuâ manu.

In necessariis unitas, in dubiis libertas, in omnibus caritas.

In nocte consilium.

In nubibus.

In nullum avarus bonus est, in se pessimus.

In occipitio quoque oculos habet.

In oculis civium.

In omni labore emolumentum est.

Inopi beneficium bis dat qui dat celeriter.

Inops, potentem dum vult imitari,

In otio et negotio probus.

In ovo.

In pace leones sæpe in prælio cervi sunt.

In partibus infidelium.

In perpetuam rei memoriam.

In perpetuum.

I prefer the hardest terms, of peace to the most just war.

You add insult to injury.

He who is about to commit an injury has committed it already.

The best remedy for injuries is to forget them.

At the threshold.

In the place of a parent.

(In great enterprises to have attempted is enough.)

The virtue lies

In the struggle, not the prize.

—Monckton Milnes.

(He is looking for water in the sea.)
None so blind as those who will not see.

Into the midst of things.

In the midst of things; in the very heart of the business.

Safety lies in a middle course.

(In a dead hand.)*

Unity in things necessary, liberty in things doubtful, charity in everything.†

(In the night is counsel.) Night is the mother of thought.

In the clouds; befogged.

The avaricious man is good to no one,
but he is worst to himself.

(He has an eye in the back of his head.)
He has an eye behind him; he is a wary fellow.

In the eyes of citizens; in the public eye; in public.

There is profit in all labour.

He who gives quickly to a poor man confers a double benefit on him.

The poor man, who tries to imitate the powerful, is lost.

(Upright in business and out of business.) Upright in every relation of life.

In the egg; in the inception.

Lions in peace are often deer in war.

In infidel (i.e., not Roman Catholic) countries.

In perpetual memory of the affair.

In perpetuity; for ever.

* Property left to ecclesiastical bodies in mediæval times was so called, being inalienable.

† A saying generally attributed to St. Augustine, but not to be found in his extant writings.

In pontificali.	In pontificals; in episcopal robes.
In posse.	In a state of possible existence.
In presenti.	At the present time.
In pretio pretium nunc est; dat census honores,	Money is now the most prized thing; a good income can buy both lofty rank and friends, while the poor man is everywhere despised.
Census amicitias: pauper ubique jacet.
—Ovid.
In primoribus habent, ut aiunt, labris	They have it, to use the common expression, on the tip of their tongue.
—Cicero.
In procinctu.	(In readiness.) With loins girded.

In se magna ruunt.	Great things rush against each other.
Insignia.	Distinguishing marks or badges of rank or honour.
In silvam ligna ferre.	(To carry wood to the forest.) To carry coals to Newcastle.
Insita hominibus natura violentiæ resistere.—Tacitus.	It is by nature implanted in man to resist oppression.
In situ.	In the situation; in position; at rest.
In statu pupillari.	In the position of a pupil.
In statu quo.	In the former position.
In statu quo ante bellum.	In the same state, posture, or position, as before the war.
In te, Domine, speravi.	In Thee, O Lord, have I trusted.
Integer vitæ scelerisque purus	A man of upright life, and pure from guilt, needs no weapon to defend him.
Non eget arcu.—Horace.
Integra mens augustissima possessio.	Integrity is the noblest possession.
Intemperans adolescentia effetum corpus tradet senectuti.	An intemperate youth will hand down to old age a worn-out body.
In tenebris.	In darkness.
Inter alia.	Among other things.
Inter arma leges silent.	In the midst of arms the laws are silent.
Inter duas sellas, decidium.	Between two stools one falls to the ground.
Interdum et insanire jucundum est.	It is pleasant to play the fool (to relax one's gravity) at times. Dulce est desipere, &c.

Interdum lacrimæ pondera vocis habent.—Ovid.

(Sometimes tears have the weight of words.) Tears are sometimes more eloquent than word.

Interdum speciosa locis, morataque recte

When the sentiments and manners please,

Fabula nullius veneris, sine pondere et arte,

And all the characters are wrought with ease,

Valdius oblectat populum, meliusque moratur,

Your tale, though void of beauty, force, and art,

More strongly shall delight, and warm the heart;

Than where a lifeless pomp of verse appears,

And with sonorous trifles charms our ears.—Francis.

Interdum stultus bene loquitur.

Even a fool sometimes speaks sense.

Interdum vulgus rectum videt, est ubi peccat.—Horace

Sometimes the common people see aright; sometimes they err.

Inter ignes Luna minores.—Horace.

(As shines) the moon among the lesser stars.

Interim.

In the meanwhile.

Inter malleum et incudem.

(Between the hammer and the anvil.) Between the devil and the deep sea.

Inter nos.

Between ourselves.

Inter pocula.

Between cups; over a glass.

Interregnum.

The time between two reigns.

In terrorem.

As a warning.

Inter silvas academi quærere verum.

To search for truth in academic groves.*

—Horace.

In toto.

In the whole; entirely.

In transitu.

In course of transit.

Intra verba peccare.

To offend in words only.

(To swear by) the words of a master. ']

I rejoice in truth.

I remain unconquered.

They envy the distinction I have won;
let them, therefore, envy my toils, my honesty, and the dangers I have undergone; for these were the methods by which I gained it.

(There is truth in wine; truth is told under the influence of wine.)
Drunken folk often speak the truth.

Unpopular governments are never abiding.

(Minerva being unwilling.) Against one's humour, or inclination; without inspiration.

Virtue is its own reward.

Knowledge is power.

(He the master himself, said it.) An authoritative assertion; dogmatism.

(He sings about himself.) He blows his own trumpet.

The very words.

(By the fact or deed itself.) Obvious from the facts of the case.

(By the law itself.) By unquestioned right.

The man who restrains his anger, overcomes his greatest foe.

Angry and huge.

Anger is brief madness.

He that overcomes his anger, conquers his greatest enemy.

(Their anger and words they let out on hire.) Eloquence is the stock-in-trade of the legal advocate.

(A word that cannot be called back.)
The spoken word cannot be recalled.

(You will irritate the hornets.) You will bring a hornets' nest about your ears.

To be mindful of his duty, is the highest honour of an upright man.

He seems to me the greatest man, who attains a position of eminence by his own merits.

That is true wisdom, to know how to alter one's mind when occasion demands it.

Such is the law.

Ha me Dii ament, ubi sim nescio.

—Terence.

Ita sit sane.

Itē missa est.

Lord love me, if I know where I am.

Granted; let it be so.

The die is cast.

(Everyone now declares that the man who is far removed from their sight, is also far removed from their thoughts.) Out of sight, out of mind.

(Now I have finished a work, which neither Jove's anger, nor fire, nor sword, nor devouring time can destroy.)*

A porter; door-keeper; gate-keeper. Gates of the mind; entrances for (or sources of) knowledge.

With closed doors.

(A hungry stomach seldom scorns plain food.) Hunger is the best sauce.

Jesus, the Saviour of mankind.

The remembrance of difficulties overcome is delightful.

The judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted.

It is the duty of a judge to consider not only what he has the power to do, but, also, what is his duty.

(To stab the dead.) To show fiendish cruelty.

(Things when joined aid each other.) Union is strength.

Young men for labours; the burden is for young shoulders.

(Jove, in heaven, laughs at lovers' perjuries.)

At lovers' perjuries they say Jove laughs.
—Shakespeare.

(The laws respect the private house.) A man's house is his castle.

To swear and to break one's oath.

To swear to the words of a master; to say ditto to one.

(I have sworn with my tongue, but I have a mind unsworn.) I feel no constraint to perform my oath.†

By divine law

By human law.

War gives this right, that the conquerors may impose any conditions they please upon those who are vanquished.

Civil law.

The law and rule of speaking; ordinary usage.

Law of nations.

The rigour of the law is often the hardest injustice.

Honour and fidelity are the basis of justice.

Justice consists in doing no injury to men; decency in giving them no offence.

Faith is the sister of justice.

Justice is the foundation of kingdoms.

There is no justice in it.

The man who is just and firm of purpose is not moved by the zeal of his fellow-citizens when they urge him to evil courses, nor does the lowering brow and threats of a despot shake him from his rock-like resolve.*

He is carrying coals to Newcastle.

It rolls, and rolls, and will for ever roll.

(Time is winged and glides from us, though we see and heed it not. Nothing is swifter than the flight of years.)

Old age creeps on us, ere we think it nigh.—Dryden.

(To work is to pray.) He preaches best that lives well.

(Toil also is real pleasure.)

The labour we delight in physics pain.
—Shakespeare.

(The prolonged labour of the file.) The tedious labour of correcting literary work.

Labour overcomes all obstacles.

Sweet solace of toils.

Becoming sorrows and a virtuous mind
More lovely in a beauteous form enshrined.

(It is just that every man should measure himself according to his own measure or standard.) A man ought to know his own limitations.

Mine and thine.

It seems to me that death is always untimely and premature when it comes to those men who are engaged on some immortal work. For those who live from day to day entirely given over to pleasure, terminate the purpose of their life with the close of each day: but those who think of posterity, and strive to win an undying fame by good works, to such death is always premature, for it cuts them off in the midst of some task that they have undertaken.

Motu proprio.	Of his own accord.
Mucrone suo se jugulat.	(He kills himself with his own sword.) • He makes a rod for his own back.
Mugitus labyrinthi.	(The roaring of the labyrinth.) The vapouring of an inferior poet.*
Mulier cupido quod dicit amanti, In vento et rapidâ scribere oportet aquâ.— Catullus .	The vows that woman makes to her fond lover, ought to be written on the wind and swiftly-flowing stream.
Multi cadunt inter calicem supremaque labra.	There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip.
Multi docet fames.	Hunger teaches many lessons.
Multi gemens.	With many a groan.
Multi petentibus multi desunt.	(Those who ask much, lack much.) Much would have more.
Multi tui fecique.	Much have I suffered and done.
Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit. — Horace .	He died bewailed by many good men.
Multis terribilis, caveto multos. — Ausonius .	If many fear you beware of many.
Multitudo medicorum certa mors est ægrotantium.	(Too many doctors mean certain death to those who are sick.) Too many cooks spoil the broth.
Multorum manibus grande levatur opus.	Many hands make labour light.
Multos in summa pericula misit Venturi timor ipse mali.— Lucan .	The very apprehension of an impending evil has placed many in the greatest peril.
Multum facit qui multum diligit. — Thomas à Kempis .	Who loveth much, doeth much.
Multum in parvo.	Much in little; a great deal in a small compass.
Mundus vult decipi, et decipiatur.	The world wishes to be deceived, and let it be deceived.
Murus æneus conscientia sana.	A sound conscience is a wall of brass.
Mutare vel timere sperno.	I scorn to change or to fear.
Mutatis mutandis.	The necessary changes being made.
Mutato nomine.	Under a changed name.
Mutato nomine de te fabula narratur.	Change the name, and the story applies to yourself.
Mutum est pictura poema.— Horace .	A picture is a poem without words.

I think that man is lost indeed how, has lost the sense of shame.

History ought not to exceed the bounds of truth.

For it is stupidity to kick against the pricks.

(It is never too late to choose the path of virtue.) It is never too late to mend.

For your interests are concerned when your neighbour's house is on fire.

* The motto of Louis XIV. of France.

Nemo fit fato nocens.— Seneca .	Fate never drives a man to commit a crime.
Nemo liber est, qui corpori servit. — Seneca .	No one who is a slave to his body, is truly free.
Nemo malus felix.	(No bad man is happy.) There is no peace unto the wicked.
Nemo me impune lacesset.	No one will attack me with impunity.
Nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit. — Pliny .	No mortal is wise at all times.
Nemo potest nudo vestimenta detrāhere.	(No man can strip a naked man of his garment.) Blood cannot be got out of a stone.
Nemo repente fuit turpissimus. — Juvenal .	No man ever became a villain all at once.
Nemo sine vitiis nascitur.	(Nobody is born without sins.) Every man has his faults.
Nemo solus satis sapit.— Plautus .	(Nobody is wise by himself.) Two heads are better than one. In a multitude of counsellors is safety.
Nemo tam divos habuit faventes, Crastinum ut possit sibi polliceri. — Seneca .	Nobody has ever found the gods so favourably disposed to him that he can be sure of another day.
Nemo vir magnus sine aliquo afflatu divino unquam fuit.— Cicero .	No man was ever great without some degree of inspiration.
Ne nimium.	Do nothing in excess.
Ne obliviscaris.	Do not forget.
Ne pennas nido majores extende.	(Don't spread your wings beyond your nest.) A proud heart and a beggar's purse will not agree.
Ne plus supra.	Nothing above; the highest type; the chief example.
Ne plus ultra.	Nothing beyond; the greatest extent.
Ne prius antidotum quam venenum.	(Don't take the antidote before the poison.) He that excuses himself, accuses himself.
Ne pueri, ne tanta animis assuescite bella:	This thirst of kindred blood, my sons, detest,
Neu patriæ validas in viscera vertite vires.— Virgil .	Nor turn your force against your country's breast.— Dryden .
Ne puero gladium.	Do not put a sword in a boy's hand.
Neque mel, neque apes.	(No bees, no honey.) No rose without a thorn.
Neque semper arcum tendit Apollo.	(Nor does Apollo always bend his bow.) Due relaxation is necessary.
Nequicquam sapit, qui sibi non sapit.	To no purpose is he wise who is not wise to his own benefit.
Ne quid detrimenti respublica capiat.	That the state suffer no harm.*
Ne quid nimis.	Go not too far.

* The decretum ultimum passed by the Roman senate in times of national peril, which gave the chief magistrates, the consuls, full powers to use any means to save the commonwealth. Cicero had these powers given him to defeat the conspiracy of Catiline.

Nescia mens hominum fati sortisque futuræ.—Virgil.

(Nothing is more welcome to a man than a friend in need.) A friend in need is a friend indeed.

By bestowing nothing he acquired glory.

He has no faults, unless to be faultless is considered one.

He touched nothing which he did not adorn.

(To know nothing at all is the happiest life.) Children and fools have merry lives.

Nothing new under the sun.

Nil tam difficile est, quin quærendo investigari possit.— Terence .	Nothing is so difficult that it cannot be accomplished by diligence.
Nimia familiaritas parit contemptum.	Too much familiarity breeds contempt.
Nimium ne crede colori	(Trust not too much to appearances.) A blush may cover deceit.
Nimium premendo litus.	By hugging the shore too closely; keeping out of danger.
Nisi Dominus, frustra.	Unless the Lord is with us, our efforts are vain.*
Nisi prius.	(Unless before.) A writ by which the sheriff is to bring up a jury on a certain day " unless before " that day the judges go into the counties to hold assizes.
Nitimur in vetitum semper, cupimusque negata.— Ovid .	We always strive after what is forbidden, and desire the things refused us.
Nitor in adversum.	I strive against opposition.
Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus. — Juvenal .	(Virtue is the only true nobility.) Howe'er it be, it seems to me 'Tis only noble to be good. — Tennyson .
Nocet differre paratis.	(It is prejudicial to those that are ready, to delay.) Strike while the iron is hot.
Nocturnâ versate manu, versate diurnâ.	Give your days and nights to the study of these authors.
Nolens volens.	Whether he will or not.
Noli me tangere.	Do not touch me.
Nolle prosequi.	To be unwilling to prosecute; stoppage of a suit by the plaintiff or by the Crown.
Nolo episcopari.	I do not wish to be made a bishop.†
Nolumus leges Angliæ mutari.	We are unwilling that the laws of England be changed.
Nomina honesta prætenduntur vitiis. — Tacitus .	Specious names are lent to cover vices.
Nominis umbra.	The shadow of a name.
Non aliter quam qui adverso vix flumine lembum	So the boat's brawny crew the current stem,
Remigiis subigit : si brachia forte remisit,	And, slow advancing, struggle with the stream :
Atque illum in præceps pronò rapit alveus amni.— Virgil .	But if they slack their hands, or cease to strive, Then down the flood with headlong haste they drive.— Dryden .
Non aliter vives in solitudine, aliter in foro.— Quintilian .	Do not live one way in private, and another in public.

Non licet.	It is not lawful.
Non liquet.	(The case) is not clear; not proven.
Non magni pendis quia contigit. — Horace .	(You do not value it highly because it came incidentally.) A lucky find is not as much valued as money earned.
Non misere quisquam, qui bene vixit, obit.	(The man who has lived aright dies happy.) A good beginning makes a good ending.
Non nisi parendo vincitur.— Bacon .	(It is only by obedience that the conquest is made.) Nature is beyond all teaching, and we can only control it by obeying its laws.
Non nobis, Domine.	Not to us, O Lord.
Non nobis solum sed omnibus.	Not for ourselves only, but for all.
Non nobis solum sed toti mundo nati.	Born not for ourselves only, but for the whole world.
Non nostrum tantas componere lites.	It is not our duty to adjust such high disputes.
Non numero hæc judicantur sed pondere.	These things are estimated not by number but by weight.
Non omnia possumus omnes.— Virgil .	We cannot all of us do all things.
Non omnis error stultitia est dicenda.	Not every mistake is to be stigmatised as folly.
Non omnis moriar.— Horace .	(I shall not wholly die.) My works, my poetry will be immortal.
Non opus admisso subdere calcar equo. — Ovid .	Do not spur a free horse.
Non possidentem multa vocaveris Recte beatum.— Horace .	You cannot rightly call the very rich man happy.
Non possumus.	We cannot.*

the kindly earth pours forth an easy sustenance.

(Oh! that is enough.) My patience is exhausted.

Oh, that that little corner of my neighbour's field, that spoils the symmetry of my land, were given to me.

O servile herd of imitators

(More smooth than oil.) Soft words break no bones.

(To pour oil upon the fire.) To add fuel to the flame.

It will be pleasant to remember these things in after times.

Thou mighty madman, spare one who is not thy peer- in folly.

How wretched are the minds of men!
How blind their intelligence!

(The unknown is always thought to be magnificent.) Distance lends enchantment to the view.

Every kind of vice has not reached its highest development.

* Juvenal has preserved for us this specimen of Cicero's poetic efforts. The line is nothing to be proud of, and Juvenal truly says that the writer of it might have escaped the swords of his murderers, the creatures of Antony, had he written nothing more. In oratory and philosophy Cicero was pre-eminent among his countrymen, but he seems to have had no claim to be considered a poet.

Omnem credę diem tibi diluxisse supremum.	Believe that each day that dawns on you is your last.
Omnem movere lapidem.	(To leave no stone unturned.) To go the whole hog.
Omnē nimium vertitur in vitium.	(Everything in excess becomes a vice.) There may be too much of a good thing.
Omnē scibile.	Everything that may be known; everything knowable.
Omnēs deteriores sumus licentiā. —Terence.	(Too much license debases us.) Spare the rod and spoil the child.
Omnēs eodem cogimur.	We are all driven towards the same quarter (deathwards).
Omnēs eodem cogimur; omnium Versatur unā, serius, oculus, Sors exitura. —Horace.	We are all driven in the same direction; for all the urn of death is shaken, and soon or late the lot of each will come forth.
Omne solum forti patria est. —Ovid.	Every soil is a fatherland to a brave man.
Omnēs sibi melius esse malunt quam alteri. —Terence.	(All men prefer to do good to themselves rather than to another.) Charity begins at home.
Omne tulit punctum, qui miscuit utile dulci. —Horace.	(He has gained every vote, who blended the useful with the agreeable.) The writer who can combine instruction with amusement is deserving of praise.
Omnia ad Dei gloriam.	All things are for the glory of God.
Omnia bona bonis.	All things are good with good men.
Omnia bonos viros decent.	(All things are becoming to good men.) Honest men fear neither the light nor the dark.
Omnia fert ætas, animum quoque. —Virgil.	Time bears away all things, and the powers of the mind among them.
Omnia inconsulto impetu cœpta, initiis valida, spatio languescunt. —Tacitus.	All things commenced with inconsiderate haste, although vigorous at the outset, droop after a time.
Omnia mala exempla bonis principiis orta sunt.	All bad precedents have taken their origin from good beginnings.
Omnia mea mecum porto.	(I carry all my property with me.) My intellect is my best possession.
Omnia mors æquat. —Claudian.	Death levels everything.
Omnia non pariter sunt omnibus apta.	All things are not alike suited for all men.
Omnia novit Græculus esuriens.	(A starving Greekling knows everything.) He will undertake any office.*
Omnia præclara sunt rara.	All excellent things are rare.
Omnia profecto cum se cœlestibus rebus referet ad humanas, excelsius magnificentiusque et dicet et sentiet. —Cicero.	The contemplation of celestial things will make a man both speak and think more sublimely and magnificently when he descends to human affairs.

‡ Gatherum is not a proper Latin word, but is merely Latinised humorously from "gather."

Opinionum commenta delet dies, naturæ judicia confirmat.	Time wipes out the comments of men's opinions, but it confirms the judgments of nature.
Opprobrium medicorum.	(The disgrace of the doctors.) Any disease for which there has not been found any cure.
Optat ephippia hos piger, optat arare caballus.— Horace .	(The lazy ox wishes for horse-trappings, and the horse wishes to plough.) We are dissatisfied with what we have, and long for what we have not.
Optimum est pati quod emendare non possis.— Seneca .	What cannot be cured must be endured.
Optimum obsonium labor.	Work is the best relish.
Opum furiosa cupido.	The ungovernable lust for riches.
Opus artificem probat.	(The workman is known by his work.) A carpenter is known by his chips.
Opusculum.	A little work (book).
O! quid solutis est beatius curis? Cum mens onus reponit, ac peregrino Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto. Hoc est, quod unum est pro laboribus tantis.— Catullus .	Oh, what is more delightful than to lay one's cares aside, when the mind puts aside its burden, and we return to our beloved home wearied by distant travel, and rest our limbs on the wished-for bed? This, this alone, repays us for our grievous toil.
Ora et labora.	Pray and work.
Orandum est ut sit mens sana in corpore sano.	We should pray for a sound mind in a sound body.
Ora pro nobis.	Pray for us.
Orationem concludere.	To end a speech.
Orator fit, poeta nascitur.	The orator is made such by education, but a poet must be born such.
Ore rotundo.	With a round mouth; volubly; grandly.
Ore tenuis.	By word of mouth; verbally.
Origo mali.	The origin of evil.
O rus, quando te aspiciam?	O country, when shall I behold thee?
O sancta simplicitas.	O blessed simplicity.
O Sancte Pater, sic transit glori mundi.	Holy Father, thus passes away the glory of the world.*

‡ The exclamation occurs in Cicero's first speech denouncing Catiline.

Otiosis nullus adsistit Deus.

(No deity assists the idle.) God helps those who help themselves.

Otium cum dignitate.

Ease with dignity.

Otium omnia vitia parit.

(Idleness produces every vice.) Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do.

Otium sine dignitate.

Ease without dignity.

Ovem lupo committere.

(To set the wolf to guard the sheep.)

Ovis ovem sequitur.

(One sheep follows another.) Like follows like.

O vitæ philosophia dux! O virtutis indagatrix, expultrixque vitiorum! quid non modo nos, sed omnino vita hominum sine te esse potuisset? tu urbes peperisti: tu dissipatos homines in societatem vitæ convocasti: tu eos inter se primo domiciliis, deinde conjugii, tum litterarum, et vocum communione junxisti: tu inventrix legum, tu magistra morum, et disciplinæ fuisti: ad te confugimus: a te opem petimus. Est autem unus dies bene, et ex præceptis tuis actus, peccanti immortalitati anteponendus.—Cicero.

Philosophy, thou guide of life! Thou searcher after virtue, and banisher of vice! What would not only we ourselves, but the whole life of men, have been without thy aid? It is thou that foundedst cities, gatheredst men in social union; thou that united them together first in dwellings, then in the nuptial tie, then in the pleasures of literature and the interchange of speech: to thee we owe the devising of the laws, and thou didst guide men to righteous ways, and virtuous habits. To thee we come for refuge, from thee we seek for help. One day well spent, according to thy precepts, is preferable to an immortality of sin.

Pons asinorum.	(The asses' bridge.) The fifth proposition in Euclid.

* When one gladiator in the amphitheatre had another at his mercy, he looked towards the spectators. If they turned their thumbs towards their breast, it was a signal for death.

Populus me sibilat ; at mihi plaudo. — Horace .	(The people hiss me, but I applaud myself.) I care nothing for the opinion of the crowd.
Populus vult decipi, decipiatur.	The people wish to be 'deceived, let them have their wish.*
Posse comitatus.	(The power of the county.) A posse of police is a body of police.
Posse videor.	I appear to be able ; I think I can.
Possunt quia posse videntur.	(They are able because they seem to be able.) They can because they think they can.
Post bellum auxilium.	Aid after the war ; help offered too late.
Post equitem sedet atra cura. — Horace .	(Black care sits behind the horseman.) The wealthy man as he rides his horse is still pursued by anxiety.
Postiores cogitationes sapientiores solent esse.	Second thoughts are usually best.
Post factum nullum consilium.	Advice comes too late when a thing is done.
Post festum venisti.	(You have come after the feast.) You have arrived too late.
Post hoc, ergo propter hoc.	(After this, therefore in consequence of this.) The logical fallacy of treating a subsequent event as undoubtedly a result of a preceding one, although of course it is not necessarily so.
Post nubila Phœbus.	(After cloudy weather comes the sun.) Every cloud has a silver lining.
Post obit.	A bond payable after death.
Post prœlia prœmia.	After battles come rewards.
Post tenebras lux.	(After darkness light.) "Joy cometh in the morning."
Post tot naufragia portum.	After so many shipwrecks (we reach) a harbour.
Postulatum (pl. Postulata).	A demand ; an assumption required for an argument.
Potentissimus est qui se habet in potestate.	He is most powerful who has himself in his own power.
Potius amicum quam dictum perdere.	Rather to lose a friend than a witticism.
Præservidum ingenium Scotorum.	The fiery, impetuous disposition of the Scotch.
Præmonitus præmunitus.	Forewarned, forearmed.
Præmunire.	A writ issued against certain offenders, who are thus placed outside the protection of the law, and are liable to forfeiture of goods and to imprisonment.†

* Words attributed to Cardinal Caraffa, legate of Pope Paul IV. Their origin, however, is not certain.

† The name is taken from the first words, pramoneri or pramuniri facias. "Cause A.B. to be warned to appear."

Quæ e longinquo magis placent.	The further fetch'd, the more things please.
Quæ fuerant vitia mores sunt.	What used to be vices are now common manners.
Quæ regio in terris nostri non plena laboris!	What region in the world is not full of our calamities.
Quærenda pecunia primum, virtus post nummos.	Money is the first thing to be sought ; reputation is a secondary consideration.
Quæstio fit de legibus, non de personis.	(The question is confined to the laws, and not to persons.) The law is impartial, considers the respective claims, not the social position, of litigants.
Quæ supra nos nihil ad nos.	(The things above us are nothing to us.) We do not trouble about things beyond our comprehension.
Quæ uncis sunt unguibus ne nutrias.	(Do not foster animals with hooked claws.) He that handles thorns shall prick his fingers.
Qualis ab incepto.	The same as from the beginning.
Qualis artifex pereo.— Nero .	What an artist dies in me.†
Qualis rex talis grex.	(Like king, like people.) A good master makes a good servant.
Quamdiu se bene gesserit.	During his good behaviour.
Quam multa injusta ac prava fiunt moribus.	How many injustices and wrongs are enacted through custom.
Quam parvâ sapientiâ mundus regitur.	With how little wisdom is the world governed.‡
Quam prope ad crimen sine crimine.	How near a man may approach to guilt without being guilty.

* A famous onomatopœic line, the sound of the words imitating the noise made by a horse galloping over the ground. Similarly, Tennyson suggests the sound of the hoofs of the farmer's horse in the line "But propetty propetty sticks, and propetty propetty graws." And Charles Kingsley in his Ballad of Lorraine uses the words "Barum, Barum, Barum, Barum, Barum, Barum, Barea," for the same purpose.

Re opitulandum non verbis.	We should help others by deeds, not words.
Repente dives nemo factus est bonus.	No good man ever became suddenly rich.
Reperit Deus nocentem.	(God finds out the guilty man.) God stays long, but strikes at last.
Requiem.	(Rest.) A hymn entreating rest for the dead.
Requiescat in pace (R.I.P.).	May he (or she) rest in peace.
Rerum primordia.	The first elements of things.
Res angusta domi.	Narrow circumstances at home.
Res est ingeniosa dare.— Ovid .	(Giving is a noble act.) It is better to give than to receive.
Res est sacra miser.	A person in distress is a sacred object.
Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.	Love is a constant source of fear and anxiety.
Res in cardine est.	(The matter is on the hinge.) The affair is hanging in the balance.
Res judicata.	(A decided case.) A case or point on which judgment has been pronounced.
Respice finem.	(Look to the end.) Look before you leap.
Resurgam.	I shall rise again.
Retinens vestigia famæ.	Maintaining the traces of fame.
Revocare gradum.	To recall (retrace) one's steps.
Rex est, qui metuit nihil	The man who neither fears nor desires anything is truly a king.
Rex est, qui cupiet nihil.— Seneca .	(The king reigns but does not govern.)
Rex regnat sed non gubernat.	In limited monarchies kings are only figure-heads.
Ridentem dicere verum quid vetat ?	(What hinders one from laughing and speaking the truth ?) One may speak the truth without pulling a long face.
— Horace .	(Laugh, if you are wise.) Mirth and motion prolong life.
Ridē si sapis.— Martial .	Ridicule often decides important matters more effectually and better than severity.
Ridiculum acri	Nothing so foolish as the laugh of fools.
Fortius ac melius magnas plerumque	Can you forbear to laugh ?
secat res.— Horace .	A raised platform to speak from ; tribune.*
Risu inepto res ineptior nulla est.	Though the heavens fall.
— Catullus .	(A rough and confused mass.) A state of chaos.
Risum teneatis ?	The country in town ; a house which combines the pleasures of both.
Rostra.
Ruat cælum.
Rudis indigestaque moles.
Rus in urbe.

* The rostra was the pulpit or platform in the Forum, from which those who wished to address the popular assemblies spoke. It derived its name from the rostra, or ships' beaks, which the Romans had captured at the battle of Antium. The form rostrum in this sense is incorrect.

Rusticus expectat dum defluat amnis; at ille Labitur, et labetur in omne volubilis ævum.— Horace .	The peasant* waits till the river flow past; but it glides on, and will glide on rolling for ever and ever.
Sacer intra nos spiritus sedet, malorum bonorumque nostrorum observator et custos.— Seneca .	A holy spirit dwells within us, that protects us and notes all that is good and evil in us.
Sæpe est sub pallio sordido sapientia. — Cicero .	Wisdom is often found under a shabby cloak.
Sæpe intereunt aliis meditantes necem.	Those who set the trap for others often fall into it themselves.
Sæpe stilum vertas, iterum quæ digna legi sint scripturus.	Frequently turn the stilus (re-write your compositions again and again), if you propose to write anything worth reading twice.*
Sæpe viâ obliquâ præstat quam ten- dere rectâ.	(Often it is better to go by a round- about way than by the straight road.) Short cuts are often the longest way home.
Sæpius locutum, nunquam me tacuisse pœnitet.	(I frequently regret that I have spoken, but never that I have been silent.) Speech is silver, silence is golden.
Sævis inter se convenit ursis.	Even savage bears agree among them- selves.
Sævus tranquillus in undis.	Calm amidst the angry waves.
Sal Atticum.	Attic salt; wit.
Salus populi suprema est lex.	The welfare of the people is the highest law.
Salvam fac reginam, O Domine.	God save the Queen.
Salve!	Hail! Welcome.
Salvo jure.	Saving the right; if the king's rights be not interfered with.
Salvo pudore.	Without offence to modesty.
Sancte et sapienter.	Religiously and wisely.
Sanctum.	A holy (place); a private cabinet.
Sanctum sanctorum.	Holy of holies.
Sanitas sanitatum, omnia sanitas.	(Health of healths, all is health.) After "vanity of vanities, all is vanity." The chief concern is health.
Sapere aude.	Dare to be wise.
Sapiens dominabitur astris.	The wise man will govern the stars.
Sapiens ipse fingit fortunam sibi. — Plautus .	The wise man fashions his fortune for himself.
Sapientiam ac eruditionem stulti sper- nunt.	Fools despise wisdom and instruction.
Sapientia primi est stultitiâ caruisse.	The first step to wisdom is to be free from folly.

Caution time is over when one is in the midst of evils.

(Keep one consistent plan from end to end.) A literary composition ought to be consistent in aim and execution.

Words a foot and a half long.

If we be made for honesty, either it is solely to be sought, or certainly to be estimated much more highly than all other things.

It is a fool's part to neglect one's own affairs, and to give advice to others.

So; thus.

(If we must fall, let us boldly face the danger.) "How can a man die better than facing fearful odds?"

Such is the way to the stars; to immortality.

So I order.

Thus Apollo preserved me.*

So everywhere; in different parts of the book.

So in as many words.

So passes away the glory of the world.

As before.

Exercise your rights in such a manner as not to injure another man's rights.

As worms are generated in a pool of stagnant water, so evil thoughts spring up in the mind of an idle man.

As is my custom.

His manner of life was this: to bear with everybody's humours; to comply with the inclinations and pursuits of those he conversed with; to contradict nobody; never to assume a superiority over others. This is the ready way to gain applause without exciting envy.

Live among men as if the eye of God was upon you; pray to God as if men were listening to you.

So I wish, so I command.

* So Horace expresses his gratitude to the god Apollo, the protecting deity of poets, when he escaped from the clutches of a talkative bore. The expression is now used proverbially to indicate a timely release from any awkward predicament.

Sic vos non vobis.

(Thus you labour, but not for yourselves.) You do the work, and another gets the credit.

Sic vos non vobis nidificatis aves.
Sic vos non vobis vellera fertis oves.
Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes.
Sic vos non vobis fertis aratra boves.

Thus you, birds, build nests, but not for your own advantage, and also the sheep grow wool, the bees make honey, and the oxen support the ploughs; but none of them gain profit by their toil.*

* Virgil, when Bathyllus, a rival, had wrongly claimed a couplet in honour of Augustus, which had been found written on the palace door, wrote on the same door "Hæc ego versiculos feci, tulisti alter honores" and four incomplete lines, beginning Sic vos, non vobis. Bathyllus was asked to complete these lines, but failed to do so, when Virgil came forward, supplied the remainder, and vindicated his claim to the first couplet as well.

(If Troy could have been saved by might.) Everything possible has been attempted to save the situation.

If you know anything better than these ideas of mine, impart them frankly; if not, use these as I do.

If there is any place where the spirits of the righteous dwell, if, as philosophers are disposed to think, souls of the great and good do not perish when their bodies die, mayst thou rest in peace, and call us, thy family, from indulging in vain regrets and womanish tears to the contemplation of thy virtues. These, at least, we have no right to bewail and deplore.†

If Jupiter were to hurl a thunderbolt for every sin that men commit, very soon he would have none to throw.

Let honour be stainless.

May the earth lie lightly on thee.

If you are in good health, it is well.

If you wish me to weep, you must first display grief yourself.

(If you desire to maintain peace, be prepared for war.) Strong armaments are the best security for peace.

If they were to persist in living.

* Mæcenas, the great minister and adviser of Augustus Cæsar, was the most liberal patron of literary men. He used their skill to glorify the Roman Empire, and to make the rule of the newly-established monarchical system more popular among the Romans.

† The valedictory words of Tacitus to his father-in-law Agricola, whose administration of Britain made a considerable part of that island to be one of the best-ordered parts of the Roman dominions. The view of Tacitus and Seneca with respect to a futuro life were considerably in advance of those held in the century before, during the latter days of the Republic. At the same time it must not be supposed that Tacitus was in any way affected by the teachings of Christianity, for when he alludes to the spread of Christian doctrines during the first century A.D., he speaks of the new faith with abhorrence, regarding it as a "pernicious superstition."

Let my will stand for a reason.

Energetic idleness.

(Fools use chalk to write with, and walls for paper.) A white wall is a fool's paper.

It is foolish to fear what you cannot avoid.

A fool despises his father's instruction.

With the wrong end of the stylus or pen; the act of erasing

Every man has his own pleasures.

Every man is the maker of his own fortune.

(He sends his presents with a hook attached.) A sprat to catch a herring.

'Tis pleasant, when the seas are rough,
to stand

And see another's danger, safe at land.

Gentle in manner, but resolute in action.

Truth under oppression.

Under the open sky.

Under the rod.

Under this sign thou shalt conquer.
[See In hoc signo.]

Under the open sky.

Under consideration.

(We miss what we have lost.) When the well is dry we begin to appreciate the value of water.

With head uplifted I shall tower to the stars.

Under a penalty.

Under the rose; secretly.

In silence.

What lies under an erection; support.

The success of the wicked tempts many to imitate them.

The suggestion of what is false; putting forward as the fact what one knows to be untrue.

Of its own kind; belonging to a class of things peculiar to itself.

He stands by his own strength.

Envy attacks the noblest.

(The highest seat will not admit of two.)
There is only room for one at a time on the topmost rung of the ladder.

Summum bonum.

Summum jus, summa injuria.

Summum nec metuas diem, nec optes.

Tædium vitæ.

The greatest good.

(The rigour of the law is the rigour of injustice.) The strict enforcement of a law sometimes operates as a great wrong.

Neither fear death, nor desire it.

(Let not your expenditure exceed your income.) Cut your coat according to your cloth.

The spirits of the dead do really exist. Death is not the end of everything.

Some good, more bad, some neither one nor t'other.

(There are tears for human affairs, and mortals' sorrows touch the heart.) The sense of tears in mortal things.

—Matthew Arnold.

To be condemned out of one's own mouth; foiled with one's own devices.

By one's own valour.

On one's own motion; spontaneously.

Every misfortune is to be overcome by endurance.

A writ to stay or set aside proceedings.

Upon a view of the body.

The poor use entreaties, but the rich speak roughly.

A suppression of the truth.

Above.

To talk to a deaf man: to lose one's labour; to urge a hopeless suit.

(Something bitter rises.) No joy without annoy.

Lift up your hearts.

Turning everything to ridicule.

Sighs from the depths.

Posterity pays to every man the honour that is due to him.

(To every one his own is most beautiful.) The crow thinks her own bird fairest.

Everyone has his particular habit.

A banquet; feast; usually of learned persons.

A blank tablet.

Weariness of life.

Tam ficti pravique tenax quam nuntia verī.— Virgil .	(As ready to spread lies and scandal as to tell the truth.) The character of Rumour.
Tandem fit surculus arbor. Tangere ulcus.	A twig at length becomes a tree. (To touch the sore.) To hit the nail on the head.
Tanquam ungues digitosque suos.	(As well as his own nails and fingers.) At his fingers' end; at the tip of his tongue.
Tantæne animis cœlestibus iræ?	Does such anger dwell in heavenly minds?
Tantas componere lites. Tanti.	To settle so great a quarrel. Of such importance.
Tanti quantum habeas fis.— Horace .	(You are valued by the amount of money you possess.) Money makes the man.
Tanto brevius omne, quanto felicius tempus.— Pliny the Younger .	Time passes more quickly in proportion as you are happy.
Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum. — Lucretius .	So many evils has superstition been able to arouse.
Tarde, quæ credita lædunt, Credimus.— Ovid	We are slow to believe those things which, if believed, would cause us pain.
Tardus ad iram abundat intelligentia	He that is slow to anger is of great understanding.
Taurum tollet qui vitulum sustulerit	(He who has carried the calf will be able to carry the ox.) Custom makes anything easy.
Te iudice.	You being the judge.
Telum imbelle sine ictu.	(A feeble weapon thrown without effect.) A weak, useless argument.
Tempestas sequitur serenum.	After calm the storm.
Tempora mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis.*	The times change and we change with them.
Temporibus inserviendum.	Time and tide wait for no man.
Temporis ars medicina fere est.— Ovid .	Time is a great healer.
Tempus edax rerum.	Time the devourer of all things.
Tempus fugit.	Time flies.
Tempus in ultimum.	To the last extremity.
Tempus omnia revelat.	Time reveals all things.
Tenax propositi.	Tenacious of his purpose.
Teres atque rotundus.	(Polished and round. Round as a ball.) A man of self-control; self- contained.
Terminus ad quem.	(The limit to which.) The end of one's journey or aim.
Terminus a quo.	The limit from which; the starting- point.
Terræ filius.	A son of the soil; a man of mean birth.

Terra es, terram ibis.	Dust thou art, to dust thou shalt return.
Terra firma.	Solid earth; a firm footing.
Terra incognita.	(An unknown land.) A place or subject of which nothing is known.
Terram cœlo miscent.	(They mingle earth with heaven.) They turn the world upside down.
Tertium quid.	A third something; the result of the union or collision of two forces opposed to one another.
Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. — Virgil .	(I fear the Greeks, even when they offer presents.) A foe is most dangerous when he feigns to be friendly.
Timet pudorem.	He fears shame.
Timidi est optare necem.— Ovid .	It is a coward's part to long for death.
Timidi mater non flet.	(A coward's mother does not weep.) He who fights and runs away—.
Timidi nunquam statuere tropæum.	(Cowards never set up a trophy of victory.) Faint heart never won fair lady.
Timor addidit alas.— Virgil .	Fear gave him wings.
Timor animi auribus officit.— Sallust	(Fear closes the ears of the mind.) No exhortation moves a coward.
Timor Domini fons vitæ.	The fear of the Lord is the fountain of life.
Toga.	The Roman civil dress.*
Toga virilis.	(The gown of manhood.) The dress that a Roman assumed when he reached manhood, and put off the toga prætexta , the garb of boyhood.
Tot homines, quot sententiæ.	So many men, so many minds.
Totidem verbis.	In just so many words.
Toties quoties.	As often as.
Totis viribus.	With all his might.
Toto cœlo.	(By the whole heavens.) Diametrically opposed.
Totum in eo est.	All depends on this.
Totus mundus agit histrionem.	All the world's a stage.
Totus teres atque rotundus.	Complete, smooth, and round.
Traditus non victus.	Betrayed, not conquered.
Transeat in exemplum.	May it pass into an example.
Tria juncta in uno.	Three joined in one.
Tribus Anticyris caput insanabile. — Horace .	(A head incurable even by three Anticyræ.) A hopeless lunatic.†
Triste lupus stabulis, maturis frugibus imbres, Arboribus venti, nobis Amaryllidis iræ.— Virgil .	The wolf is fatal to the flocks, showers to ripened corn, winds to the trees, the wrath of Amaryllis to me.
Tristis eris, si solus eris.— Ovid .	You will be sad if you keep only your own company.

* See note on Cedant arma.

Ultima ratio.

Ultima ratio regum.

I triumph in death as in life.

(Troy has been.) Its day is over.

(Trojan and Tyrian shall be treated by me with no difference.) I will be quite impartial, as I care for neither side.

One day is pressed onward by another.

Yield not to misfortunes, but confront them all the more boldly.

(My coat is nearer than my cloak.)
Charity begins at home.

(You, too.) A retort, implying that the case of the opposite party is no better than its rival's; each being guilty of the same misdoings.

You live as you ought, if you take care to act up to the reputation you deserve.

When about to do an evil thing, though there be no other witness, respect thyself and forbear.

Protector and avenger.

(The reward of silence is sure.) Silence is golden.

It is your own.

Implicit reliance.

Where there are friends money is not far to seek.

(Wherever a human being exists, there is an opportunity to do a kindness.)
Be ye kind one to another.

Uncertainty destroys law.

Where liberty dwells, there is my country.

(Where there is honey, there are bees.)
Where there is an attractive thing to be seen, a crowd is sure to gather.

(Where there is most mind, there is least money.) Philosophers despise wealth.

Everywhere.

(Where they make a solitude, they call it peace.)

Mark where his carnage and his conquests cease,
He makes a solitude and calls it peace.

—Byron.

Live mindful of death. Time flies; this very word I speak is so much taken from it.

To live is to think.

If you do not know how to live rightly, submit to those who do.

Farewell and be happy.

The living force of the mind.

Virtue survives the grave.

There lived brave men before Agamemnon.

Many brave men lived before Agamemnon, but all unwept and unknown lie buried in endless night, because they lack an inspired bard to relate their exploits.

I have lived and finished the course which Fortune gave me. If God grant us to-morrow, let us receive it joyfully. That man is most truly happy, and complete master of himself, who awaits the morrow without anxiety. Whoever has said, "I have lived," rises daily to live profitably.

No injustice is done to a person by an act to which he consents.

I am willing, but unable.

Pleasures, when they come rarely, are most enjoyed.

Study the Greek literary models by night, study them by day.

My life is devoted.

The word that is heard perishes, but the letter that is written abides.

The voice of one crying in the wilderness.

A voice and nothing more.

Vox faucibus hæsit.

Vox populi, vox Dei.

Vulgo.

Zephyrus.

Zonam perdidit.

Zonam solve.

The voice that stuck in the throat.

The voice of the people is the voice of God.

Commonly.

Vulgar people value friendships only for the advantages to be gained therefrom.

The great majority of people estimate few things according to the real value of them, most things according to their own preconceived ideas.

Wounded, but not conquered.

An irreparable injury; an incurable wound.

The face is the index of the mind.

A gentle wind; a zephyr.

He has lost his purse; he is ruined.

(To untie the girdle.) To marry a woman.*

* Roman women wore a zona, or girdle, around the loins until they married, as a sign of maidenhood. This was laid aside at the time of marriage, and its removal was, therefore, typical of surrender to marital authority.

peace may be made with the enemy ;
but no one ought to be uplifted unduly by success in war, nor should any submit to injustice because they are unwilling to sacrifice the calm delights of peace.

Noble deeds grow before the eyes of men, even as a tree waxes great when watered by the quickening dew.

But the immortal gods hold the threads of victory in their hands.

I have often heard the nightingale herself.*

(Your silence is in itself an admission.)
Your silence gives consent.

(An automaton.) A thing that is self-moved, as a clock, etc.

Autonomy; self-government.

The sword itself often provokes a man to fight.

(He himself said so.) Ipse dixit.†

Be active first thyself, then seek the aid of heaven; for God helps him who helps himself.

We ought to consider a man's intelligence, not his outward appearance.

(Lovers' vows are broken with impunity.) All's fair in love and war.

We ought to avoid in ourselves the faults that we blame in others.

Away with you; go and be hanged!
Grievous is the voice of the people when hatred inspires their words.

A fool in prosperity is a heavy burden to endure.

And (the old man) in bitter grief paced along the shore of the loud-roaring sea.

* A reply to one who told him of a musician who imitated and rivalled the nightingale.

† The saying of the Pythagoreans when they quoted the opinion of their teacher on any subject, Αὐτὸς ἔφα, "The Master said so-and-so."

- Βίον καλὸν ζῆς, ἂν γυναῖκα μὴ ἔχῃς.
—Menander. (You live happily, if you have no wife.)
When a man's single he lives at his ease.
- Βούλονται δ' οἱ πλείστοι τὰ φαῦλα δι' ἀπειρίαν τῶν καλῶν καὶ ἄγνοϊαν.
—Plutarch. Most men are knavishly inclined because they have no experience and are ignorant of the blessings of virtue.
- Βούλου γονεῖς πρὸ παντὸς ἐν τιμαῖς ἔχειν.
—Philemon. Honour thy parents before all else.
- Βοῦς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ. (An ox on the tongue.) A bribe to keep silence.
- Βουστροφθόδον. (Turning in writing like oxen in ploughing.) Writing from left to right, and then from right to left.
- Βραδέως ἐγχείρει· ὁ δ' ἂν ἄρξῃ, διαβη-

- Γαμεῖν ὁ μέλλων εἰς μετάνοιαν ἔρχεται. (He who would marry is on the road to repentance.) When a man's married his troubles begin.†
- Γάμοι δ' ὅσοις μὲν εὖ καθεστῶσιν βροτῶν, μακάριος αἰὼν· οἷς δὲ μὴ πίπτουσιν εὖ, τὰ τ' ἔνδον, τὰ τε θύραζε δυστυχεῖς.
—Euripides. Marriage is a blessed state to men when all things go well with them; but when misfortunes come, both home ties and outside affairs are equally burdensome.
- Γάμος γὰρ ἀνθρώποισι εὐκταῖον κακόν.
—Menander. Marriage is an evil that most men welcome.
- Γελᾷ δ' ὁ μῶρος, κἄν τι μὴ γελοῖον ᾖ.
—Menander. The fool laughs, even though there is nothing to laugh at.

* A saying of Nero. His mother, Agrippina, was suspected of having given poison to the Emperor Claudius in a dish of mushrooms, and so won the throne for her son, who afterwards showed his gratitude by compassing her death. The Roman emperors were deified after death, so the mushrooms were indeed food for a god on this occasion.

Know thyself.*

Manner, not gold, is a woman's best adornment.

Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife;

A bad, the bitterest curse of human life.

Silence is a woman's true adornment.

In the hour of sorrow or sickness, a wife is a man's greatest blessing.

If a woman tricks herself out in finery when her husband is away, you may write her down no faithful wife.

Woman is naturally prone to extravagance.

An extravagant wife is a plague to her husband.

In an honourable enterprise there must be no delay.

It is the first duty of a ruler to preserve the constitution; this can be done by maintaining his own rights while not trespassing on the rights of others. For the ruler who surrenders his own prerogatives, or assumes powers not his own, is no longer a king or governor, but a demagogue or a despot, whose subjects either despise or hate him.

We ought to endure patiently our present suffering, and look with confidence to the future.

—Herodotus.

Slander is a most dreadful thing; when a man is slandered, there are two who wrong him, the slanderer and the man who listens. The slanderer acts wrongly because he speaks ill of the absent; the listener because he believes the tale before he has ascertained its truth for himself.

(The parts appear greater than the whole.) When we examine a thing in its details, it appears larger than when considered as a composite whole.

Διαστολή.

(Expansion.) The dilation of the lungs.

* The replies of the Delphic oracle were couched in terms that might bear a double meaning. This method had obvious advantages in the event of the oracle's advice proving bad. For example, during the invasion of Xerxes, the Athenians were told to trust to their wooden walls. This was interpreted by the majority as a command to trust to a sea-battle, but some remembered the old wooden palisade round the Acropolis. They paid for their opinion with their lives when the Persians occupied Athens.

† The severity of the laws of Dracon, the Athenian lawgiver of the seventh century B.C., has become proverbial. They were drawn up on the principle that all crimes were equally culpable and deserved the severest penalties.

Διὰ τὶ πάντες ὅσοι περιττοὶ γεγόνασιν

Temperance is the foundation of piety.

I am myself the only friend on whom I can rely.

(I would make reply that old men are twice boys.) Old age is second childhood.

To want nothing I consider divine, and the man whose wants are fewest approachest most nearly to the gods.

Whenever I see the wicked fall into adversity I declare that the gods do exist.

The man who has received a benefit ought always to remember it, but he who has granted it ought to forget the fact at once.

I command and implore you not to feel revengeful towards the Athenians.*

* Phocion, the famous Athenian general and statesman, became in his old age unpopular, and was condemned to death. Patriotic to the last, he made this final request to his son. Phocion was one of the political opponents of Demosthenes. The great orator called the blunt man of action the "pruner of my periods."

Ἐδίδαξά σε κυβιστᾶν, καὶ σὺ βυθίσαι με θέλεις.

(I taught you to dive, and now you wish to drown me.) Do a kindness and you make an enemy.

I wish you to become so much of one mind, so closely allied, so that, though you are two, you may become one.

If you wish to be good, first consider that you are wicked.

• (If to a little you still a little add, by adding thus continually you will soon possess a large heap.) Many littles make a mickle.

If I have done any noble action, that is a sufficient memorial; if I have done nothing noble, all the statues in the world will not preserve my memory.*

That man deceives himself who thinks his evil deeds escape the eyes of God.

If you suffer ills through your own folly, do not blame heaven for your sufferings.

(An icon.) An image or representation.

If you are rich you will have abundance of friends; if poor, you will lose both your friends and any good reputation you have possessed.

If, then, there is any gift from the gods to men, it is surely reasonable to suppose that happiness is a divine gift, since it is the best of all human possessions.

Even though Olympian Jove does not avenge at once, he will do so, though he tarry long; and with their own lives and the lives of their children the wicked pay a heavy penalty for their sins.

(One man, no man.) Two heads are better than one.

Business to-morrow.†

The best omen for a man is to fight for his country.‡

* The reply of Agesilaus, the Spartan King, according to Plutarch, to those who suggested that a memorial should be erected to his honour.

† The saying of Archias, the Spartan commander, whose procrastination brought about his death. The Spartans had occupied Thebes, and Pelopidas, with other Theban patriots, formed a plan to recover the city and kill the invaders. A letter warned Archias of the conspiracy, but being engaged in the delights of the table, he put the letter aside, saying, "Business to-morrow."

others sport.—Merivale.†

* See French section: Du sublime au ridicule.

† A Latin version of these lines from the Greek Anthology was used by Le Sage at the end of "Gil Blas." See Juvenis portum.

Ἐμὲ μὲν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἂν βλάψειεν οὔτε
Μέλητος οὔτε Ἄνυτος· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἂν δύναιτο· οὐ γὰρ οἶομαι θεμιτὸν εἶναι ἀμείνωνι ἀνδρὶ ὑπὸ χείρονος βλάπτεσθαι.
—Socrates.

Ἐμοὶ γὰρ δὲ πατὴρ οὐδὲν ἀπολείψει.
—Alexander the Great.

Ἐμοὶ δὲ μόνοις πρόπινε τοῖς ὕμμασι.
—Philostratus.

Ἐμοῦ θανάτου γαῖα μιχθήτω πυρὶ οὐδὲν μέλει μοι· τὰμὰ γὰρ καλῶς ἔχει.

Ἐμποδίζει τὸν λόγον ὁ φόβος.

—Euripides.

Ἐνεστι κὰν μύρμηκι κὰν σέρφῳ χυλή.

Ἐν θαλάττῃ ζητεῖς ὕδωρ.

Neither Meletus nor Anytus can injure me. Indeed they have not the power to do so; for I imagine that it is impossible for the better man to be injured by the worse.*

My father will leave me nothing to do.†

Drink to me only with thine eyes.

When I am dead, let fire consume the world: I care not so long as I prosper.‡

Fear curbs the tongue.

The love of liberty is innate in all mankind.

(Among the unmusical the sparrow is reckoned a fine singer.) The fowl is a fine bird when the peacock is not nigh.

(The race of men and gods is one.)
God made man after his own image.

Better be a pauper on the land than a Cræsus on the sea.

He bursts upon them all:
Bursts as a wave that from the cloud
impends,
And swell'd with tempests on the ship
descends;
White are the decks with foam; the winds aloud
Howl o'er the masts, and sing through every shroud;
Pale, trembling, tired, the sailors freeze with fears!
And instant death on every wave appears.—Pope. §

The wise ought to possess their lives in hope.

(Even the ant and worm have got a temper.) The worm will turn if you tread on it.

(You are looking for water in the sea.)
Who so blind as he that will not see?

* Part of the speech of Socrates given in Plato's "Apology of Socrates." Anytus and Meletus had accused Socrates of "corrupting the youth" by his unorthodox teachings, and succeeded in getting the Athenians to condemn him to death.

† A saying of Alexander preserved by Plutarch. Philip's conquests of the Greeks aroused the ambition of his son, the future conqueror of Asia.

‡ Lines from an unknown Greek writer quoted by Suetonius. The historian narrates that when the first line was repeated to Nero, the Emperor said, "Yes, and when I am alive." The words contain the same idea as Madame de Pompadour's Après moi le déluge.

§ The simile describes the onset of the Trojan Hector upon the Greeks.

Ἔνθ' Ὑπνῷ ξύμβλητο, κασιγνήτῳ Θανάτοιο.—Homer.

There he met with Sleep, Death's twin brother.

How wonderful 'is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep.

—Shelley.

Ἐν μύρτου, κλαδί τὸ ξίφος φορήσω

Ἐν τῷ φρονεῖν μηδὲν ἥδιστος βίος.
—Sophocles.

Sweetest is the life that is untroubled with thought.

Ἐξ ἄμμου σχοινίον πλέκειν.

(To make ropes of sand.) Your labour is in vain.

Ἐξω δρόμου φέρεσθαι.

(To be carried out of the course.) To wander from the point.

Ἐξω τοῦ πράγματος.

(Beside the question.) An argument not to the point.

Life is like a theatre ; for the greatest knaves often sit in the best seats.

Ἐπάμεροι· τί δέ τις ; τί δ' οὐ τις ;
σκιάτ' ὄναρ ἀνθρώπος.—Pindar.

Creatures of a day are we ; for what is Man ? Naught but a phantom that quickly fades away.

Ἐπεὶν ἡμίονοι τέκωσι.

(When mules have foals.) When two Sundays come in a week ; never.

Ἐπεὰ πτερόεντα.—Homer.

Winged words.

* The first stanza of the famous song that commemorated the attempt of Harmodius and Aristogeiton to slay Hippias and Hipparchus, sons of Peisistratus, who succeeded their father as tyrants of Athens. The attempt was practically a failure, and the motives of the two revolutionists were not the lofty ones assigned to them ; but their action appealed to the imagination of the Athenians, who regarded the two conspirators as martyrs in the cause of liberty.

Ἐτεδν δὲ οὐδὲν ἴδμεν ἐν βυθῷ γὰρ ἡ ἀληθεῖα.—Diogenes Laertius.

Futurity carries for every man many various and uncertain events in its bosom.

On the threshold of old age.

(The epiglottis.) A cartilaginous plate that covers the windpipe during the act of swallowing.

(To have two anchors to one's ship.) To be prepared for emergencies.

(It stands upon the razor's edge.) The affair is in a critical state.

(You are bringing the moon on yourself.) You are preparing a rod for your own back.

Epic poetry; the composition of an epic.

Wine, Wit, and Beauty still their charms bestow,

Light all the shades of life, and cheer us as we go.

If anyone begins well his task, it is likely that the end, too, will be good.

It is idleness, not labour, that disgraces.

A poor man's relatives are hard to find, for no one will confess that a needy man is one of his kindred, since he might be asked to give something.

(Let each man practise the craft he understands.) The cobbler should stick to his last.

Megalopolis (the Great City) is a great desert; a great city is a great solitude.*

(Eros.) The god of love; Cupid.

Love, who keepest vigil on the soft cheek of a maiden.

Love is a far better teacher in the school of life than any clumsy sophist.

The day will come when the savage wolf shall see the lamb in his lair, and not wish to harm it.†

(By trying, the Greeks reached Troy.) Who perseveres succeeds at last.

We know nothing certain; for truth is hidden in the bottom of a well.

* See note on Magna civitas, magna solitudo in Latin section.

† The 24th Idyl of Theocritus contains several passages that are not unlike Chapter xi. of Isaiah. Virgil also uses similar language in the "Eclogues," and some imaginative critics have thought that Virgil may have had access to the writings of the Hebrew prophet.

Gentle birth and virtue.

The desire for happiness is the incentive that moves us in all our undertakings.

Happiness is the exercise of virtue by one who is in prosperous circumstances.

(Happy the man who has no debts.)
Out of debt, out of danger.

(The net of the sleeper catches fish.)
Blessings come when least expected.

(Euthanasia.) An easy, happy death.

(Eureka.) I have found it.*

Keep a healthy mind in a healthy body.
Mens sana in corpore sano.

(Prosperity is never friendless.) The rich guest is always a welcome guest.

Be moderate in your prosperity, and prudent in adversity.

(Pray; since all men stand in need of Heaven's aid.)

More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.

—Tennyson.

The lucky man is always greatly envied.

I hate the woman who is ever gadding about.

Who dares think one thing, and another tell,

My heart detests him as the gates of hell.

The gifts of an enemy are no gifts;
they bring no profit.

(Until the crows turn white.) Until two Sundays come in one week; never.

(While the pot boils friendship flour-ishes.) An empty purse frightens away friends.

O king Zeus, grant us good things whether we pray for them or not, and keep from us hurtful things even though we pray for them.†

God utterly abhors the boasts of a proud tongue.

Jove alone has a remedy for all evils.

* The exclamation of Archimedes when a sure way whereby to test the genuineness of the gold in the crown of his patron Hiero, the Syracusan King, suddenly occurred to him.

Ἡδονὴν φεύγε· αὕτη γὰρ λύπην τίκτει.
—Solon.

Ἡδὺ γὰρ τὸ φῶς βλέπειν.—Euripides.

Ἡδὺ γε φίλου λόγος ἐστὶ τοῖς λυπου-μένοις.—Menander.

Ἡδὺ δούλευμα.

A jealous woman sets every house on fire.

That man is to be envied who is fortunate in his children.

(To live basely shames those who have been nobly born.) Noblesse oblige.

My life and soul; my dearest love.

My life; my darling.

Death is better than an evil life.

Carelessly we live, thinking death will never come.

(Modesty gives rise to grace.) Modesty is essential to true beauty.

(The waggon draws the ox.) Putting the cart before the horse.

(Hebe.) The goddess of youth.

What is not really beautiful, often seems so to the eyes of love.

(Silence is a sufficient answer to the wise.) Silence gives consent.

(Hegemony.) The lead, the chief command; the sovereignty of one state over smaller states.

My tongue has sworn, but not my mind.*

Be gracious to all men, but choose the best to be your friends.

Thinkest thou that all my suns are set?†

Democracy is the severest form of despotism.

Love is the sweetest thing in life.

No sound is sweeter than the sound of praise.

Pleasure really exists in rest rather than motion; and the saying that change in everything is sweet is the outcome of wrong principles.

Shun pleasure; for pleasure is the mother of repentance.

Ah, sweet it is to behold the light of day.

The voice of a friend sounds sweet in the ears of a mourner.

(A sweet servitude.) A happy bondage;
the golden chains of love.

Happiness consists in the active employment of the faculties.

Speak very little, or very pleasantly.*

(Man is) either a god or a brute.

Choose a wife for her character rather than for her dowry.

Time is the touchstone that proves the character of men.

(Like pleases like.) Birds of a feather.
Much kind feeling accompanies a small gift; and what a friend has given we count of value.

(The middle course is always the safest.)
Medio tutissimus ibis.

The sea is still, the winds in silence rest,
Yet speaks the voice of grief within my

Alas for human life! in prosperity 'tis but a sketch, and when misfortune comes, the wet sponge with a touch blots out the drawing.

And so would I, if I were Parmenio.†

(A Cadmean victory.) A victory that has cost too much to win. A Pyrrhic victory.

A man whom poverty holds in its grasp, may not speak nor act as he pleases, but his tongue is tied.

War is not so much a matter of weapons as of money, for money furnishes the material for war. And this is specially true when a land power is fighting those whose strength is on the sea.

(Potter hates potter, and smith hates smith.) Two of a trade never agree.

If any makes a friend of more account than his fatherland, that man hath no place in my regard.—Jebb.

If we conquer our enemies by honest dealings and just treatment, our success is greater and more permanent than if we defeated them in war. In the latter case they yield to us under compulsion, in the former, their submission is voluntary.

(Beggars envies beggars.) 'Tis one beggar's woe to see another by the door go.

(Know your opportunity.) Strike while the iron is hot.

(Opportunity brooks but little delay.) Time and tide wait for no man.

* This saying is paraphrased from Thucydides.

† Parmenio, one of Alexander's generals, had advised his master to accept a bribe; "I would do so if I were Alexander." The above was the king's reply.

(Serve the opportunity, strive not against the favourable breeze.)

There is a tide in the affairs of men, Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.—Shakespeare.

Thou, too, my son.*

And the rest; et cetera.

To those young men who, either in war or in other circumstances, have deserved commendation, prizes should be given.

To be ashamed of one's poverty is shameful, but it is still more disgraceful not to labour to be rid of it.

A prosperous knave is grievous to endure.

If you aid the wicked you will get no return; but it will be enough if you are not made to suffer for your kindness.

(If you associate with knaves, you will become knavish yourself.) Who sleeps with dogs gets up with fleas.

(Bad crow lays a bad egg.) Like father, like son.

Lovely is the bloom of youth, but it quickly fades away.

Absolute monarchy is a fair field, but it has no outlet.

(Choose a good name before riches.)

Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls.

—Shakespeare.

Honourable poverty is better than dishonourable wealth.

The bright actions of the just Survive unburied in the kindred dust.

—Wheelwright.

Drop by drop; a little at a time.

(Pre-eminently.) Par excellence.

Death comes equally to the energetic and the idle man.

(You are come after the feast.) You come too late in the day.

Ears had they, and heard not.

The hopes that are cherished by ever-toiling men, are a bond that unites them all.

Misfortunes come to all alike; life is a wheel, and happiness abides not.

Thus, from the sublime spirit of the ancients there flow into the minds of those who imitate them certain emanations, like clouds of vapour from the cleft rocks in holy shrines; and these inspire even the most ungifted with the enthusiasm and greatness of others.

We must hold this opinion of the just man, that, if he fall into poverty or disease, or any other of these seeming evils, all these things work together for good to him, either during his life, or after death. For that man is never neglected by the gods whosoever exerts himself to the utmost to become just, and, by practising virtue, tries to approach, as nearly as a man may, to the likeness of God.

† The famous reply of the Athenian Themistocles to Eurybiades, the Spartan commander, when the latter was hotly resisting the proposal of the Athenians to meet the fleet of Xerxes near Salamis, 480 B.C., instead of retiring to the Isthmus of Corinth. Plutarch relates that the Spartan, enraged at the boldness of Themistocles, threatened to strike him. Herodotus gives a different account, making Adeimantus the Corinthian, not Eurybiades, the opposer of the Athenian's plans.

Πέρασ μὲν γὰρ ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις ἐστὶ τοῦ βίου θάνατος, κὰν ἐν οἰκίσκῳ τις αὐτὸν καθείρξας τηρῇ· δεῖ δὲ τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς ἄνδρας ἐγχειρεῖν μὲν ἅπασιν αἰετὶ τοῖς καλοῖς, τὴν ἀγαθὴν προβαλλομένους ἐλπίδα, φέρειν δ' ὅ τι ἂν ὁ θεὸς διδῷ γενναίως.—Demosthenes.

Death is the end of all men's lives, even if a man is ever on his guard, and hides himself in some obscure corner. Brave men, therefore, should always boldly engage in honourable deeds, and, using hope as their shield of defence, should endure with a stout heart whatever lot God sends them.

A good neighbour is a blessing, as a bad one is a curse.

Drink and be merry.

Drink, and let the merry laugh go round.

Many hands make labour light.

Love is the fulfilling of the law.

Wealth without virtue, is a dangerous guest :

Who holds them mingled, is supremely blest.—Merivale.

Wealth is a cloak that covers a multitude of sins.

A well-stored mind is the only true riches.

Grey hairs are a proof of age, but not of wisdom.

That is no real city where the power is vested in one man.

Little strokes fell great oaks.

(Often even a boor speaks to the purpose.) A fool may give a wise man counsel.

(Often a whole city suffers for the sins of one man.) One ill weed mars a whole pot of pottage. One rotten sheep ruins the whole flock

It often seems more difficult to maintain than to gain an advantage.

It has often surprised me that, while each man loves himself more than anyone else, he sets less value on his own estimate of himself than on the opinion of others.

There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip.

It is the chief duty of parents to set a bright example to their children by eschewing wrongdoing, and doing what is right. For then, their children, looking at the life of their parents as into a mirror, will themselves shun evil both in word and deed.

* A famous decree of Solon, the Athenian lawgiver, was so called. He relieved the hopeless condition of the poorer Athenian citizens by enacting that no one might recover money lent on the security of the person of the borrower. Inability to pay such loans had reduced many of the Athenians to a condition of servitude.

A great book is like to a great misfortune.

* Foolish men find the truth bitter and unpleasant, while they think falsehood is sweet and palatable.

To die is the destined lot of all, but to die nobly is the peculiar privilege of the good.

It is wiser not to trust knaves than,
having trusted them, to revile them.

(Neither to suffer in body nor to be troubled in mind.) The ideal of happiness.

(Riches raise the worst knave to the highest rank.) Poverty is the only crime.

Honour the dead by keeping their memory green, and not by weeping over their end.

Always curry favour with the people by saying sweet, palatable things to them ; as to the other qualities necessary for a demagogue, you possess them ; I mean you have a vilely raucous voice, your character is bad, and you are a loungers and a chatterbox.*

To conquer oneself is the best and noblest victory ; to be vanquished by one's own nature is the worst and most ignoble defeat.

(He has put the Colophon to it.) He has settled the matter ; it needs no further argument.†

(Scratch him who scratches thee.) One good turn deserves another.

(To speak ill of one's own home.)
That bird is not honest which defiles its own nest.

* Advice to a would-be demagogue. Aristophanes never wearied of attacking the political adventurers of his day.

† The origin of this proverbial expression is not certain. Colophon was one of the twelve Ionian cities of Asia Minor which had formed a federation. It is supposed that Colophon had a casting vote in the deliberations of this league. Another theory is that the famous cavalry of Colophon were so invincible that their appearance in battle gave the victory to the side on which they fought. Colophon was one of the cities that claimed to be the birthplace of Homer.

It is a common saying that he who would govern must learn to obey.

Do not revile the dead, but call them blessed.*

Do not revile a friend, nor eulogise an enemy.

The tie of kinship and of long acquaintance is wondrous strong.

The whole; the universe.

(The right.) Rectitude; honesty.

What is rare is always valued.

As soon as it is obvious that it is dishonourable for us to maintain peace, we ought to choose the risk of war, even if the result is doubtful.

(In order to excel.) The motto of Lord Henniker.

A man's life, like a statue, ought to be beautiful in all its parts.

For we are also his offspring.†

None are so much enamoured of life as those who are growing old.

And from his tongue flowed words sweeter than honey.

Methinks the dead know nought of sorrow.

Flattering speeches destroy the cities and families of mankind. We ought not to say such things as are merely pleasing to the ears, but what will make a man live more nobly.

This is the quality peculiar to man, wherein he differs from other animals, that he alone is endowed with perception to distinguish right from wrong, justice from injustice.

(Even a child would know this.) Every schoolboy knows this.

(The truest courage is discretion.) Discretion is the better part of valour.

In this sign conquer.‡

A righteous disposition is the most precious possession.

A careful education contributes much to the making of a virtuous life.

* A saying attributed to Chilo, one of the Seven Sages of Greece.

† St. Paul quotes these words in his speech to the Athenians (Acts xvii.) as from "certain of your poets." The words are found in a poem of Aratus, who wrote at the beginning of the third century B.C. He lived at Soli, in Cilicia, so that it was specially appropriate for Paul of Tarsus to quote from his works.

are given, but not discretion.

Such lot have the gods given to wretched mortals—to live in wretchedness, while they themselves are free from sorrows.

And when he saw that what was that it was good, and, pleased with his handiwork, bethought him how he might make it still more like the gods, after whose image it had been made.

it well.—Jeremy Taylor.

French.

A barbe de fou on apprend à raser.	Men learn to shave on a fool's chin.
A bas le traître.	Down with the traitor.
A bâtons rompus.	By fits and starts; in a desultory manner.
Abbé.	An abbot; a priest.
A beau demandeur, beau refuseur.	A polite request must be politely refused.
A beau jeu beau retour.	One good turn deserves another.
A beau mentir qui vient de loin.	Travellers from afar can lie with impunity
Abîmé dans des réflexions.	Lost, wrapped up in thoughts.
A bis et à blanc.	By fits and starts.
A bon appétit il ne faut point de sauce.	(A good appetite needs no sauce.) Hunger is the best sauce.
A bon chat, bon rat.	(To a good cat, a good rat.) Well matched; set a thief to catch a thief.
A bon cheval point d'éperon.	Do not spur the willing horse.
* A bon chien il ne vient jamais un bon os.	(A good bone does not always come to a good dog.) Merit seldom meets with its reward.
A bon commencement bonne fin.	A good beginning makes a good end.
Abondance de biens ne nuit pas.	Store is no sort.
A bon entendeur il ne faut que demi-mot.	(To one of good intelligence half a word is enough.) A word is sufficient to the wise.
A bon vin point d'enseigne.	(No sign-post is needed where good wine is sold.) Good wine needs no bush.
A brebis tondue Dieu mesure le vent.	God tempers the wind for the shorn lamb.
Abrégé.	An abridgment.
Absent le chat, les souris dansent.	When the cat's away the mice play.
A Carême-prenant chacun a besoin de sa poêle.	On Shrove Tuesday everyone wants his own frying-pan.
Acariâtre.	Peevish; churlish.
A chacun son fardeau pèse.	We all our burdens bear.
A chacun son goût.	Everyone to his liking.
A chaque fou plaît sa marotte.	Every fool rides his own hobby.

A chaque jour suffit sa peine.	Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.
A chaque oiseau Son nid est beau.	(Every bird thinks its own nest beautiful.) Home is home, be it ever so homely.
A chaque saint son cierge.	(To each saint his candle.) Honour to whom honour is due.
A charge de revanche.	On condition of repayment.
A chemin battu ne croît point d'herbe.	No grass grows on the highway.
Acheter des objets d'occasion.	To buy second-hand things.
A cheval.	On horseback.
A cheval donné il ne faut jamais regarder la bride.	Never look a gift horse in the mouth.
A chien endormi rien ne tombe en la gueule.	A closed mouth catcheth no flies.
A chose faite conseil pris.	Too late is advice when the mischief is done.
A cœur ouvert.	With open heart; candidly; unreservedly.
A cœur vaillant rien d'impossible.	To a valiant heart nothing is impossible.*
A confesseurs, médecins, avocats, la vérité ne cèle de ton cas.	To confessors, doctors, and lawyers, tell the truth about yourself.
A contre cœur.	Unwillingly; with one's face against.
A corps perdu.	Neck or nothing; post haste; without ballast.
A coup sûr.	With a dead certainty; sure as fate; clear as noon-day.
Acquérir méchamment et dépenser sottement.	(To acquire wickedly and spend foolishly.) Ill-gotten goods seldom prosper.
Adieu.	(I commit you to God.) Good-bye.
Adieu, France, adieu, je ne te reverrai plus.	Farewell, France, farewell, I shall never see thee more!†
Adieu la voiture, adieu la boutique.	(Good-bye to the carriage, good-bye to the shop.) The affair is over; it is finished and done with.
Adieu, plaisant pays de France! O ma patrie La plus chérie, Qui as nourri ma jeune enfance! Adieu, France! adieu mes beaux jours. La nef qui disjoint nos amours, N'a eu de moi que la moitié, Une part te reste, elle est tienne; Je la fie à ton amitié, Pour que de l'autre il te souvienn.	Farewell, thou pleasant land of France, my beloved country, the nurse of my infant days. Farewell to France; farewell to happiness! The ship that sunders me from thee carries away but half of my being. With thee I leave half of my soul, for it is thine; I entrust it to thy love that there it may be a constant reminder of me to thee when I am far away.‡
A discrétion.	At discretion; without stint.

* The motto of Henri IV.

† The farewell of Mary Queen of Scots to France, when she left it on August 15th, 1561, to return to her kingdom of Scotland.

‡ These verses are popularly attributed, on very slight evidence, to Mary Queen of Scots.

A dix-huit ans, on adore tout de suite ;
à vingt ans, on aime ; à trente, on

Let us help one another to bear the burdens of life.

Yes, let each man help a brother,

And try to make his burden light ;

Kind acts done to help another

Will make our own dark hours seem bright.

Amicable ; courteous.

Love me little, love me long.

A fondness for reading changes the inevitable dull hours of our life into hours of exquisite delight.

* A line from the tragedy Rhadamiste et Zénobie. In the original the words are full of tragic irony, but they are now generally quoted in a playful sense. Crébillon himself was the first to use them in this manner. When he was seriously ill, the physician who attended him asked the dramatist to make him a present of the unfinished tragedy Catitina. "Ah ! doit-on hériter de ceux qu'on assassine ?" replied Crébillon.

Aimer, c'est être deux et n'être qu'un :
un homme et une femme qui se fon-dent en un ange, c'est le ciel.

* The title of one of La Fontaine's fables, where the ass thinks that the homage paid to his load is paid to himself. Hence the words are generally applied to a person who gives himself airs when dressed in a little brief authority.

A nul ne peut être ami qui de soi-même est ennemi.	He cannot be another's friend who is his own enemy.
A outrance.	To the uttermost.
A paroles lourdes oreilles sourdes.	To hard words turn deaf ears.
A pas de géant.	With great strides.
A peindre.	Fit for a model.
Aperçu.	Glimpse; epitome; digest.
A père avare enfant prodigue.	A miser has a spendthrift son.
A portée de vue.	As far as the eye can reach.
A petite fontaine boit-on à son aise.	At a little spring one drinks at ease.
A petit mercier, petit panier.	A little pack suffices for a petty pedlar.
Appartement.	A suite of two or more rooms.
Apprenons à subordonner les petits intérêts aux grands, et faisons généreusement tout le bien qui tente nos cœurs : on ne peut être dupe d'aucune vertu.— Vauvenargues .	Learn to overrule minor interests in favour of great ones, and generously do all the good the heart prompts; a man is never injured by acting virtuously.
Approuvez qu'il n'est rien qui blesse un noble cœur	Rest assured that there is nothing which wounds the heart of a noble man
Comme quand il peut voir qu'on le touche en l'honneur.— Molière .	more deeply, than the thought that his honour is assailed.
Après dommage chacun est sage.	Every one is wise when the mischief is done.
Après la fête on gratte la tête.	After a feast a man thinks of the bill.
Après l'Agésilas, Hélas !	After Agesilas, Alas !
Après l'Attila, Holà !— Boileau .	After Attila, Great Heavens !*
Après la mort le médecin.	(After death the doctor.) Shutting the stable when the horse has gone.
Après la pluie le beau temps.	Sunshine follows after rain.
Après le fait ne vaut souhait.	It's no use wishing when the thing is done.
Après le plaisir vient la peine ; Après la peine, la vertu.	After pleasure comes repentance ; after repentance, virtue.
Après lui, il faut tirer l'échelle.	(After him we must take away the ladder.) He is the worst knave of the lot.†
Après nous le déluge.	After us the deluge.‡

* This was Boileau's epigram on the production of Agesilas and Attila, the two tragedies written by Corneille in his declining years, in which the tragedian showed a marked falling off in dramatic power. It is said that Corneille naively supposed Boileau wished to praise and not to condemn these plays. The lines are often applied to a condition of affairs where the last state proves to be worse than the first.

† This saying is based on the old custom of hanging the worst criminal last, when a number were executed. When the last victim was dead, the gallows might be removed as no longer required. The proverbialism is nowadays often used in an opposite sense, i.e., to say that a person or thing is "the best of the bunch."

‡ A saying attributed to Madame de Pompadour, the favourite of Louis XV., who saw that there were signs of the approach of the Revolution in the general discontent of the French people. The sentiment was not new, for it appears in a line of a Greek comic poet, Ἐὰν ἐμὲ θάψωσι γαῖα μὴ σφίγῃσιν. "When I am dead, may the earth be consumed by fire." See also note on these words in Greek section.

embarrassing position.

To have effrontery ; to have plenty of cheek.

(To be the victim of an evil eye.) To be down on one's luck.

To be in a state of alarm.

To look awkward.

To have the gift of the gab.

To have nothing but one's labour for one's pains.

To have high spirit and low fortune.

(To have one's heart on one's hand ; to have the heart on the lips.) To be of a frank, ingenuous disposition.

(Out of one's mind.) To have a bee in one's bonnet.

To have elbow-room ; to be able to act
according to one's inclination.

To have a passing fancy for a woman ;
to be inspired with a transient passion.

(To have a fixed idea.) To be possessed of a prejudice that nothing can remove.

To have a treacherous memory.

ened out of one's wits.

At will ; at pleasure.

Here's to your health.

(It is your turn to play, sir.) It's your turn now.

Forthwith ; speedily ; at short notice.

Always have more than one string to your bow.

(Love loyalty.) Motto of the Marquis of Winchester.†

* The words of Dandin in the Plaideurs have become proverbial as an illustration of people who will not stick to the point under discussion. See also note on Passons au défilé.

† John Paulet, Marquis of Winchester, during the Civil War in the reign of Charles I., withstood the attacks of the Parliamentary soldiers upon his house for nearly two years. To commemorate his loyalty to the King, he ordered these words to be written on every window of the house. His descendants have adopted them as their motto.

Bonne ou mauvaise santé	Our philosophy depends on our state of health.
Fait notre philosophie.— Chaulieu .

* This expression has become proverbial, to illustrate the fickleness of women. The Marquis de la Châtre, being compelled to go away from his mistress Ninon, caused her to write a letter to him in which she promised fidelity. But when another suitor appeared on the scene, she exclaimed, "That fine billet à la Châtre!" and promptly forgot her former lover.

Bonne renommée vaut mieux que ceinture dorée.	A good name is better than riches.
Bonnet de nuit.	A nightcap.
Bonnet rouge.	(The red cap.) The cap of liberty.
Bonne vie, bonne fin.	A good life makes a good end.
Bon pays, mauvais chemin.	(A good country, a bad road.) The worse for the rider, the better for the bider.
Bon poète, mauvais homme.	(A good poet, a bad man.) The better workman, the worse husband.
Bons mots n'épargnent nuls.	(Jesters spare no one.) Better lose your friend than waste your jest.

† A phrase used by Benjamin Franklin, which became popular by its constant use in songs written during the Revolution.

‡ This expression is consecrated by ancient usage, but it is now French as she is spoken out of France. The correct French phrase is de pied en cap.

Car je connais votre cœur équivoque ;
 Respect le cabre, amour ne l'adoucit ;
 Et ressemble à l'œuf cuit dans sa coque :
 Plus on l'échauffe, et plus il se durcit

* As to the origin of this proverbialism, it was a custom in Landerneau, a small town in Brittany, for the townsfolk to make matters a little unpleasant for widows who were about to marry again. It was Alexandre Duval, however, who made the fortune of the phrase in his comedy, Les Héritiers. The scene of this play, produced in 1760, is laid in Landerneau, and the above saying is constantly introduced. The humour of the situation consists in the exaggerated opinion that those dwelling in a small town have of the importance of their little scandals.

Celui-là gouverne bien mal le miel, qui n'en goûte, et ses doigts n'en lèche.

(He is a bad manager who tastes not the honey nor licks his fingers.) It is a poor cook that cannot lick his own fingers.

Celui-là peut prendre, qui goûte un plaisir aussi délicat à recevoir que son ami en sent à lui donner.

He is a fortunate man who feels as much pleasure in receiving a boon as his friend feels in granting it.

Ce monde-ci n'est qu'une œuvre comique

This world is merely a comedy, where each man plays a different part.

Où chacun fait ses rôles différents.

There, on the stage, in theatrical garb, shine prelates, ministers, conquerors. As for us, base groundlings seated in back seats, scorned by the great ones of the earth, we listen to the play from a humble place. But we are useful to the spectacle, for we pay for it, and, when the farce is acted ill, we get a return for our money by hissing the players.

Là, sur la scène, en habit dramatique, Brillant prélats, ministres, conquérants. Pour nous, vil peuple, assis aux derniers rangs, Troupe futile et des grands rebutée, Par nous d'en bas la pièce est écoutée. Mais nous payons, utiles spectateurs; Et, quand la farce est mal représentée, Pour notre argent nous sifflons les acteurs.—J. B. Rousseau.

The world is full of fools.

Cent ans de chagrin ne payent pas un sou de dettes.

Neither Providence nor life deceives us, but we deceive ourselves as to the designs of the one, and as to the goal of the other.

It is not enough to make people hear what you say—you must make them understand it ; memory, intelligence, and imagination must be equally called into play.

It is not by the way she looks or acts, but by a change in her voice when she speaks to a man, that one can most surely divine when love has sprung up in a woman's heart.

It is not in cages, gild them as ye may, that eagles should be reared.

A laugh is not always a proof that the mind is at ease.

To be wiser than is necessary is not wisdom at all.

(It is not the sea to be drunk.) It is not a mountain to remove ; it is not an impossibility.

It is not the king, Sire, but the law which ought to rule nations. You are only the administrator and chief depositary of the law.

(The oven is not warmed for you.) There is nothing for you.

Cabbage will not make soup without fat.

It is not enough for an artist to have a mind that thinks, and an eye that sees, but he must also have an eloquent hand.

Upon the choice of dark or fair,
Of happiness rests not the question ;
You'll find it come if you've the pair :

A heart that's bad and good digestion.

(That is a mere cento.) It is only patchwork ; a medley of other people's work.

The race is not to him who runs the fastest, but to him who starts soonest.

True thinkers are characterised by a blending of clearness and mystery.

That which is merely deferred is not lost.

Most women are indifferent to friendship, as friendship is tame to those who have experienced love.

Lovers and their mistresses never become bored in one another's society, because they are always talking about themselves.

Few are agreeable in conversation, because each thinks more of what he intends to say than of what others are saying, and listens no more when he himself has a chance to speak.

dearly regretted when past, is its double illusion which makes the horizon of life seem far away, and at the same time gilds it.

we do so very little.

Some people find fault on every occasion.

Some are born with silver spoons in their mouths.

Yes, this feeling that possesses me, terrible and jealous as it is, is truly love ; it has all love's passion, all its sadness. Still, it is not selfish, for to give thee happiness, I would gladly renounce my own, though thou mightst never know what I had sacrificed ;
yes, I would renounce it, if only I might sometimes hear the distant sound of thy exulting in the bliss my loss had gained for thee *

Such are the playful ways of princes ; they leave a mill alone, while they steal a whole province.

These are the Cadets of Gascony, of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux, braggarts and shameless brawlers all, these are the Cadets of Gascony.

* In Quinault's Thésée the enchantress Medea, having failed to win the love of Theseus, the son of the King of Athens, uses her magical arts to take vengeance upon those who have scorned her. Failing in these attempts, she is about to depart, but, before making her exit, she calls down avenging spirits upon the palace and city of the Athenians, and, with the words c'est ainsi que, etc., vanishes. The line is often quoted as a proverbial illustration of revengeful fury. It was quoted with grim humour on the occasion of the death of Louis XV. On the day that the King died an announcement of a fresh addition to the already heavy taxes was posted outside the palace of Versailles. During the night someone wrote this line of Quinault beneath the official notice of the new tax.

* When Louis XV. ordered the cemetery of St Médard to be closed, because the Jansenists were gaining power on the strength of the miracles reported to be performed there, an unknown person wrote this couplet on the gates.

† This familiar phrase refers to the anecdote in which Rabelais satirises the way that justice was administered in his time. Bridoie is a worthy judge, who, fearing to trust his own decisions, settles all cases brought before him by the aid of a dice-box. This plan works admirably, although the litigants are ignorant of the secret. But there comes a day when one of Bridoie's sentences is disputed. He is horrified, but at last finds that it is he, not the dice, that is to blame. According to the importance of the case, he was wont to use big or little dice, and on this occasion he had used the wrong set.

De tout s'avise à qui nain faut.	A man who wants bread is willing to do anything.
De tout temps les petits ont pâti des sottises des grands.— La Fontaine .	In every age the petty have paid for the follies of the great.

Enfin, je m'en lave les mains.

Well, I shall wash my hands of it.

Enfin les renards se trouvent chez le pelletier.

(At last the fox comes to the skinner.)
Thieves come to the gallows at last.

Enfin Malherbe vint.—Boileau.

And then Malherbe came.*

Enfin, vous n'êtes jamais de trop.

Anyhow, you are never in the way.

En flûte.

An enemy never sleeps.

Ennui.

Weariness; spleen.

En passant.

In passing.

En peinture, l'étude patiente et con-scienceuse de la nature, il n'y a que cela!---Bastien Lepage.

The patient and conscientious study of Nature is, in painting, the all in all.

* These words occur in l'Art Poétique. Boileau describes the uncouth style of early French poetry, "and then Malherbe came," who put the art of writing poetry on a proper basis. Hence the words are commonly applied to any person who comes as a deus ex machina to bring order to what was before a chaos.

En petit champ croît bien bon blé.

En petites boîtes met-on les bons
onguents.

En plein jour.

En rapport.

En règle.

En revanche.

En route.

Ensemble.

En suivant la vérité.

En sûreté doit qui n'a que perdre.

Entente cordiale.

En toutes compagnies il y a plus de fous que de sages, et la plus grande partie surmonte toujours la meilleure.
— Rabelais.

Entr'acte.

Entre bouche et cuillier

Vient souvent grand encombrer.

Entre chien et loup.

Entre deux feux.

Entre deux selles le cul à terre.

Entre deux vins.

Entrée.

Entre gens de même nature

L'amitié se fait et dure.

Entre la poire et le fromage.

Entre le marteau et l'enclume.

Entre le ministre qui gouverne l'Etat et l'artisan qui contribue à sa prospérité par le travail de ses mains, il n'y a qu'une différence, c'est que la fonction de l'un est plus importante que celle de l'autre; mais, à les bien remplir, le mérite moral est le même.

— Jouffroy.

Entre les deux alternatives: Ou pas de maître ou un mauvais maître, le choix pour un homme sensé ne saurait être douteux: il répondra: "Pas de maître." — Fules Simon.

Entremets.

Large ears of corn may grow in little fields.

Good things are done up in small parcels.

In broad daylight.

In touch; well-versed in a subject.

According to rule.

In return; in retaliation.

On the way.

Together; the general effect.

In following the truth.

He sleeps sound who has nothing to lose.

Friendly feeling; complete understanding.

In all gatherings of men there are more dolls than wise-heads, and the majority always overrules the wise minority

Between the acts.

There is many a slip

'Twixt the cup and the lip.

(Between dog and wolf.) The time of day when it is impossible to distinguish a dog from a wolf; twilight.

Between two fires.

Between two stools one falls to the ground.

Half drunk.

Freedom of access; a course of dishes.

Between folk of like nature friendships grow and will endure.

(Between the pear and the cheese.)
Over the walnuts and wine.

Between hammer and anvil; between the devil and the deep sea.

Between the Prime Minister and the workman who contributes to the prosperity of the state by his manual toil, there is but one difference: the former's function is more important than the other's, but the moral value of the right fulfilment of these functions is the same.

Between the alternatives of no teacher or a bad one, the sensible man does not hesitate: he replies at once "No teacher."

Dainty side dishes.

 He began again worse than ever.
- Il a remué ciel et terre pour y parvenir.
 He moved heaven and earth to succeed.
- Il a semé des fleurs sur un terrain aride.
 (He has planted flowers on a barren soil.) He has written on a dry subject in an ornate style.
- Il avait son discours sur le bout du doigt.
 He knew his speech by heart.
- Il brode très-bien.
 He can tell a good tale.
- Il broie du noir.
 He is in a brown study.
- Il chasse de race.
 He's a chip of the old block.
- Il conduit bien sa barque.
 (He manages his boat well.) He can paddle his own canoe; he understands the art of success.
- Il coûte peu à amasser beaucoup de richesse, et beaucoup à en amasser peu.
 (It takes little trouble to amass great wealth, but much to amass a little.) The first hundred pounds is the hardest to save.
- Il débite ses propos à tout bout de champ.
 He is always thrusting his remarks forward.
- Il dépense beaucoup en menus plaisirs.
 He spends a great deal in trifles.
- Il écorche le français.
 He muddles French.
- Il écrit à bâtons rompus.
 He writes by fits and starts.
- Il en a été quitte pour la peur.
 He escaped scot-free with nothing worse than a fright.
- Il en a fait une bonne affaire.
 That was good business for him.
- Il en est de la neige comme du cœur de la femme; à peine souillée, elle devient tout de suite de la fange.
 Woman's heart is like the snow: once sullied, it becomes mud.
- G. de Cherville.
- Il en est d'un homme qui aime, comme d'un moineau pris à la glu; plus il se débat, plus il s'embarrasse.
 A man in love is like a sparrow caught with bird-lime; the more he strives, the more he is entangled.

- Il en fait ses choux gras. (He makes his cabbages fat by it.) He feathers his nest by it.
- Il en fait toujours faire à sa guise. He always wants to go his own road.
- Il en rabattrà de sa première demande. He will take something less than he asked.
- Il en sait long. He's a knowing card.
- Il est aisé d'être femme quand on est insensible.—Madame de Staël. It is easy for a woman to be womanly when she has no feeling.
- Il est au bout de son latin. He is at his wits'-end.
- Il est aussi absurde de prétendre qu'il est impossible de toujours aimer la même femme, qu'il peut l'être de dire qu'un artiste célèbre a besoin de plusieurs violons pour exécuter un morceau de musique.—Balzac. To assert that it is impossible to love one woman for ever, is as absurd as to say that a virtuoso needs several violins to execute a piece of music.
- Il est aussi facile de se tromper soi-même sans s'en apercevoir, qu'il est difficile de tromper les autres sans qu'ils s'en aperçoivent. It is as easy to deceive ourselves unconsciously, as it is difficult to deceive others successfully.
- La Rochefoucauld*.
- Il est avec le ciel des accommodements. It is possible to make compromises with Heaven.*
- Il est bas percé. He is in low water; his funds are low.
- Il est beau de triompher de soi. 'Tis a noble triumph to triumph over self.
- T. Corneille*.
- Il est beau qu'un mortel jusques aux cieux s'élève, Il est beau même d'en tomber. It is grand in a man to aspire to the highest, even though he falls.
- Quinault*.
- Il est bien aisé d'aller à pied quand on tient son cheval par la bride. It is pleasant walking when you lead a horse by the bridle.
- Il est bien fou qui s'oublie. He is an arrant fool who forgets himself.
- Il est bien plus aisé d'accuser un sexe que d'excuser l'autre.—Montaigne. It is easier to accuse one sex than to excuse the other.
- Il est bon d'avoir des amis partout. It is a good thing to have friends everywhere.
- Il est bon de faire de nécessité vertu. It is wise to make a virtue of necessity.
- Il est bon de frotter et limer notre cervelle contre celle d'autrui. Contact with other wits brightens one's own.
- Montaigne*.
- Il est bon de parler, et meilleur de se taire. (It is good to speak, but it is better to be silent.) Speech is silvery, silence is golden.
- Il est bon d'être habile, mais non pas de le paraître. 'Tis a good thing to be clever, but it is well to disguise the fact.
- Il est comme le chien du jardinier. He is like the dog in the manger.
- Il est comme un coq en pâte. (He is living like a cock that is being fattened.) He is living in clover.
- Il est comme une poule mouillée. He is a perfect stupid.
- Il est coutumier du fait. He is an old hand at it.

* An adaptation of one of Molière's lines.

Il est dangereux de trop faire voir à l'homme combien il est égal aux bêtes sans lui montrer sa grandeur. Il est encore dangereux de lui trop faire voir sa grandeur sans sa bassesse. Il est encore plus dangereux de lui laisser ignorer l'un et l'autre, mais il est très avantageux de lui représenter l'un et l'autre. — Pascal.

Il est dit habile, qui fraude ami et pille.

Il est du naturel du chat, il retombe toujours sur ses pieds.

Il est du véritable amour comme de l'apparition des esprits; tout le monde en parle, mais peu de gens en ont vu. — La Rochefoucauld.

Il est faux qu'on ait fait fortune lorsqu'on ne sait pas en jouir?

— L'aurenargues.

Il est juste que le prêtre vive de l'autel.

Il est marqué à l'A.

Il est mort criblé de dettes.

Il est né coiffé.

Il est né dimanche, il aime besogne fute.

Il est parti prenant la clef des champs.

Il est peu de distance de la roche Tarpeienne au Capitole.

Il est plus aisé de se tirer de la rive que du fond.

Il est plus aisé d'être sage pour les autres, que pour soi-même.

— La Rochefoucauld.

Il est plus facile à une femme de défendre sa vertu contre les hommes que sa réputation contre les femmes.

— Rochebrune.

Il est plus honteux de se défier de ses amis, que d'en être trompé.

— La Rochefoucauld.

Il est plus nécessaire d'étudier les hommes que les livres.

— La Rochefoucauld.

It is dangerous to make man see how like he is to animals without keeping his greatness in view. It is dangerous, also, to show him his greatness and not his baseness; and still more to leave him ignorant of both. But it is most profitable to picture to him one and the other.

He who cheats and robs a friend is called a clever fellow.

Like a cat, he always falls on his feet.

True love has something in common with apparitions of ghosts. Everybody discusses them, but few have seen them.

Men who are said to have made their fortune, have not done so if they do not know how to enjoy it.

(It is fair that the priest should live by the altar.) The labourer is worthy of his hire.

(He stands À l'A.) He is a splendid fellow.

He was over head and ears in debt when he died.

(He was born with a caul.) Born lucky.

He was born on a Sunday, he likes a job where there is nothing to do.

He made off.

(It is not far from the Tarpeian rock to the Capitol.) It is a short step from the throne to the scaffold.*

(It is easier to get away from the bank than the bottom of the stream.) Leave the fire when it begins to scorch.

It is easier to be wise about other people's business than about our own.

A woman may more easily defend herself from men, than her reputation from women.

It is more shameful to distrust our friends than to be deceived by them.

Men, not books, are the proper subject for study.

* A line from Jouy's La Vestale Mirabeau quoted the words in a speech delivered in 1790.

Il est rendu.

Il est revenu de ses erreurs.

Il est sain de se lever de bonne heure.

Il est si beau de mourir jeune.
—André Chénier.

Il est sujet à caution.

Il est toujours par monts et par vaux.

Il est tout prêché qui n'a cure de bien faire.

Il est très comme il faut.

Il est très maniéré.

Il est trop tard de fermer l'écurie quand les chevaux sont pris.

Il est venu à point nommé.

Il était en train de sortir

Il était grippé.

Il fait beau temps.

Il fait bien mauvais au bois quand les loups se mangent l'un l'autre.

Il fait bon battre l'orgueilleux quand il est seul.

Il fait celui qui n'entend pas.

Il fait cher vivre dans la capitale.

Il fait déjà le barbon.

Il fait flèche de tout bois.

Il fait toujours bon tenir son cheval par la bride.

Il fallait me tenir à quatre pour ne pas rire

Il fallait un calculateur, ce fut un danseur qui l'obtint.—Beaumarchais.

Il faudra bien en passer par là.

Il faudra se soumettre ou se démettre.
—Gambetta.

Il faut amadouer la poule pour avoir les poussins.

Il faut attendre le boiteux.

Il faut, autant qu'on peut, obliger tout le monde :

On a souvent besoin d'un plus petit que soi.—La Fontaine.

He is quite done up.

(He has given up his errors.) He has turned over a new leaf.

Early rising is healthy.

It is so beautiful to die young.

You must discount what he says.

(He is always going over mountains and valleys.) He is always on the move ; he is ever on the wing.

It is useless to preach to a man who does not care to do well.

He is a perfect gentleman.

He is very stiff.

When the horses are stolen, it is useless to lock the stable-door.

He came in the nick of time.

He was just going out.

He had caught cold.

It is fine (weather).

'Tis very hard times in the wood when wolf eats wolf.

It is good to beat a proud man when he is alone.

He plays the deaf man.

Living is expensive in the metropolis.

(He already plays the gray-beard.) He has an old head on young shoulders.

(He makes an arrow of all wood.) He turns everything to account.

Don't leave hold of the bridle if you wish to be sure of the horse.

I did my best not to laugh.

A man "good at figures" was wanted, and a dancing-master obtained the post.

We must put up with it.

(He must needs submit or demit.) He must give way or resign.*

To get chicks, coax the hen.

(It is necessary to wait for the lame man.) Wait for the truth.

It is best to act kindly to everybody, for there's no hand so small that it may not help.

* This was Gambetta's declaration when the elections of 1877 went against Marshal Mac Mahon.

Il faut avoir pitié des morts.

—Victor Hugo.

Il faut battre le fer tandis qu'il est chaud.

Il faut bien laisser le jeu quand il est beau.

Il faut brigueur la faveur de ceux à qui l'on veut du bien, plutôt que de ceux de qui l'on espère du bien.

—La Bruyère.

Il faut casser la noix pour manger le noyau.

Il faut croire au mariage comme à l'immortalité de l'âme.—Balzac.

Il faut découdre l'amitié, mais il faut déchirer l'amour.

—Richelieu de Du-Marschall.

Il faut de l'argent pour commencer le jeu.

Il faut des années de repentir pour effacer une faute aux yeux de l'homme : une seule larme suffit à Dieu.

Il faut être enclume ou marteau.

Il faut faire ce qu'on fait.

Il faut gratter les gens par où il leur démange.

Il faut hasarder un petit poisson pour prendre un grand.

Il faut hurler avec les loups.

Il faut laisser l'enfant morveux plutôt que lui arracher le nez.

Il faut laver son linge sale en famille.

—Napoleon I.

Il faut le faire bon gré mal gré.

Il faut louer la mer et se tenir en terre.

Il faut passer par la porte ou par la fenêtre.

Il faut perdre un véron pour pêcher un saumon.

Il faut prêcher d'exemple.

Il faut prendre la balle au bond.

Il faut prendre le bénéfice avec les charges.

We ought to have pity on the dead.

Strike while the iron is hot.

Leave off playing when the game is at its best.

Seek the favour of those to whom you wish happiness, rather than of those from whom you hope to gain an advantage.

To eat the kernel you must break the shell.

Marriage must be believed in, as you do in the soul's immortality.

You may unpick the seam of friendship, but you must tear love's bond asunder.

(You must have money to commence the game.) You must have money to make it.

Years of repentance are necessary in order to blot out a sin in the eyes of men, but one tear of repentance suffices with God.

(One must be either anvil or hammer.) You must endure if you can't hit back.

Whatever you do, do it with all your might.

Scratch people in the right place.

(Venture a small fish to catch a great one.) A sprat to catch a herring.

(One must howl with the wolves.) When you are at Rome, do as Rome does.

Better leave the child's nose dirty than wring it off.

Dirty linen ought to be washed in private.

You are bound to do it, willy-nilly.

Praise the sea, but keep on land.

One must leave a room by door or window.

(A minnow's well lost to catch a salmon.) Set a sprat to catch a herring.

Example is better than precept.

Take time by the forelock.

(The benefice must be taken with its liabilities.) You must take the rough with the smooth.

Il faut que la vérité soit charitable, c'est-à-dire qu'elle soit dite pour le bien de celui qui est repris. La vérité doit être douce. Elle est assez forte pour n'avoir pas besoin d'être dure. C'est l'huile du Samaritain sur les plaies du malade, et non pas le vinaigre, c'est le miel et non le fiel.

Il faut que les actions de valeur reçoivent leur perfection des mains de la sagesse et de la justice : à moins de cela elles sont des diamants, si vous voulez, mais des diamants sans être taillés.—Mascaron.

Il faut que tout le monde vive.

Il faut qu'une porte soit ouverte ou fermée.

Il faut reculer pour mieux sauter.

Il faut se défier d'un ennemi réconcilié.

Il faut se dire beaucoup d'amis et s'en croire peu.

Il faut souvent plus de courage pour faire simplement son devoir, que pour affronter le feu de l'ennemi.

Il faut tendre voile selon le vent.

Il faut tondre les brebis et non les écorcher.

Il faut tourner la langue sept fois dans la bouche avant de parler.

Il faut vouloir ce qu'on ne peut empêcher.

Il fit un vent à écorner un bœuf.

Il gelaît à pierre fendre.

Il jette feu et flamme.

Il l'a battu à bras raccourci.

Il l'a échappé belle.

Il lit au front de ceux qu'un vain luxe environne,

Que la fortune vend ce qu'on croit qu'elle donne.

Approche-t-il du but ? quitte-t-il ce séjour ?

Rien ne trouble sa fin : c'est le soir d'un beau jour —La Fontaine.

Il lui a mis martel en tête.

Il lui obéit au doigt et à l'œil.

Il m'a battu froid.

Il m'a coupé l'herbe sous le pied.

Truth must be charitable ; that is, it must be spoken for the good of him who is blamed. Truth must be gentle. It is strong enough not to require to be hard. It must be the Samaritan's oil on the wounds of the sick, and not vinegar. It is honey and not gall.

Valiant deeds must receive their perfection from the hands of wisdom and justice ; otherwise, they may be diamonds, but uncut ones.

Everybody must live somehow.

A door must be open or shut.

A step back makes the better leap.

Beware of a friend who has once been your enemy.

Assert that you have many friends, but believe you have few.

Frequently it requires more courage simply to do our duty, than to face the fire of an enemy.

Set your sail as the wind blows.

Shear the sheep, but don't flay them.

Turn your tongue seven times before speaking.

What can't be cured must be endured.

The wind was enough to shave your eyebrows.

It froze very hard.

He frets and fumes.

He beat him with all his might and main.

He had a narrow escape.

The wise, on the brows 'neath the hollow gilt crown,

Reels that fortune sells what the rich man thinks given ;

Naught troubles his end, for the life he lays down

Was a beautiful day, and death is its even.

He tormented him to death.

He is at his beck and call.

He gave me the cold shoulder.

He cut the ground from under my feet.

- Il m'a débité tout cela à brûle-pourpoint. All that he told me point-blank.
 Il m'a donné une poignée de main. He shook hands with me.
 Il m'a mis au pied du mur. He got me into a corner.
 Il m'a poussé à bout. He exasperated me.
 Il m'a pris au dépourvu. He took me unawares.
 Il m'a ri au nez. He laughed in my face.
 Il me faut coucher sur la dure. My lodging is on the cold, cold ground.
 Il ment comme un arracheur de dents. He lies like a quack dentist.
 Il me traita de Turc à Maure. He used me abominably.
 Il met sa faucille dans la moisson d'autrui. (He puts his sickle into another man's harvest.) He wishes to reap where he has not sown.
 Il n'a pas inventé la poudre. (He did not discover gunpowder.) He is not a genius, nor likely to do anything remarkable.
 Il n'a pas soufflé mot de notre entrevue. He did not say a single word about our interview.
 Il n'appartient qu'à ceux qui n'espèrent jamais être cités, de ne citer personne. — Naudé. Only those who never hope to be quoted themselves, abstain from quoting others.
 Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir de grands défauts. (Only great men have great defects.) Men have the defects of their qualities. — La Rochefoucauld.
 Il n'a que faire de poésie. Poetry is not his forte.
 Il n'aura jamais bon marché qui ne le demande pas. He that does not ask will never get a bargain.
 Il ne choisit pas qui emprunte. He who goes a-borrowing does not care who the lender is.
 Il ne faudrait pas lui annoncer cette nouvelle de but en blanc. It would not do to tell this news abruptly.
 Il ne faut jamais détier un fou. Never bid defiance to a fool.
 Il ne faut jamais dépasser la mesure. Never o'erstep the bounds.
 Il ne faut pas badiner avec le feu. It won't do to play with fire.
 Il ne faut pas chômer les fêtes avant qu'elles ne soient venues. (Do not keep your holidays before they arrive.) Count not your chickens before they are hatched.
 Il ne faut pas clocher devant les boiteux. Do not limp before cripples.
 Il ne faut pas enseigner les poissons à nager. (Don't teach fish to swim.) Don't teach your grandmother to suck eggs.
 Il ne faut pas faire d'un diable deux. (Do not make out the ghost was two.) Don't make a bad business worse.
 Il ne faut pas jeter des pierres dans le jardin de ton voisin. You must not throw stones into your neighbour's garden.
 Il ne faut pas laisser de semer pour craindre des pigeons. Don't let pigeons frighten you from sowing.
 Il ne faut pas lier les ânes avec les chevaux. Asses must not be harnessed with horses.

- Il ne faut pas mettre le doigt entre l'arbre et l'écorce. (One ought not to put a finger between the trunk and the bark.) Do not interfere between husband and wife.
- Il ne faut pas nous fâcher des choses passées.—Napoleon I. It is no use troubling about past events.
- Il ne faut pas parler de corde dans la maison d'un pendu. (You should not talk of the halter in the house of a man that was hanged.) There is no limping before cripples.
- Il ne faut pas parler latin devant les cordeliers. Don't talk Latin before the learned.
- Il ne faut pas regarder de si près dans ces affaires. In such matters you must not be so particular.
- Il ne faut pas remplir ses devoirs comme par manière d'acquit. Duty must not be done as a mere matter of form.
- Il ne faut pas se moquer des chiens qu'on ne soit hors du village. Don't halloo till you are out of the wood.
- Il ne faut pas vendre la peau de l'ours avant de l'avoir mis par terre. You should not sell the bear-skin till you have killed the bear.
- Il ne faut qu'une brebis galeuse pour gâter tout le troupeau. One tainted sheep will mar the flock.
- Il ne faut qu'un faux pas pour casser la bouteille. (One false step will break the bottle.) Virtue once lost can never be regained.
- Il n'en peut mais. He can't do anything in the matter.
- Il n'en pouvait plus de fatigue et de soif. He was worn out with fatigue and thirst.
- Il n'entend jamais raillerie. He can never take a joke.
- Il ne peut plus y tenir. He can hold out no longer.
- Il ne restait plus que le nid. The bird had flown.
- Il ne s'agit pas de tout cela. That's not the question at all.
- Il ne s'agit peut-être, pour s'emparer de ces êtres si subtils, si souples et si pénétrants, que de savoir manier la louange et chatouiller l'amour-propre. La flatterie est le joug qui courbe si bas ces têtes ardentes et légères. Malheur à l'homme qui veut porter la franchise dans l'amour! —G. Sand. To captivate beings so subtle, supple and penetrative as women, clever praise and artful pandering to conceit may suffice. Flattery is the yoke with which to make them light and ardent heads submissive. Woe to the man who tries to be frank in love-making.
- Il ne sait sur quel pied danser. (He knew not on which foot to dance.) He's at his wit's end.
- Il n'est chasse que de vieux chiens. There is no good hunting but with old hounds.
- Il n'est cheval qui n'ait sa tare. There is no horse without a fault.
- Il n'est d'heureux que qui croit l'être. The only happy man is he who thinks himself happy.
- Il n'est pas aussi diable qu'il est noir. He is not so black as he is painted.
- Il n'est pas bon d'avoir tout le nécessaire.—Pascal. It is not a good thing to have all that we require.
- Il n'est pas bon d'être trop libre. —Pascal. It is not a good thing to possess too much freedom.

- Il n'est pas de pire sourd que celui qui ne veut écouter.
 Il n'est pas échappé qui traîne son licou.
 Il n'est pas nécessaire de tenir les choses pour en raisonner.
 — Beaumarchais.
 Il n'est pire eau que l'eau qui dort.
 Il n'est point de belles prisons ni de lades amours.
 Il n'est rien d'inutile aux personnes de sens.—La Fontaine.
 Il n'est rien moins qu'un avare.
 Il n'est rien si bien fait où l'on ne trouve à redire.
 Il n'est rien tel que d'avoir la clef des champs.
 Il n'est secret que de rien dire.
 Il n'est si bon charretier qui ne verse.
 Il n'est si grand dépit que de pauvre orgueilleux.
 Il n'est si homme de bien qu'il mette à l'examen des loix toutes ses actions et pensées, qui ne soit pendable dix fois en sa vie.—Montaigne.
 Il n'est si petite chapelle qui n'ait son saint.
 Il n'est si poltron sur la terre, qui ne puisse trouver un plus poltron que soi.
 — La Fontaine.
 Il n'est si riche festin, où il n'y ait quelqu'un qui mal dine.
 Il nous a donné le change.
 Il nous a fausse compagnie.
 Il n'y a au monde que deux manières de s'élever, ou par sa propre industrie, ou par l'imbécillité des autres.
 — La Bruyère.
 Il n'y a cheval si bien ferré qui ne glisse.
 Il n'y a cheval si bon qui ne bronche.
 Il n'y a de nouveau que ce qui est oublié.
 — Mlle. Bertin.
 Il n'y a pas à s'y tromper, cela saute aux yeux.
- Who so deaf as he that will not hear?
 The horse that draws his halter is not quite escaped.
 It is not necessary to have a thorough grasp of a subject in order to discourse upon it.
 Still waters run deep.
 Never was a prison fair, nor a lady-love foul.
 (There is nothing useless to people of sense.) A clever man finds some use for everything.
 He is anything but a miser.
 There is nothing so well done but may be carpied at.
 There's nothing like living at Liberty Hall.
 The only way to keep a secret is to say nothing.
 Accidents will occur in the best-regulated families.
 There is no spite like that of a poor man proud.
 There is no man so good who, if all his actions and thoughts were put to the test of the laws, would not deserve hanging ten times in his life.
 There is no chapel so small but has its saint.
 No man is so great a coward that he may not find another even more cowardly than himself.
 There never was so rich a banquet but some one dined ill at it.
 (He has put us on the wrong scent.) He has deceived us.
 He has given us the slip.
 A man rises in the social scale in two ways: either by his own works, or by the stupidity of others.
 (There is no horse so well shod but he may slip.) Accidents will happen in the best-regulated families.
 However good a horse may be, it sometimes stumbles.
 There is nothing new but what has been forgotten.
 There is positively no mistaking that.

- Il n'y a pas de grand homme pour son valet-de-chambre. No man is a hero to his valet.*
- Madame de Cornuel.*
- Il n'y a pas de miroir au monde qui ait jamais dit à une femme qu'elle était laide. There never was a looking-glass that reflected an ugly woman.
- Il n'y a pas de petit chez soi. There's no place like home.
- Il n'y a pas de plus forte chaîne pour lier une femme que celle de se savoir aimée. There is no stronger tie upon a woman than the knowledge she is beloved.
- Mme. de Motteville.*
- Il n'y a pas de quoi rire. That's no laughing matter.
- Il n'y a pas de sots métiers, il n'y a que de sottes gens. There are no stupid trades, but there are stupid in them.
- Il n'y a pas de vie heureuse, il y a seulement des jours heureux. There is no such thing as a happy life—there are only happy days.
- André Theuriet.*
- Il n'y a pas là de quoi fouetter un chat. (That is not enough to whip a cat for.) That offence is not worth talking about.
- Il n'y a pas moins d'invention à bien appliquer une pensée que l'on trouve dans un livre qu'à être le premier auteur de cette pensée. On a ouï dire au Cardinal du Perron que l'application heureuse d'un vers de Virgile était digne d'un talent.—Stendhal.
- Il n'y a personne qui ne soit dangereux pour quelqu'un.—Madame de Sévigné.
- Il n'y a pire eau que l'eau qui dort. To make good use of a thought found in a book requires almost as much cleverness as to originate it. Cardinal du Perron said that the apt quotation of a line of Virgil was worthy of the highest capacity.
- Il n'y a plus de Pyrénées.—Louis XIV.
- Il n'y a point au monde un si pénible métier que celui de se faire un grand nom : la vie s'achève que l'on a à peine ébauché son ouvrage. There is no man who may not be a danger to somebody. Still waters run deep. There are no longer any Pyrenees.†
- La Bruyère.*
- Il n'y a point d'amour sans jalousie. Without jealousy there is no love.
- Il n'y a point de petit ennemi. There is no such thing as a petty enemy.
- Il n'y a point d'esclaves plus tourmentés que ceux de l'amour. No slaves so tortured as the slaves of love.
- Mlle. de Lespinasse.*
- Il n'y a point de terroir si ingrat qui n'ait quelque propriété.—La Bruyère.
- I n'y a pour l'homme que trois événements, naître, vivre et mourir : il ne se sent pas naître, il souffre à mourir, et il oublie de vivre.—La Bruyère.
- There is no ground so ungrateful as not to yield something.
- There are three events in man's life : birth, life, and death ; he is not aware of his birth, he suffers in dying, and he forgets to live.

* This saying in some form is of great antiquity. Plutarch attributes a similar expression to Antigonus I., King of Macedonia in the third century, n.c.

† Voltaire attributes this mot to Louis XIV., saying that the King made the remark when the Duke of Anjou set out to occupy the Spanish throne. It has, however, been also attributed to the Spanish Ambassador to the Court of Versailles.

Il n'y a que la religion qui rende les hommes braves, patients, intrépides par conscience; et si l'on était fidèle à la religion, l'on serait invincible.	Religion alone makes a man brave, patient, and intrepid through conscience; and if a man would remain faithful to religion, he would be invincible.

§ This quotation from M. Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac forms part of the scene where Cyrano, conscious of his own lack of good looks, quixotically woo's Roxane in the character of his rival Christian. The real Cyrano de Bergerac, poet and swashbuckler, has earned immortality by the coining of a single phrase. In his play Le Pédant joué occurs the Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère, or rather a slight variation of it, which Molière borrowed for the most amusing scene in the Fourberies de Scapin.

Woman longs for the single gift of being delightful to the man who loves her, or necessary to the anxious, the weak and the wearied.

Woman has a smile for every joy, a tear for every grief, consolation for all misery, excuses for all faults, a prayer for misfortune, and encouragement for all hopes.

Woman is the very heart of man.

Among savages woman is a beast of burden; among Orientals, a piece of furniture; among Europeans, a spoiled child.

Woman is a highly-perfected demon.

Woman is the connecting link between man and the angels.

Women are ready to find excuse for those misdeeds which their own beauty has provoked.

Woman may not be learned with impunity, unless she conceals her knowledge with as much care as the other sex takes to display its own.

Woman cannot be superior except as a woman; for, as soon as she tries to emulate man, she becomes merely an ape.

L'amour est un plaisir qui nous tourmente, mais ce tourment fait plaisir.

—Scribe.

L'amour est un traître qui nous égratigne lors même qu'on ne cherche qu'à jouer avec lui.—Ninon de Lenclos.

L'amour étant un sentiment profondément sensuel, il faut que la possession soit possible et même prochaine pour que l'amour naisse. On aime d'ordinaire la femme que les circonstances mettent fréquemment sur votre route, et l'on ne s'attache pas à celle qui passe sans qu'on sache si elle reviendra. On adore l'une, on oublie l'autre sans calcul, sans raisonnement, parce que l'instinct vous pousse vers celle près de laquelle le désir a chance de se satisfaire.—G. Lachaud.

L'amour et la fumée ne peuvent se cacher.

L'amour il est le désir pour l'inconnu étendu à la folie.—Petiet.

L'amour ne meurt jamais de besoin, mais souvent d'indigestion.

L'amour, pour les mortels, est le souverain bien.—Louis Ferrier.

Love is the young man's king and the old man's tyrant.

Love is the heart's novel and pleasure is its history.

Love is the groundwork which imagination has embroidered.

Love is an ill none can conceal ; a look, a word, or even silence reveals it.

Love is a trifling thing, and yet is the only weapon that can wound stout hearts.

Love is a passion which often comes we know not how, and leaves us in the same way.

Love is a pure dew which drops from heaven into our heart, when God wills.

Love does wonders in his school,
He makes a wise man of the fool.

Love is a bird that sings in the heart of woman.

Love is a pleasure that teases, but this teasing is pleasing.

Love is a traitor who scratches us even when we want only to play with him.

Love being a deeply sensual feeling, possession of its object must be possible and even approximate to give birth to love. The woman is usually loved whom circumstances throw frequently in our way, and not the acquaintance whose return is doubtful. We adore the one and forget the other without reasoning, because instinct impels us towards her who offers some chance of conquest.

Love and smoke cannot be concealed.

Love is the yearning for the unknown carried to madness.

Love never dies of want, but often of indigestion.

Love is mortals' crowning blessing.

L'amour-propre est flatté des hommages, l'orgueil s'en passe, la vanité les publie.—Meilhac.

L'amour-propre est le plus grand de tous les flatteurs.

L'amour-propre est un ballon gonflé de vent dont il sort des tempêtes quand on y fait une pique.—Voltaire.

L'amour-propre est un instrument utile, mais dangereux ; souvent il blesse la main qui s'en sert, et fait rarement du bien sans mal.—Rousseau.

L'amour-propre offensée ne pardonne jamais.—Vigée.

L'amour qui naît subitement est le plus long à guérir. —La Bruyère.

L'amour sans desirs est une chimère ; il n'existe pas dans la nature.

La négation de l'Infini mène droit au Nihilisme. Tout devient "une conception de l'esprit." Avec le nihilisme pas de discussion possible. En somme, aucune voie n'est ouverte pour la pensée par une philosophie qui fait tout aboutir au monosyllabe Non. A Non, il n'y a qu'une réponse : Oui.—Victor Hugo.

Self-esteem is flattered by homage ; pride dispenses with it ; vanity boasts of it.

Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers.

Conceit is a balloon out of which the gas rushes in a tempest when you give it the least prick.

Conceit is a useful but dangerous instrument often it wounds the holder's hand, and it seldom does any unalloyed good.

Offended vanity never forgives.

Love that springs into being in a moment takes the longest time to cure.

Platonic love is a delusion, it does not exist in nature.

Without respect, love cannot go far or rise high : it is an angel with but one wing.

Pure, sincere love is a fire of aloes-wood which burns without smoke.

Music, like religion, unconditionally brings in its train all the moral virtues to the heart it enters, even though that heart is not in the least worthy to receive such guests.

The purest and most sympathetic interpreter of poetry, love, and grief, is music.

(Birth is nothing where virtue does not have a place.) 'Tis only noble to be good.

The ass carries wine but drinks water.

Denial of the Infinite Being leads straight to Nihilism : all creation becomes merely "a conception of the mind." Discussion is not possible with Nihilism, for no way is opened to the mind by a philosophy which meets every opinion with a "Nay." To "Nay" there is but one reply—"Yea!"

Poetry will have to reckon with science some day. The great poetry of our age is science, with its marvellous blossoming forth of discoveries, its conquest of matter, and the wings it gives man to augment his activities.

Poetry is the star which guides kings and shepherds unto God.

Poetry, a jealous craft, requires the worker to be a creator as well in invention of the motive as in its execution, and Nature, who is a gracious but stern mistress to the poet, utterly refuses him ready-made subjects.

Politics are a gaming-hell, in which lookers-on are exposed to paying as much as the players.

Politics ! to knock the heads of Utopias together is amusing. Look at those great children who run after one another without overtaking through the echoing, empty passages of the Temple of Talk. Human life is like a road with a dreadful precipice at the end of it. At the first step we are warned of this, yet the law says we must proceed. When we want to turn back we cannot, all the road behind us has fallen in and become an abyss.

The only lovely thing about old age is virtue.

Modern life is so little in harmony with bloodshed, the savage acts of murder and passion, that, when a family is forced to witness a tragedy, each individual regards the occurrence as a kind of nightmare. They are compelled to acknowledge that the apparition exists, but they cannot entirely realise it.

Les gens fatigués sont querelleurs.

Les grandes pensées viennent du cœur.

—Fauvenargues.

Les grands bœufs ne font pas les grandes journées.

Ladies are distinguished by their good taste in dress.

Women are in no wise condemned to mediocrity; they may even aspire to the sublime—in a womanly way. Each sex should keep to its place and not seek other perfections than those that belong to it.

Women have corrupted more women than men have loved.

Women have the more petty faults and, man the more finished vices.

Women always have some mental reservation.

Women have too much imagination and sensitiveness to have much power of reasoning.

Coquetry is woman's business.

Women are stoves covered in with marble.

Women are enthusiastic about everything they talk of, and enthusiasm makes one talk freely.

Women are frequently more sensitive than sensible.

A woman sometimes deceives her lover, but her friend, never.

Women go further in love than most men, but men distance them in friendship.

Trickery and treachery are the outcome of a lack of tact.

Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them.

Fools invent fashions, and wise folk follow them.

Men of merit dwell in garrets, and fools in mansions.

Tired folk are quarrelsome.

Great thoughts proceed from the heart.

It is not the biggest oxen that do the best day's work.

Les grands diseurs ne sont pas les grands faiseurs.

Les grands hommes d'action ne construisent pas d'avance et de toutes pièces leur plan de conduite.

—Guizot.

Les grands hommes qui ne doivent ce titre qu'à certaines actions d'éclat, n'ont quelquefois de grand que le spectacle. C'est que, dans les occasions d'éclat l'homme est comme sur le théâtre ; il représente : mais, dans le cours ordinaire des actions de la vie, il est, pour ainsi dire, rendu à lui-même ; c'est lui qu'on voit ; il quitte le personnage, et ne montre plus que sa personne.—Massillon.

Les grands mangeurs et les grands dormeurs sont incapables de rien faire de grand.—Henri IV.

Les grands ne sont grands que parce que nous sommes à genoux : relevons-nous.—Prud'homme.

Les hommes font les lois, les femmes font les mœurs.—Guibert.

Les hommes fripons en détail sont en gros de très honnêtes gens.

—Montesquieu.

Les hommes prêchent chacun pour son saint.

Les hommes rougissent moins de leurs crimes que de leurs faiblesses et de leur vanité.—La Bruyère.

Les hommes seraient de grands saints s'ils aimaient autant Dieu que les femmes.—Saint-Thomas.

Les hommes sont la cause que les femmes ne s'aiment point.—La Bruyère.

Les hommes sont rares.

Les hommes veulent être esclaves quelque part et puiser là de quoi dominer ailleurs.—La Bruyère.

Great talkers are never great doers.

Great men of action do not plan beforehand all the details of their future course of action.

Great men, whose only claim to this title is based on certain famous acts in their life, are sometimes merely great in a theatrical sense. In moments of strenuous action man is, so to speak, on the stage ; he is acting a part : but in the ordinary habits of life, he is, as it were, restored to himself ; we then see the man ; he ceases to be an actor, and displays his real character.

Great eaters and great sleepers are incapable of doing anything else that is great.

Great men are only great because we are on our knees : let us rise to our feet.*

Strikes injure the workmen.

Knowing thieves always have a gag handy

Great thieves hang the little ones.

The fortunate have no friends, for there are none for the unfortunate.

Men make laws, women make manners.

Men who, taken singly, are rogues, are often very honest men when taken collectively.

(Every man extols his own saint.) Men all have an eye to their own interest.

Man blushes less for his crimes than for his frailties and his vanity.

Men would be saints if they loved heaven as well as they do women.

Men are the cause of women hating one another.

Real men are scarce.

Men are willing to be slaves somewhere, to derive thence the wherewithal to domineer elsewhere.

* The motto of his Révolutions de Paris.

Les honnêtes femmes parlent très-volontiers de l'amour platonique, mais, tout en paraissant l'estimer beaucoup, elles s'habillent de telle façon qu'il n'y a pas un seul ruban de leur toilette qui ne nous en éloigne.

 The character of a man forms his style.*
 True love writes clearly; hence, when a love-letter pleases a third party, it was written out of one's head, not from the heart.

* This aphorism is quoted with many variations, e.g., Le style c'est l'homme: "Style is the man" is perhaps the most familiar form of it.

Le style est l'homme même. Le style ne peut donc ni s'enlever, ni se transporter, ni s'altérer: s'il est élevé, noble, sublime, l'auteur sera également admiré dans tous les temps; car il n'y a que la vérité qui soit durable, et même éternelle.—Buffon.

The man of peace is a greater conqueror than the man of war, and a nobler one; he who has in his soul real divine charity, real love of his brother man, has, at the same time, real political genius in his mind. In a word, for the ruler of men saintliness and greatness are identical qualities.

Men should rise above prejudices, but women should submit to them.

Man is ice towards truth, and fire towards falsehood.

The man is always the child, and the child is always the man.

Man is an apprentice, Sorrow is his master.

Man is a traveller seeking his own land. Let him not walk with downcast eyes, but keep them uplifted to the stars in order to know the right path to follow.

Man is neither an angel, nor a beast.

Man is a reed, the feeblest thing in nature. But a reed that can think. The whole universe need not fly to arms to kill him; for a little heat or a drop of water can slay a man. But, even then, man would be nobler than his destroyer, for he would know he died, while the whole universe would know nothing of its victory.

Man proposes and God disposes.

The husband who intrudes in his wife's dressing-room is either a fool or a philosopher.

The man who loves himself alone, hates nothing so much as being left in solitude.

Maints sont bons parce qu'ils ne peuvent nuire.

Many a one is good because he can do no harm.

Mais dans ce monde, il n'y a rien d'assuré que la mort et les impôts.

Nothing is certain in this world but death and taxes.

Mais la grande marque d'amour c'est d'être soumis aux volontés de celle qu'on aime. — Molière.

The great proof of love is to obey the whims of her whom one loves.

Mais l'honneur sans argent n'est qu'une maladie. — Racine.

Honours without money are simply a plague.

Maison d'arrêt.

House of custody ; prison.

Maison de force.

House of correction ; bridewell.

Maison de santé.

Lunatic asylum.

Maison de ville.

The town hall.

Mais qu'on quitte aisément une ancienne maîtresse !

It is as easy to part with an old sweetheart as it is hard to shake hands with an old enemy.

Qu'on embrasse avec peine un ancien ennemi ! — Regnier-Desmarais.

But then a different sort of festival took place. ‡

Mais voici bien une autre fête.

Maître d'hôtel.

People that fancy themselves ill.

Malades imaginaires.

* A famous exclamation of Bossuet in the funeral sermon delivered on Henrietta of England, Duchess d'Orléans. He is describing the effect on the minds of the people, when they hear that the Duchess is dying, and then that she is dead.

† The reply of Talleyrand to an impatient creditor, who ventured to inquire when his bill would be paid.

‡ A line from the fable of "The cat and the old rat," in which is related the ruse of the cat who pretends to be dead in order to deceive the mice. In the midst of their merrymaking, the dead cat suddenly comes to life. The line is now quoted to express an unpleasant surprise like our English phrase, "Here's a pretty kettle of fish."

Mariage d'épervier: la femelle vaut mieux que le mâle.	A hawk's marriage: the hen is the better bird.
Marie ton fils quand tu voudras, mais ta fille quand tu pourras.	Marry your son when you will, and your daughter when you can.
Mari sourd et femme aveugle font toujours bon ménage.	A deaf husband and a blind wife make a happy home.
Marqué à l'A.	(Marked with an A.) Of first-class quality; it is A.†
Mauvaise est la saison quand un loup mange l'autre.	'Tis a hard winter when one wolf eats another.
Mauvaise herbe croît toujours.	A weed always grows.
Mauvaise honte.	False shame.
Mauvaise humeur.	Peevishness.
Mauvaise plaisanterie.	An ill-timed jest.
Mauvais goût.	Bad taste.

* This was the heading of a newspaper article commenting on the causes of the revolution of 1830, which drove Charles X., the last of the Bourbons to reign in France, into exile.

† Money coined at Paris used to be marked A, as money coined in other towns bore other letters. The coins made in Paris were considered to be superior in quality. Hence the expression is used to denote great merit.

Mauvais quart d'heure.

(A bad quarter of an hour.) An uncomfortable time ; a disagreeable experience.

Mauvais sujet.

A rascal.

Mauvais ton.

Vulgarity.

Méchant chien, court lien.

Physician, heal thyself.

Médiocre et rampant, et l'on arrive à tout.—Beaumarchais.

The man with commonplace aspirations, who crawls through life, may reach any position of eminence.

Mélange.

(A mixture.) A light entertainment of a mixed character.

Mêlée.

A disorderly fight.

Même l'abeille ne peut rien sans fleurs.

Even the bee cannot make honey without flowers.

Même le Grand Napoléon ne pouvait pas dîner deux fois. —Alphonse Karr.

Even the great Napoleon could not dine twice in a day.

Même quand l'oiseau marche on sent qu'il a des ailes.—Lemierre.

(Even when a bird walks, we feel that it has wings.) The man of genius is revealed even in trivial matters.

Ménage.

Household ; housekeeping ; economy.

Ménager la chèvre et le chou.

(To save the goat and the cabbage.) To run with the hare and hold with the hounds.*

Mener à la lisière ; mener en laisse ; mener par le nez.

To lead by the nose.

Mentir, c'est l'absolu du mal ! Peu mentir n'est pas possible ; celui qui ment, ment tout le mensonge ; mentir, c'est la face même du démon ; Satan a deux noms, il s'appelle Satan et il s'appelle mensonge.

Lying is the acme of evil. White lies are non-existent, for a lie is wholly a lie ; falsehood is the personification of evil ; Satan has two names : he is called Satan, and he is called the Father of Lies.

—Victor Hugo.

Menu.

The bill of fare.

Mère des passions, des arts et des talents,

Imagination, mother of the arts, the passions, and talent, you people the universe with brilliant phantoms, and with hope or fear alternately gild or blacken the picture of life.

Qui, peuplant l'univers de fantômes brillants,

Et d'espoir tour à tour et de crainte suivie,

Ou dore ou rembrunit le tableau de la vie.—Chénédollé.

Mère pitieuse fait la fille rogneuse.

(A tender mother has a worthless daughter.) Spare the rod and spoil the child.

* This phrase is founded on the old tale of the man who had to cross a stream with a goat, a cabbage, and a wolf. As he could only take one over at a time, the puzzle was which he could safely leave together. A sack of corn, a goose, and a fox, are the man's load in the common English version, but the solution is the same.

Mérite un nom ; mais, pour être heureux, tâche, Avant ta mort, de n'être point nommé.
—De la Faye.

Mieux vaut bon repas que bel habit.

Mieux vaut couard que trop hardi.

Mieux vaut engin que force.

Mieux vaut être tête de chien que queue de lion.

Mieux vaut glisser du pied que de la langue.

Mieux vaut goujat debout qu'empereur enterré.—La Fontaine.

Mieux vaut marcher devant une poule que derrière un bœuf.

Mieux vaut perdre la laine que la brebis.

Mieux vaut plier que rompre.

Mieux vaut pour un pays être dévasté physiquement que d'être ruiné moralement.—Beulé.

Mieux vaut règle que rente.

Mieux vaut tard que jamais.

Mieux vaut terre gâtée que terre perdue.

Mieux vaut un pied que deux échasses.

Mieux vaut un poing de bonne vie, que plein muid de clergie.

Mieux vaut un "tiens" que deux "tu l'auras."

Gentlemen of England, fire first.†

Arrange your cloak as the wind blows.

(To put water in his wine.) To pour oil on troubled waters.

To put the cart before the horse.

(To put one's feet in the dish.) To utter unwelcome truths.

To make a fair copy of a document.

Better alone than in bad company.

Enough is better than too much.

Better a friend upon the road than gold or silver as your load.

Better a good lining to your stomach than a fine coat on your back.

Better be a coward than too rash.

Artifice is better than force.

Better be a dog's head than a lion's tail.

Better a slip of the foot than of the tongue.

(Better a living beggar than a buried emperor.) A living dog is better than a dead lion.

Better to walk before a hen than behind an ox.

Better to lose the wool than the sheep.

Better to bend than break.

A country had better be physically devastated than morally ruined.

Thrift is better than a thousand a year.

Better late than never.

Better waste than lost land.

One foot is better than two wooden legs.

A handful of good life is better than a bushel of learning.

A bird in the hand is better than two in the bush.

* This is the name given, on account of the colour of the vestments worn by the officiating priest, to the celebration of the Mass which is attended by Roman Catholic judges, barristers, etc., at the annual re-opening, after the Vacation, of the Courts of Justice.

† At the battle of Fontenoy Lord Charles Hay, who was marching at the head of the English troops, called out to the French to fire first, but they gallantly refused to do so. The above is the reply that a French officer made to Lord Charles Hay's request.

Mis à la quarantaine.	(Sent into quarantine.) Sent to Coventry.
Mise en scène.	(The setting on the stage.) The manner in which a drama is put on the stage; the scenic effects, &c.
Moi! dis-je, et c'est assez.— Cornelle .	I! say I; that one word is sufficient.
Moins vaut rage que courage.	Any day, pluck will beat running a-muck.
Monde chic.	World of taste; fashionable people.
Mon Dieu est ma roche.	(My God is my rock.) Motto of Lord Fermoy.
Mon Dieu, pourvu que l'on choisisse pour Ambassadeur un honnête homme, le reste est de peu d'importance.— Jules Grévy .	Provided that you choose an honest man to be your Ambassador, the rest (of diplomacy) is of little importance.
Monsieur Dimanche.	(Mr. Dimanche.) A timid creditor.*
Montjoie St. Denis.	(Montjoy St. Denis.) The old war-cry of France.†
Montrer le bout de l'oreille.	(To show the tip of the ear.) To be the ass with the lion's skin.
Montrer le soleil avec un flambeau.	(To show the sun with a candle.) To carry coals to Newcastle.
Montrer patte blanche.	(To show a white paw.) To prove one's identity.‡
Monument de Vanité Détruit pour l'utilité; L'an 2 de l'égalité.	Monument of vanity, destroyed for utility; the second year of equality.§
Morceau avalé n'a plus de goût.	There is no flavour in a tit-bit when you have swallowed it.
Morgue.	A mortuary.
Morte la bête, mort le venin.	Dead men tell no tales.
Mot à mot on fait les gros livres.	Word by word big books are made.

Mots d'usage.	Words in common use.
Mourir! C'est le seul cas où il soit permis à un homme de passer devant une femme.— Alex. Dumas, fils .	Death is the only time when a man may allow himself to precede a woman.
Mourir pour la patrie, c'est encore du bonheur.	To die for one's country—that still remains a joy.
Mousseline de laine.	A thin woollen material.

* Dimanche is a character in Molière's Don Juan. Coming to collect a debt from Don Juan he is so overwhelmed by the effusive reception given him that he has not the courage to ask for his money.

† The word Montjoie was derived from the Monte gaudii, the old name for the halting-places on the road leading to the Abbey of St. Denis. They were called Monte gaudii, or Mountjoys, because the pilgrim rejoiced when he reached them, knowing that he was nearing his journey's end.

‡ The expression is taken from one of the Fables of La Fontaine. The wolf, attempting to get into the goat's house, is discomfited when asked to prove that he is what he pretends to be and to thrust his patte blanche under the door.

§ The famous old bell of Rouen, Georges d'Amboise, was melted down by the Revolutionists of 1793. Medals were made of the metal, and this inscription placed upon them.

stand.) Cobbler, stick to your last.

Never stay in a draught.

(Do not waken the sleeping cat.) Let well alone.

* In the Pantagruel of Rabelais, the lively Panurge has a quarrel with the merchant Dindenault. In order to punish his adversary, Panurge, having bought a sheep from him, throws it into the sea, when the whole flock follow. Hence the words are used of persons who are too ready to imitate the example of other people.

† Boileau's reply to those friends who begged him to refrain from overwork.

Ne sers pas, ne sers jamais, ni les républicains, ni les royalistes, ni les farceurs généralement quelconques qui aspirent, disent-ils, à faire ton bonheur. Ils ne valent guère mieux les uns que les autres. Sers-toi d'eux, c'est légitime, car ils aspirent à se servir de toi; mais écoute bien cette parole sensée : Ne te dévoue jamais.

(Our Lady.) The Church of Notre-Dame is the Cathedral of Paris.

Our natural envy for all who surpass us, led us to invent the fable of Fortune. It seemed too hard to acknowledge the merit of others, and was but too easy to create the idea of Fortune to spare our wounded pride. Fortune is really the magnetism we exercise over men and things, and its home is within us.

(Our disease is made worse by the remedies given to cure it.) The remedy is worse than the disease.

On débite un grand nombre d'histoires fausses sur les femmes, mais elles ne sont qu'une faible compensation des véritables, qu'on ignore.—Meilhan.

On devient cuisinier, mais on naît rôtisseur.—Brillat-Savarin.

On devient innocent quand on est malheureux.—La Fontaine.

On dit.

On dit est un sot.

On dit que "ceux qui savent bien haïr savent bien aimer," comme si ces deux sentiments avaient le même principe. L'affection part du cœur, et la haine de l'amour-propre ou de l'intérêt blessé.—Meilhan.

On doit appeler un chat un chat.

On doit se consoler de n'avoir pas les grands talents, comme on se console de n'avoir pas les grandes places.

On peut être au-dessus de l'un et de l'autre par le cœur.—L'aveugle.

On en a vu bien d'autres.

On est aisément dupé par ce qu'on aime.—Molière.

On est mieux seul qu'avec un sot.

There's no reasoning in love and hate.

It was put to the vote.

A woman has a few years wherein to own beauty, and many wherein she lacks it.

Man is taught by failures.

We often need the aid of one weaker than ourselves.

The knowledge of another's life gives one a kind of moral superiority over him.

We begin by being fools, and end in becoming knaves.

When you keep a man waiting, he employs the time reckoning up your faults.

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

Convicts have their hair cropped.

Many as are the false tales recited about women, they are but a weak compensation for the true ones of which we are unaware.

A cook is made, a roaster is born.

A man in misfortune becomes guileless.

It is said ; a rumour.

"Town talk" is a fool.

The saying goes that "A good hater makes a good lover ;" as if the two feelings had the same motive principle. Affection springs from the heart, and hate from wounded pride or disappointment.

(You should call a cat a cat.) Call a spade a spade.

Man should comfort himself for not having great talent as for not having a high station. The possession of a good heart may give a nobler rank than either talents or worldly eminence can bestow.

We are used to that sort of thing.

We enter and utter a cry—and that is life !

We yawn and depart—and that is death !

We are easily deceived by those whom we love.

One is better alone than with a fool.

On est plus heureux dans la solitude que dans le monde, parce que dans la solitude, on pense aux choses, et que dans le monde, on est forcé de penser aux hommes.—Chamfort.

On est—quand on veut—le maître de son sort.—Louis Ferrier.

On est seul dans la foule quand on souffre ou quand on aime.

—Rochepeàdre.

On est souvent puni par où l'on a péché.

On fait dire aux cloches tout ce qu'on veut.

On fait le loup plus grand qu'il n'est.

On fait plus souvent du bien pour pouvoir impunément faire du mal.

—La Rochefoucauld.

On fait presque toujours les grandes choses sans savoir comment on les fait, et on est tout surpris qu'on les a faites.—Fontenelle.

On fausse son esprit, sa conscience, sa raison, comme on gâte son estomac.

—Chamfort.

On ferait un bien gros livre de tous les peut-être qui se disent en un jour.

On frotte tant le fer qu'à la fin il s'échauffe.

On lie bien le sac avant qu'il soit plein.

On meurt deux fois, je le vois bien.

Cesser d'aimer et d'être aimable,

C'est une mort insupportable;

Cesser de vivre, ce n'est rien.

—Voltaire.

On n'aime que ceux auxquels on pardonne; voilà pourquoi les démocraties aiment les médiocrités.—J'h. Charles.

On naît général comme l'on naît poète.

—Marshal Saxe.

On n'a jamais bon marché de mauvaise marchandise.

On n'a jamais vu chèvre morte de faim.

On n'a point pour la mort de dispense de Rome.—Molière.

On n'a rien pour rien.

On n'aurait guère de plaisir, si l'on ne se flattait point.

There is greater happiness in solitude than in society, for when alone we muse on things, whilst in a throng we must think about men.

We can be, when we wish, the masters of our fate.

The lover and the mourner are alike lonely in the throng.

We are often punished in the way we have sinned.

The ringers make the bells say what they please.

The devil is not so black as they paint him.

Men often do good in order to have impunity for their evil-doing.

Great deeds are nearly always accomplished without our knowing how we have done them, and then achievement fills us with surprise.

Mind, reason, and conscience may be impaired, just as digestion may be spoiled.

It would take a very big book to hold all the ifs and aunts uttered in a day.

Even iron may be chafed into a heat.

A sack is best tied before it is brim-full.

I perceive that we are to endure two kinds of death. The first, the loss of love and the loss of the power to win it, is the unendurable death. The other—the loss of life, is a mere trifle.

We have love only for those we can forgive: hence democracies like commonplace men.

A general, like a poet, is born and not made.

(Bad merchandise is never a good bargain.) Buy cheap, buy dear.

No one ever saw a goat dead of hunger.

There is no dispensation of the Church against death.

Nothing is bought for nothing.

But little pleasure would a man have if he did not flatter himself.

- On ne cherche point à prouver la lumière.
- On ne comprend rien à son barbouillage.
- On ne connaît point le vin aux cercles.
- On ne doit jamais écrire que de ce qu'on aime.— Renan.
- On ne doit pas laisser bonne terre pour mauvais seigneur.
- On ne doit pas prendre au sérieux cette chose sans cohésion et sans but qui s'appelle le monde, et où l'on n'aperçoit rien qui ait un sens sérieux. Dire des riens dont le souvenir s'efface à mesure qu'on les dit, écouter des discussions oiseuses que le bon goût défend même d'approfondir, c'est faire preuve d'usage du monde, mais ce n'est rien faire du tout.

- On n'est jamais si heureux, ni si malheureux, qu'on se l'imagine. We are never very just towards a rival.
- On n'est point l'ami d'une femme lorsqu'on peut être son amant. — Falzac. We are never so happy, nor so unhappy, as we suppose.
- On n'est point un homme d'esprit pour avoir beaucoup d'idées, comme on n'est pas un bon général pour avoir beaucoup de soldats. No man who could be a woman's lover, is content to be her friend.
- On ne trompe point en bien ; la fourberie ajoute la malice au mensonge. — La Bruyère. One is not a genius merely by possessing many ideas, as, in the same way, a general is not a great strategist because he has many soldiers under his command.

- On parle trop de l'ingratitude de l'enfant. Le don de la vie peut bien être payé en rancune. — Geisaut. There is little spoken unless vanity prompts.
- On perd plus de la moitié d'un ami quand il devient amoureux. — Mme de Sartory. The ingratitude of children is often censured. But the gift of life may often justly be paid for in rancour.
- On perd tout le temps qu'on peut mieux employer. — La Bruyère. More than half your friend is lost to you when he falls in love.
- On peut aisément se faire trop valoir. All the time is lost that might be better employed.
- On peut avoir un grand esprit et une âme vulgaire ; une intelligence capable d'illuminer son siècle et une âme capable de le déshonorer : on peut être un grand homme par l'esprit et un misérable par le cœur. — Lacordaire. It is easy to be too conceited.
- A man may have a lofty mind and a base soul ; intelligence capable of enlightening his generation and a spirit capable of disgracing it ; his intellect may make him great, and his heart make him despicable.

On peut diviser la vie des femmes en trois époques : Dans la première elles rêvent l'amour ; dans la seconde elles le font ; dans la troisième elles le regrettent.—Saint Prosper.

On peut faire d'énormes sottises à Paris, sans que la passion soit de la partie. La vanité est cent fois plus coûteuse que tous les vices.—Edm. About.

On peut longtemps, chez notre espee, fermer la porte à la raison ; Mais, dès qu'elle entre avec adresse, Elle reste dans la maison, Et bientôt elle en est maîtresse.

—Voltaire.

On peut payer l'or trop cher.

On peut savoir à un sou près ce que cela coûtera.

On peut souvent faire d'une pierre deux coups.

On pourrait s'attirer une bien mauvaise affaire.

On pourra toujours payer d'audace.

On prend le peuple par les oreilles, comme on prend un pot par les anses.

On prend souvent l'indolence pour la patience.

On revient toujours à ses premiers amours.

On s'écrie qu'il ne faut au génie que deux choses : la vie et la rêverie, le pain et le temps. Le pain ! Dieu a dit à l'homme qu'il ne le mangerait qu'à la sueur de son visage. Pourquoi le génie serait-il dispensé de cette loi du travail, qui est la loi de Dieu ? — Mon travail, dit le génie, c'est de rêver.—Hélas ! la rêverie n'est pas une profession que la société puisse reconnaître et récompenser.

—Saint Marc Girardin.

On se croyait aimé, parce que la personne était aimable, avait des yeux brillants à notre approche, et se trouvait n'avoir habituellement jusque là, presque jamais parlé à nous. Et puis un jour, dans une simple réflexion échappée à la personne devant un visiteur, on découvre que l'on avait jamais eu, même la plus simple idée en commun.—L. Deprés.

On se fait à tout.

Woman's life may be divided into three stages ; in the first she dreams of love, in the second experiences it, in the last she regrets it.

In Paris one may commit great follies without feeling any impulse of passion to do so. Vanity is a hundred times more expensive than all the vices.

We are able to keep the door shut against reason for a long time ; but, when it has once effected an entry, it soon becomes mistress of the house.

Too heavy a price may be paid for wealth.

You can tell to a halfpenny what it will cost.

One can often kill two birds with one stone.

You might get yourself into very hot water.

Anyhow we can put a bold front on it.

The people should be taken by the ears as a pot is taken by the handle.

Indolence is often taken for patience.

We always return to our first loves.

It is asserted that genius requires " Life and meditation--bread and time." Bread ! God hath said : man must earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Why should genius be set free from this heavenly law of labour ? My labour is in musing, says Genius. Alas ! musing is not a calling that society can approve and recompense.

A man fancies himself loved because the woman is pleasant and looks brighter at his approach, although she hardly speaks to him. But one day, a simple remark discovers that they had never a single idea in common.

They can turn their hand to anything.

* This song was popular among the faithful partisans of the Bourbons. At a dinner given to some of the soldiers at Versailles on the first of October, 1789, the guests greeted Louis XVI. and Marie-Antoinette by singing this song when the ill-fated king and queen entered the room.

† The word is derived from the Latin, Aurea-flamma, " the flame-coloured " flag. It was the standard of the Abbey of St. Denis, the patron saint of France. Pleurer à chaudes larmes.

Pleurer des larmes de sang.

Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose.

Plus d'honneur que d'honneurs.

Plus fait douceur que violence.

—La Fontaine.

Plus inconstant que l'onde et le nuage,
La temps s'entuit, pourquoi le regretter ?

Plus le péril est grand, plus doux en est le fruit.—Corneille.

Few men have been admired by their own servants.*

A little and peace with it is the gift of God.

Nations, form a holy alliance, and give us your hand.

He very nearly fell.

Can we cause grief to that which we love ?

The last resort.

(Make) way for the ladies.

Ormolu; brass with the appearance of gold.

Full powers.

(To shed hot tears.) To weep unrestrainedly.

(To shed tears of blood.) To suffer the agonies of remorse or disappointment.

The more it changes, the more it is the same thing.

(More honour than honours.) More glory than gain.

Gentleness counts more victories than violence.

More quickly changing than the waves and clouds,

Time flies, so why regret it ?

The greater the peril, the sweeter the gain.

* See note on Il n'y a pas de grand homme.

Plus l'homme de génie se rapproche de Dieu, plus il a charge d'âmes.

—A. Houssaye.

Plus on est de fous, plus on rit.

Plus on se hâte, moins on avance.

Plus près est la chair que la chemise.

Plus royaliste que le roi.

Plus sages que les sages.

Plutôt mourir que changer.

Plutôt souffrir que mourir,

C'est la devise des hommes.

—La Fontaine.

Point d'appui.

Point d'argent, point de Suisse.

—Racine.

Point de nouvelles, bonnes nouvelles.

Point de roses sans épines.

Polisson.

Port de relâche.

Pose.

Possession vaut titre.

Poste restante.

Pot au feu.

Pour avoir du goût, il faut avoir de l'âme. — Vauvenargues.

Pour bien instruire, il ne faut pas dire tout ce qu'on sait, mais seulement ce qui convient à ceux qu'on instruit.

—La Harpe.

Pour comble de bonheur.

Pour connaître un homme, il faut avoir mangé un muid de sel avec lui.

Pour couper court.

Pour encourager les autres. — Voltaire.

Pour faire rire.

Pour féconder le sillon où germe l'avenir des peuples libres, il n'est pas nécessaire de verser le sang, il suffit de répandre les idées.

—Victor Hugo.

The more divine a man of genius becomes, of the more souls he is the guide.

The greater the fool, the louder his laugh.

The more haste, the less speed.

(My flesh is nearer to me than my shirt.)

I love my friends well, but myself better.

A greater royalist than the king himself.

More wise than the wise.

Sooner die than change.

"Better to suffer than to die"—that is the guiding motto of mankind.

Point of support; prop.

(No money, no Swiss.) No work without pay.*

No news is good news.

No rose without a thorn.

A rascal; a blackguard.

A port which ships can put into.

Position; attitude.

Possession is nine points of the law.

(Post left.) Place at the Post Office where letters may be addressed to be left till called for.

(Vegetable broth.) The staple food of the French peasantry.

† To have taste one must have an imaginative soul.

To teach well we need not say all that we know, but only what is useful for the pupil to hear.

Pour fuir la vulgarité, on tombait dans le factice.—Renan.

Pour l'amour du grec.—Molière.

Pour la populace ce n'est jamais par envie d'attaquer qu'elle se soulève, mais par impatience de souffrir.

—Sully.

Pour le peuple, mieux valait s'abaisser devant un maréchal de France qui a reçu de l'éducation, que devant un manant de grippe-sou paré de son écharpe tricolore.—Marat.

(Pour les étrangers) le voyageur n'est qu'un sac d'écus qu'il s'agit de désenfler le plus vite possible.

—Victor Hugo.

Pour le succès il ne faut pas de talent, mais de l'à-propos. Habileté d'aujourd'hui, d'hier et d'avant-hier, soutenue, vigilante, indéfatigable—voilà le succès.—Ph. Chasles.

Pour néant demande conseil qui ne le veut croire.

Pour paraître honnête homme, en un mot, il faut l'être ; Et jamais, quoi qu'il fasse, un mortel ici-bas,

Ne peut aux yeux du monde être ce qu'il n'est pas. —Boucau.

Pour passer le temps.

Pour prendre congé (P. P. C.).

Pour que la goutte d'eau sorte de $\frac{1}{2}$, poussière,

Et redevenue perle en sa splendeur première,

Il suffit, c'est ainsi que tout remonte au jour.

D'un rayon de soleil ou d'un rayon d'amour!—Victor Hugo.

"Pourquoi avez-vous si mal parlé de cet homme?" demandai-je un jour à Henri Heine. "Parce que je l'avais mal jugé." "Pourquoi l'avez-vous mal jugé?" "Parce que je l'enviais." L'envie est une infériorité qui s'avoue.

—Ph. Chasles.

Pourquoi pleurez-vous? M'avez-vous cru immortel?—Louis XIV.

In avoiding vulgarity one falls into artificiality.

For the love of Greek.*

The people never revolt for the mere love of it, but because they cannot endure their suffering.

The lower classes had better bow to a field-marshal who has been educated fitly, than to a money-grubbing clown in a mayor's chain-of-office.

The tourist (among foreigners) is merely a moneybag that must be lightened as soon as possible.

To succeed, talent is not so much needed as timeliness. Sustained, vigilant, and indefatigable dexterity—this is success.

It is no use asking advice if you will not follow it.

In a word, in order to appear a man of honour, one must be one in reality. Whatever he does, no mortal man on the earth can appear to the eyes of others different from what he really is.

To pass away the time.

To take leave.

To restore the drop of water in the mire to its primitive pearl-like splendour, it suffices to apply the remedy which brings all things from darkness to light, a sunbeam or a ray of love.

"Why did you speak so ill of that man?" I asked Henri Heine one day. "Because I misjudged him." "Why did you misjudge him?" "Because I envied him." Envy is a confession of inferiority.

Why do you weep? Did you think me to be immortal? †

* In the famous comedy, the Femmes savantes, Philaminte, one of these learned ladies, hearing that Vadius knows Greek, is so enchanted by finding so learned a man, that she kisses him, saying that it is "for love of Greek" that she does so.

† So the dying king said to some pages whom he saw weeping near his bed.

Pourrait-il d'un feu qui dévore
Eprouver deux fois les effets ?
Les cendres s'échauffent encore,
Mais ne se rallument jamais.

—L. Andrieux.

Pour rire.

Pour s'établir dans le monde, on fait

Ni or, ni toile, et moins pucelle.

Prendre ses jambes à son cou.

Prendre un billet de parterre.

Prendre une condition.

Prends le premier conseil d'une femme et non le second.

Prenez de l'amour ce qu'un homme sobre prend de vin, mais ne devenez pas un ivrogne.—Alfred de Musset.

Is it possible to experience a second time
the force of love's devouring flame ?
The ashes may renew their warmth,
but the fire is never kindled again.

(To laugh at.) Ludicrous ; absurd.

To gain a position in the world, one must do one's best to appear as if it has been already gained.

For ever.

A woman's own adventures are more entertaining than any she can read.

For one Orpheus who followed his wife to Hades, how many widowers, alas ! would not even go to Paradise
if there they expected to find theirs.

One pleasure may cost a thousand pains.

In order to live long, one must be old (in habits) early.

To accomplish the object.

Can you translate at sight ?

A summary ; an epitome.

(Take me as I am.) Motto of the Marquis of Ely.

To think the moon is made of green cheese.

To take anybody's side.

To catch the ball as it bounds ; to seize an opportunity.

(To take the key of the fields.) To take French leave.

(To seize the moon with one's teeth.)
To try to do the impossible.

(To catch the fly.) To make a fuss about nothing.

Take time by the forelock.

Choose neither jewels, linen, nor wife by candle-light.

To run away as fast as one's legs will go.

(To take a ticket for the pit.) To tumble ; to come down in the world.

To take service.

Follow a woman's first advice, not her second.

Sip love as a sober man takes wine, and never become besotted with it.

Que ceux qui lisent soient moraux, ceux qui écrivent le deviendront par la force des choses. Si la foule se presse autour des étalages à scandale, l'explosion d'immoralité fera des blessés. S'il y a vide, elle sera sans danger.—Pierre Véron.

The speech held the hearers because understood,

Whilst all your fine nonsense for nothing was good.

Seeing is believing.

When a thing is lost to us, we know how much 'twas worth.

When we claim to model our acts on another's, we ought to imitate the good side of his character.

When all other sins grow old avarice is still young.

(When everybody is wrong, everybody is right.) When all are sinners, the single sinner escapes punishment.

When a friend is successful he is loved somewhat less, but his friendship is more often boasted of.

When a dog is drowning, every one offers him a drink.

When a thing may be done in two ways, it is almost always done in the apparently least natural.

When once the multitude are led by one who knows how to use liberty as a lure, they blindly follow at the mere sound of that word.

When a passage in a book elevates the mind and inspires noble and courageous feelings, look for no other standard whereby to judge the work : it is good and wrought by a master hand.

When glory comes memory departs.

When your eyes at your birth did open to the world, you wept, my child, while those who saw you smiled. May you live so well that, at your last moments, all may weep and you may smile.

If readers be moral, writers become so by the force of circumstances. If the mob will flock up to scandalous shows, the explosion of immorality will hurt them. Establish a vacuum round them, and there will cease to be any danger.

Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère ?

Que faire ?

Que la terre est petite à qui la voit des cieux !—Delille.

Quelle imprévoyance de vivre toujours au jour le jour.

Quelque chose.

Quelque heureusement doués que nous soyons, nous ne devons en tirer vanité.
—Boniface.

Quelques crimes toujours précèdent les grands crimes.—Racine.

Que lui importe cela ?

Que nous habitons ici ou à côté, nous sommes, non les citoyens d'un pays ou d'un monde, mais, en vérité, les citoyens du Ciel.

—Camille Flammarion.

Qu'est-ce que le Tiers État ? Tout.
Qu'a-t-il ? Rien. Que veut-il ? Y devenir quelque chose.

Que ta chemise ne sache ta guise.

Qui a bon cœur a toujours le temps à propos.—Gaucher de Châtillon.

Qui a bonne femme, est bien allié.

Qui a bonne tête ne manque pas de chapeaux.

Qui a bu boira.

Qui a des filles est toujours berger.

Qui à deux maîtres servira

A un de ceux il mentira.

Qui a froid souffle le feu.

Qui a honte de manger a honte de vivre.

Qui aime bien, châtie bien.

(What the devil did he go to do in that galley?) Why on earth did he go to that place ? *

What is to be done ?

How small is the earth to him who looks from Heaven.

How imprudent always to live from hand to mouth.

A trifle ; something.

However richly we may be endowed, we ought not to be vain on that account.

(Great crimes are always preceded by lesser ones.) Nemo repente fuit turpissimus.

What's that to him ?

Whether we dwell here or there, we are not citizens of this country or this world, but citizens of Heaven.

What is the Third Estate ? Everything.

What does it possess ? Nothing.

What does it desire ? To become something.†

Don't let your cap know what thoughts it covers.

What do you require ?

Every moment is the right moment for the man who has a stout heart.

He who has a good wife, has a good ally.

A good head need not go hatless.

(He who has drunk will drink again.)
Ever drunk, ever dry.

He who has daughters must always be a shepherd.

Who would two masters serve, is also to one or the other.

(Let the one who is cold blow the fire.)
Who has most need should the most work.

He who is ashamed to eat is ashamed to live.

(He loves well who chastises well.)
Spare the rod and spoil the child.*

* This familiar saying is found in Molière's Fourberies de Scapin. The miser Gêronte is told that his son has been carried off in a Turkish galley. Unwilling to offer a ransom, he constantly repeats this question.

† This was the title of a famous pamphlet by Sieyès, which had an important part in helping the Revolution. The title itself is thought to have been not the work of Sieyès but of Chamfort.

Qui aime bien, tard oublie.

Qui aime trop le petit succès renonce à la grande gloire. — Pl. Chastles.

Qui a la bourse pleine prêche au pauvre.

Qui a tête de cire ne doit pas s'approcher du feu.

Qui attend les souliers d'un mort risque d'aller pieds nus.

Qui bien mange, et qui bien dort,
Ne doit encore craindre la mort.

Qui casse les verres les paye.

Qui cesse d'être ami ne l'a jamais été.

Qui chapon mange chapon lui vient.

Qui commence et ne parfait, sa peine perd.

Qui compte sans son hôte, compte deux fois.

Quiconque refuse d'être loué par les autres, se loue lui-même. — Mascaron.

Quiconque veut trouver quelques bons mots n'a qu'à dire beaucoup de sottises. — J. J. Rousseau.

Qui court deux lièvres, n'en prendra aucun.

Qui donner peut, il a maint bon voisin.

Qui dort, dine.

Qui doute ne se trompe point.

Qui écoute aux portes, entend plus qu'il ne désire.

Qui en dit du mal, veut l'acheter.

Qui épargne, gagne.

Qui épargne le vice, fait tort à la vertu.

Qui est avec les loups, il lui faut hurler.

Qui est-ce qui attachera le grelot ?

Qui est content est riche.

Qui est malade au mois de Mai,
Tout l'an demeure sain et gai.

Qui est malade de folie,
Ne s'en guérit toute sa vie.

Qui est sur la mer, il ne fait pas des vents ce qu'il veut.

A true lover is slow in forgetting.

When a man covets petty successes, he has given up hopes of glory.

Full purse preaches to the penniless.

A head of wax must not go near the fire.

He who waits for a dead man's shoes is like to go barefoot.

He who eats well and sleeps well need not think his end is near.

Who breaks, pays.

(He who has ceased to be my friend, was never my friend.) True friendship never dies.

Live high, and high living will come to you.

It is labour lost to begin and not complete.

He who reckons without his host, will have to reckon a second time.

Whoso refuses others' praise, praises himself.

Chatter a lot of nonsense and you'll find a few clever phrases amongst it.

(He that hunts two hares will catch neither.) Two many irons in the fire.

(He who is able to give has many a kind neighbour.) The rich never lack friends.

He who sleeps, dines.

Doubt, and you'll not be deceived.

(He who listens at doors hears more than he likes.) Listeners never hear any good of themselves.

He who decries a thing, wants to buy it.

A penny saved is a penny gained.

He who spares vice wrongs virtue.

(You must howl with the wolves.) When you are at Rome, do as the Romans do.

(Who will bell the cat ?) Who will take the post of danger ?

The contented man is always rich enough.

He who is sick in the month of May
The rest of the year is well and gay.

He who is sick with folly, is sick and sorry all his life.

A man at sea cannot direct the winds.

Qui femme a, noise a.
 Qui femme vieille ou laide prend,
 Donne à entendre qu'il aime argent.
 Qui fuit, peut revenir aussi,
 Qui meurt, il n'en est pas ainsi.

Qui n'a, ne peut.
 Qui n'a pas argent en bourse, ait miel
 en bouche.

Qui n'a pas l'esprit de son âge,
 De son âge a tout le malheur !
 —Voltaire.

Qui n'a point de sens à trente ans, n'en aura jamais.

Qui naquit chat, court après les souris.

Qui n'a qu'un œil, bien le garde.

Qui n'a rien, ne craint rien.

Qui n'a santé, n'a rien.

Qui ne châtie culot, ne châtie culasse.

Qui ne craint point la mort ne craint point les menaces.—Corneille.

Qui ne dit rien consent.

Qui ne fait rien, fait mal.

Qui ne gagne, perd.

Qui n'entend qu'une cloche n'entend
 qu'un son.

Qui ne parle, n'erre.

Who hath a wife hath always strife.
 Who doth an ugly maiden woo,
 'Tis plain that he loves money too.

(He who runs away may return again, but he who is killed cannot do so.)

For he who fights and runs away
 May live to fight another day ;
 But he who is in battle slain
 Can never rise and fight again.—Ray

It's always the clever player who wins.

He who goes far from home to seek a wife, is either deceived or a deceiver.

Love me, love my dog.

Let him who loves me follow me ! *

He who seeks for evil, never fails to find it.

A bully is always a coward.

He who rides the mule must shoe her.

What does it matter !

A child born on Sunday never dies of the plague.

Empty pockets cannot give.

He who has no money in his purse must have a honeyed tongue.

The man whose inclinations are not suited to his age, feels the full burden of his years.

(He who has no sense at thirty, will never have any.) A fool at forty is a fool indeed.

(Who is born a cat will run after mice.)
 Nature will out.

A man with only one eye must take good care of it.

(He who owns nothing, has nothing to fear.) The beggar is not afraid of the thief.

Without health, the rest is nothing.

He who corrects not youth controls not age.

The man who dreads not death cannot be daunted by threats.

Silence gives consent.

He who does nothing, does amiss.

He who does not win, loses.

(Who hears only one bell, hears only one sound.) One story is good till another is told.

Silence makes no mistakes.

* The battle-cry of Francis I. at Marignano, where the French army defeated the Milanese in the year 1515.

- Qui ne peut mordre, ne doit pas montrer les dents.
 He who can't bite should not show his teeth.
- Qui ne prend quand il peut,
 Il n'aura quand il veut.
 He that will not when he may,
 When he will shall have nay.
- Qui ne regarde pas en avant, se trouve en arrière.
 He who looks not ahead finds himself behind.
- Qui ne retire de sa vache que la queue, ne perd pas tout.
 He who gets back only the tail of his cow does not lose all.
- Qui ne risque rien n'a rien.
 Nothing venture nothing gain.
- Qui ne sait bien parler de son métier, il ne le sait pas.
 A good workman does not defame his craft.
- Qui ne se lasse pas, lasse l'adversité.
 He who does not grow tired, tires out his ill-luck at last.
- Qui ne sort que de jour, n'a que faire de lanterne.
 He who goes abroad by day has no need of a lantern.
- Qui ne souffre pas seul, ne souffre pas tant.
 Sufferings are lessened when you share them with others.
- Qui nous délivrera des Grecs et des Romains ?—Berchoux.
 (Who will deliver us from the Greeks and Romans ?) Who will set us free from the tyranny of the ancient classical models in literature ?
- Qui pardonne aisément invite à l'offenser.—Corneille.
 He who pardons too readily invites fresh insult.
- Qui parle, sème ; qui écoute, recueille.
 Who speaks, sows ; who listens, reaps.
- Qui partout va, partout prend.
 He who goes everywhere gleans everywhere.
- Qui passe un jour d'hiver, il passe un de ses ennemis mortels.
 Get over a winter's day, and you "get over" a mortal enemy.
- Qui paye, a bien le droit de donner son avis.
 He who pays, has the right to advise.
- Qui paye tôt, emprunte quand il veut.
 The ready payer can borrow anywhere.
- Qui pense ?
 (Who thinks ?) Motto of the Earl of Howth.
- Qui perd, pêche.
 He who loses sins.
- Qui peut ce qui lui plaît, commande alors qu'il prie.—Corneille.
 He who can realize his wishes can command what he prays for.
- Qui plaisir fait plaisir requiert.
 One good turn asketh another.
- Qui plus qu'il n'a vaillant dépend, il fait la corde à quoi se pend.
 He that spends more than he is worth makes a rope to hang himself with.
- Qui plus sait, plus se tait.
 The more a man knows, the less he talks.
- Qui pourrait vivre sans espoir ?
 If hope were dead, who could live ?
- Qui premier vient au moulin, premier doit moudre.
 (Whoso first cometh to the mill, first grist.) First come, first served.
- Qui prend une femme pour sa dot, à la liberté tourne le dos.
 Who takes a wife for a dower, surrenders his power.
- Qui prête à l'amii, perd au double.
 Lend your friend money and you will lose friend and money.
- Qui prouve trop, ne prouve rien.
 Who proves too much proves nothing.

Qui que tu sois, voici ton maître ;
Il l'est, le fut, ou le doit être.

An age.

The golden age (of Louis XIV.).

The dark ages.

If I am not in a state of grace before God, I pray God that it may be vouchsafed to me; if I am, I pray God that I may be preserved in it.‡

If I can.§

If I knew some scheme which was advantageous to myself but hurtful to my kindred, I would banish it from my mind. If I knew some scheme which was advantageous to my kindred but hurtful to my country, I would try to forget it. If I knew what was of advantage to my country, but hurtful to Europe and the human race, I should regard it as a crime.

If I held all truths in my hand, I should be very careful how I delivered them to mankind.||

If youth had knowledge! if age had the power!

If good faith were to be banished from the rest of the world, it must still be found in the mouth of kings.¶

* A saying from the fable of the Wolf and the Lamb. The wolf, being unable to show that the lamb has dirtied the water in the river, is determined to find an excuse for a quarrel by some means.

† Voltaire justified this expression of his opinion by erecting a church to the Deity (Erexit Deo Voltairi) in Ferney at his own charges.

§ This is the motto of the Colquhoun family. An ancestor of this family, being asked by the king to retake Dumbarton Castle, replied: Si je puis.

|| The opinion that truths may sometimes be dangerous, if too freely imparted to untrained minds, is common both to philosophers and theologians.

¶ After the Black Prince had won the battle of Poitiers, 1356, John II., King of France, was brought as a prisoner to England. Permitted to return to France for a time, in order to arrange terms of peace, he was implored by his friends not to return to England. Like the Roman Regulus, true to a promise made even to a foe, he made this reply to the suggestions of his friends.

Si l'âme est immatérielle, elle peut survivre au corps; et si elle lui survit, la Providence est justifiée. Quand je n'aurais d'autre preuve de l'immatérialité de l'âme que le triomphe du méchant et l'oppression du juste en ce monde, cela seul m'empêcherait d'en douter.—J. J. Rousseau.

Si l'amour donne de l'esprit aux bêtes, c'est sans doute celui qu'il ôte aux gens d'esprit.—Alphonse Karr.

Si l'amour porte des ailes
N'est-ce pas pour voltiger?

—Beaumarchais.

Si l'amour résiste rarement à l'absence, ce n'est pas seulement par l'oubli. C'est que, de loin, les imperfections disparaissent, et que lorsque l'on voit ensuite sa maîtresse telle qu'elle est, et non telle qu'on se la figurait, on se dit : " Comment, ce n'est que cela ? " Et l'on passe.—La Bruyère.

Si le ciel tombait il y aurait bien des alouettes prises.

Si le diable étoit or, il deviendrait monnoie.—Angot.

Si le monde n'attachoit les hommes que par le bonheur de leur condition présente, comme il ne fait point d'heureux, il ne feroit point d'adorateurs : l'avenir qu'il nous montre toujours, est sa grande ressource et sa séduction la plus inévitable ; il nous lie par ses espérances, ne pouvant nous satisfaire par ses dons ; et l'erreur de ses promesses nous endort toujours sur le néant de tous ses bienfaits.—Massillon.

Si le peuple manque de pain, qu'il mange de la brioche.

If the soul be immaterial, it may survive the body, and then Providence is justified. The triumph of the evil-doer and oppression of the just man in this world alone prevents me doubting that the soul is spiritual in its nature, even if I had no other proof of it.

If Cupid gives wit to the stupid, it must be what he deprives wise men of.

(If Love wears wings, is it not that he may fly ?) Cupid has wings and quickly flies away.

If love rarely survives absence, it is not only through forgetfulness, but because imperfections vanish when observed from afar. When, however, the idol is seen as she is and not as fancied, one says : Is this all ? and passes by.

If hope feeds love, when hope is gone love must expire, and lacking fuel, it dies, an extinguished fire.

If the mother of crime be Poverty, the father is deficiency of intellect.

If the life and death of Socrates are those of a sage, the life and death of Jesus Christ are those of a God.

If the sky were to fall we should catch plenty of larks.

If the devil were made of gold, he would turn into money.

If the world gained the affection of men for no other reason than the happiness of their present condition, it would have few worshippers, since it makes no men happy. It is the future which is the great and invincible attraction which the world offers. Not being able to satisfy us with its present gifts, the world binds us to itself by the hopes of the future which it holds out ; and the deceitful fancies that its promises arouse, dull our perceptions to the nothingness of all its gifts.

If the people have no bread, let them eat cake.*

* When about to take command of the army in the field, Villars took leave of Louis XIV. with these words. The Court of Versailles was full of backbiters, and then, as always, the absent were ever in the wrong.

† The origin of this proverbialism is the old fable of the frogs, who asked Jupiter for a king. At first he sent them a log, but they foolishly asked for a more active monarch. So the angry god sent them a water-snake (a crane in La Fontaine's version), who swallowed up all his subjects.

* These words formed part of the speech that Napoleon delivered to his soldiers when he invaded Egypt. A good story is told in connection with this well-known saying. When the English army were occupying Egypt in 1882, an officer is said to have repeated these words in a message that he signalled from one of the pyramids to Lord Wolseley. The general, however, so far from appreciating the quotation, replied, "Come down, and don't make a fool of yourself."

Those who read their mind aright do not know their heart.

We owe all boons to fortune or to birth (except a friend). That is the only possession we can regard as gained by our own merits.

All the efforts of violence cannot enfeeble truth ; they only exalt it the more. All the light of truth can do nothing to stay violence, but only irritates it the more. Nevertheless, let none maintain that this makes things even, because there is this absolute difference between them : the course of violence is bounded by God's order, who makes its onslaught rebound to the glory of the truth assailed, to the end that truth shall exist eternally and finally triumph over its enemies. For truth is eternal and mighty as God himself.

Every respect is due to the living : to the others we owe nothing but the truth.

Un mal attire l'autre.

Un malheur ne vient jamais seul.

Un mari est un emplâtre qui guérit tous les maux des filles.—Molière.

Un marteau d'argent rompt une porte de fer.

Un mauvais accommodement vaut mieux qu'un bon procès.

A truth beyond comprehension becomes an error.

A wise man may sometimes take a lesson from a fool.

A fool is always beginning.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed.

A man on a handsome horse is always proud.

A man over head and ears in debt.

At fifty a man is more to be dreaded than at any other age. Then he employs a dearly bought experience and the fortune he probably possesses to make conquests.

A man is the child of his own works.

A man keeps another's secret better than his own ; a woman, on the contrary, keeps her own secret better than that of another.

A dead man has neither relations nor friends.

A man by himself is no man.

A wise man is superior to every insult that one may offer him ; and restraint and endurance are the dignified reply that we ought to make to such attacks.

An indescribable something which has no name in any language.*

A book has always been for me a counsellor, an eloquent and soothing consoler, whose aid I am not fain to exhaust at once, but which I keep for great events.

A book is a friend that never deceives us.

One mischief falls upon the neck of another.

Misfortunes seldom come alone.

A husband is a panacea for all the woes of maidenhood.

(A silver hammer breaks down an iron door.) A silver key will open any gate.

Better be worsted in a compromise, than successful in a lawsuit.

* So Bossuet, in his famous funeral oration over Henrietta of England, the Duchess d'Orléans, speaks of the condition of the human body after death. Je ne sais quoi, as an expression for something impossible to define, has become almost a part of our own language.

Un menteur est toujours prodigue de serments.—Corneille.

Un ministre du commerce a dit ce beau mot : " Si la Parisienne n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer." En effet, le budget d'une Parisienne ne passerait pas aussi vite au Corps législatif que le budget de la France. Elle se moque du nécessaire pourvu qu'elle ait le superflu. Elle a ses jours d'économie. Elle prend une voiture à l'heure pour aller acheter une demi-livre de crevettes.—Arsène Houssaye.

Plus il devient connu, moins il devient célèbre. — Jules Viard.

Un tiens vaut deux tu l'auras.

Un traducteur est un musicien barbare qui veut absolument jouer sur la flûte un air qui a été écrit pour le violon.

—Gerfaut.

Un vaurien qui bat le pavé.

Un ver se recoquille quand on marche dessus.

Vache de loin a lait assez.

Valet de chambre.

A liar is always full of vows and protestations.

A Secretary of the Board of Trade said wittily : " If there were no Parisian ladies, they would have to be invented." Indeed their budget would not pass the House as quickly as the National one. The Parisian lady laughs at the necessities of life if she has the superfluities, and on her saving days, hires a cab by the hour to buy a dish of prawns.

(A little absence does great good.) Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

Long friendships and short reckonings.

An old ox makes a straight furrow.

Old bachelor.

A lout enriched forgets his relations and friends.

The town which parleys is half-surrendered.

(Wine of honour.) Cup of welcome ; wine drunk in honour of a welcome guest.

Twenty years' life is a very severe lesson for us.

There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip.

Opposite ; face to face.

Success to trifling ! Trifles for ever !

Long live the king.

* During the 18th century the French Parliament was twice expelled to Pontoise, as the members had incurred the displeasure of the king. At Pontoise they were out of touch with current affairs, and, on their return to the capital, gave uncertain replies to questions that were put to them. This is said to be the origin of this proverbial expression.

* Goethe used an adaptation of this phrase, Auch ich in Arkadien, "I, too, have been in Arcadia," as the motto for his "Travels in Italy." In the Latin form, Et ego in Arcadia, these words appear upon the monument erected in Rome by Chateaubriand in honour of Poussin, the great painter having used them as the title of one of his pictures. In the foreground of this picture, representing a dance of shepherdesses, Poussin introduced a tombstone, with the words inscribed, Et moi aussi, je vécus en Arcadie. "I, too, once lived in Arcadia."

Architecture is frozen music.

The noblest action has always only a temporary influence; a work of genius, on the contrary, exists and moves, beneficent and inspiring, throughout the ages. Of actions only the memory abides, and this becomes continually more and more vague, changed, and indifferent, and is bound to be gradually effaced, unless history takes it up, and petri-fying it, hands it on to posterity.
Works, however, are of themselves immortal, and, especially if they are written, may survive for all time.

Honour is, objectively, the opinion

* Schiller puts these words into the mouth of Philip II of Spain in "Don Carlos." The idea, according to Buchmann, is an old one, for Herodotus narrates that Xerxes, the Persian king, made a somewhat similar remark concerning his own projected conquests.

† In Bürger's famous poem Lenore, the heroine, distracted owing to her lover's not returning from the war, denies the existence of a Divine Providence. But at midnight her lover rides up to her door, and asks her to ride back with him to the army. Throughout the night they gallop at a furious pace, and whenever Lenore asks the reason for such haste, her lover replies—Die Todten reiten schnell! Finally, the form of the man changes into that of a skeleton, and the earth opens to swallow up both the rider and the maid.

* Bismarck used these words in a speech delivered by him in September, 1864. It is usual to speak of the great statesman as the "man of blood and iron." The expression Eisen und Blut seems to have been suggested by a phrase in one of Arndt's poems.

† In these words is said to be contained the moral of Goethe's "Faust," that life must be a constant renunciation and a shunning of all unholy pleasures.

Neujahrstag.
Nicht alles an einen Nagel hängen.

Nicht Alles, was glänzt, ist Gold.
Nicht Glückseligkeit ist der Zweck unsers Daseins, sondern Glückwürdigkeit.—Fichte. •
Nichts andres bleibt uns übrig.

By force; by compulsion.
To pay back in the same coin; to give tit for tat.
(With skin and hair.) Tooth and nail; thoroughly.
At the top of one's voice.
(The middle way is the safe way.)
Medio tutissimus ibis.
In the height of summer.
By return of post.
All foolish people are wont to say,
"To-morrow, to-morrow, not to-day!"
(The morning hour has gold in its mouth.) Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise.
By word of mouth.
Coin.
Music is the poetry of the air.

We are not going to Canossa.*
In my opinion; according to my view of the case.
News.
Gradually; by degrees.
(Seize the right mood, for it comes so seldom.) Do not let the moment of inspiration pass disregarded.
New Universal German Library.
New brooms sweep clean.
The poets of to-day put a great deal of water in their ink.
New Year's Day.
(Not to hang all on one nail.) To have two strings to one's bow.
All is not gold that glitters.
Not to attain happiness, but to be worthy of it, is the purpose of our existence.
(Nothing else remains over for us.)
We have no alternative.

* This saying, which has become proverbial, was uttered by Bismarck in a speech delivered by him in the Reichstag in the year 1872. At that time the Kulturkampf, the famous struggle against the claims of the Clerical Party, was going on, and the relations between the German government and the Vatican were strained. The Iron Chancellor expressed his unyielding attitude towards the Pope in these words. The reference is to the abject submission that the Emperor Henry IV. made to Gregory VII.—the Pope who resuscitated the power and reputation of the Papacy—at Canossa, in North Italy, in the year 1077.

He who commences much, finishes little.

Who lives on hopes, dies of hunger.

First come, first served.

He laughs best, who laughs last.

The man who is in love for the first time, even if his love is unrequited, is a godlike being

(He who undertakes too much, is seldom successful.) Don't have too many irons in the fire.

(It is hard to swim against the stream.
 Do not kick against the pricks.

Wie der Herr, so der Diener.
 Wie der Herr, so der Knecht.
 Wie Einer ist, so ist sein Gott.
 —Goethe.

Wie fruchtbar is der kleinste Kreis,
 Wenn man ihn wohl zu pflegen weiss!
 —Goethe.

Wie geht's?
 Wie gesäet so geschnitten.
 Wie gewöhnlich.
 Wie gewonnen, so zerronnen.

Wie Hund und Katze zusammenleben.

Wie man sich bettet so schläft man.

Wie viel Uhr ist es?
 Wille ist des Werks Seele.

Williges Pferd soll man nicht treiben.
 Willst du dich selber erkennen, so sieh,
 wie die Andern es treiben;
 Willst du die Andern verstehn, blick' in dein eigenes Herz! —Schiller.
 Willst du immer weiter schweifen?
 Sieh, das Gute liegt so nah.
 Lerne nur das Glück ergreifen,
 Denn das Glück ist immer da.

Wir Deutsche fürchten Gott, aber sonst niemand. —Bismarck.

Wir müssen das Eisen schmieden, solange es warm ist.

Wir schwimmen in dem Strom der Zeit
 Auf Welle Welle fort;
 Das Meer der Allvergessenheit
 Ist unser letzter Ort. —Herder.

Wir sind gewohnt, dass die Menschen verhöhnen was sie nicht verstehn.

 Wohlfeil.
 Wohlgeboren.
 Wohlgethan überlebt den Tod.

Like master, like servant.

Like master, like man.

(As a man is, so is his God.) Every man derives his conception of God from his own nature.

How fertile is the smallest field of action, if we know how to tend it well.

How goes it; how do you do?

As you sow, so you reap.

In the customary way.

(As earned, so spent.) Lightly come, lightly go.

(To live as dog and cat together.) To live a cat-and-dog life.

As you make your bed, so you must lie on it.

What is the time?

(Will is the soul of work.) Where there's a will, there's a way.

Do not spur the willing horse.

Wouldst thou know thyself, mark how others behave; wouldst thou understand others, look into thine own heart.

Wilt thou always wander farther? See the good doth dwell so near. Learn this one lesson, to pluck the flower of happiness, for it is ever by thy side.

We Germans fear God, but no one else.

We must strike the iron while it is hot.

By Time's broad stream borne swiftly on

From wave to wave we're cast;

The Ocean of Oblivion

Receives us all at last.

We generally see that men scoff at the things which they do not understand.

Theory is easier than practice.

Knowledge is power.

When the heart dares to speak, no preparation is needed.

Where God builds a church, there the Devil builds a chapel.

Cheap.

Well-born; people of good birth

A good deed survives death.

Zwei Seelen und ein Gedanke,
Zwei Herzen und ein Schlag!—Halm.
Zwischen Amboss und Hammer.

Zwischen Thür und Angel stecken.

Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one,
(Between anvil and hammer.) Between the devil and the deep sea.
(To be between the door and the hinge.)
To be on the horns of a dilemma.

* So Correggio is said to have exclaimed when he beheld the St. Cecilia of Raphael. In his Miscellaneous of Literature, Mr. I. Disraeli points out that ambitious youths see in the achievements of great men mainly what they feel might be accomplished by themselves. This may account for the popularity of biographies and memoirs of eminent persons; for in such books mediocrities think they read what they themselves might have done had their merits met with their due meed of approbation.

(What is to be, will be.) Motto of the Duke of Bedford.

Fame cometh not by lolling on a couch of down, or idling 'neath a canopy.
Yet he who spends his life bereft of fame, leaves no more trace behind him than doth the smoke in the sky, or foam upon the sea.

The wise and bold man is often the architect of his own good fortune.

For it often is the case that in desperate dangers the boldest counsels are the best.

Fine clothes often make beauty still more beautiful.

A needy man must not be shy.

He who lays a trap for others, often is caught him-self.

You cannot play with pitch and not be defiled.

He who, blinded by ambition, raises himself to a position whence he cannot mount higher, must thereafter fall with the greatest loss.

He who loves, trusts.

* This is one of the prettiest concetti in the Divine Comedy. Dante's eyes are distracted from viewing the sights of Paradise to gaze upon the fair form of his beloved Beatrice, who is conducting him through the abode of the blessed. She remonstrates with him in the words quoted above.

Chiama gli abitator dell' ombre eterne
 Il rauco suon della Tartarea tromba;
 Tremen le spaziose atre caverne
 E l' aër cieco a quel romor rimbomba.
 Nè sì stridendo mai, dalla superne
 Regioni del cielo il folgor piomba,
 Nè sì scossa giammai trema la terra
 Quando i vapori in sen gravida serra.

—Tasso.

Chi ama me, ama il mio cane.

Di giovani ne muojono molti, di vecchi ne scampa nessuno.	Of young men many die, of old men not any escape.
Di Giovenezza il bel purpureo lume. — Tasso .	(The beautiful purple light of youth.) The bloom of young desire, and purple light of love.— Gray .
Dì il vero e affronterai il diavolo.	Speak the truth and shame the devil.
Dilettante (Pl. dilettanti).	One that cultivates art or science only by way of amusement or recreation.
Di malvagi ogni terreno abbonda. — Metastasio .	Every land has abundance of knaves.
Diminuendo (Dim.).	Gradually decreasing in loudness. Opposite to crescendo.
Dimmi con chi vai, e saprò quello che fai.	(Tell me who you keep company with, and I'll tell you what your character is.) A man is known by his associates.
Dimmi con chi vai, e ti dirò chi sei.	(Tell me who are your friends, and I will tell you what you are.) Birds of a feather flock together.
Di molto.	Very; e.g. Adagio di molto , very slow.
Di novello tutto par bello.	All things please when newly seen.
Di nuovo.	Again.
Di' oggimai che la Chiesa di Roma Per confondere in sè duo reggimenti Cade nel fango, e sè brutta e la soma.— Dante .	The Church of Rome, uniting two forms of government that ill assort (the temporal and spiritual power), falls into the mud, and defiles both herself and the burden that she carries.
Dio manda il freddo secondo i panni.	(God sends the cold according to the clothes.) He tempers the wind for the shorn lamb.
Dio non voglia	Heaven forbid.
Di padre santalotto figlio diavolotto.	A pious father has a knavish son.
Di posta.	At once.
Di questo Signor splendido ogni intento Sarà, che 'l popol suo viva contento. — Ariosto .	Of this illustrious lord the sole intent Shall be, to make his people live content.— Croker .
Di quieto.	Quietly.
Diretto.	Directed, conducted.
Direttore.	Director, conductor.
Disaccentato.	Unaccented.

Di salto.	By leaps and bounds.
Disarmonichissimo.	Extremely unharmonious.
Disinvolto.	Unrestrainedly.
Disinvolturato.	Free; without constraint.
Dispicca l'impiccato, che impiccherà poi te.	Save a thief from the gallows, and he'll cut your throat.
Distonare.	To sound out of tune.
Di un dono far due amici.	(With one gift to make two friends.) To kill two birds with one stone.
Divertimento.	A short musical piece, vocal or instrumental, in a light and familiar style.
Divieni tosto vecchio, se vuoi vivere lungamente vecchio.	(You must soon become old, if you wish to live long old.) Old young and old long.
Doglia di moglie morta dura fino alla porta.	Grief for a dead wife lasts as far as the door.
Dolce (Dol.).	Soft and sweet (music).
Dolce far niente.	The pleasure of idleness.
Dolcemente.	Softly, with gentleness.
Dolci cose a vedere, e dolci inganni.	(Sweet to the eye and flattering to the sense.) All that glitters is not gold.
Dolente.	Doleful, plaintive.
Dolorosamente.	Sorrowfully.
Doloroso.	The melancholy style; soft and pathetic (music).
Domanda all' osto s' egli ha buon vino.	(Ask your host if his wine be good.) Ask my companion if I be a thief.
Donne, asini e noci voglion le mani atroci.	Women, asses, and nuts need strong hands to break them.
Donne, preti, e polli non son mai satelli.	Women, priests and poultry are never satisfied.
Dono molto aspettato è venduto, non donato.	(A gift long waited for is sold, given.) He loses his thanks who promiseth and delayeth.
Dopo.	After.
Dopo il cattivo ne vien il buon tempo.	(After bad weather comes good.) After a storm comes a calm.
Dopo la morte non val medicina.	No use to send for a doctor when the patient is dead.
Doppio movimento.	(Double movement.) Exceedingly fast.
Doppio pedale (Dopp. Ped.).	Double pedalling in organ playing.
Doppio tempo.	Double time.
Dove entra il bere se n' esce il sapere.	When the wine is in, the wit is out.
Dov' è l'amore, là è l'occhio.	The eye turns to the place where love is.
Dove l'oro parla, ogni lingua tace.	Where gold speaks, every tongue is silent.
Dove sono donne ed oche non vi sono parole poche.	Where there are women and geese, there is plenty of gabble.
Dove sono molto cuochi, la minestra sarà troppo salata.	Too many cooks spoil the broth.

Dove una cosa per sè senza la legge opera bene, non è necessaria la legge.

* A quotation from Monti's Bassvilliana, a poem in which he denounces the execution of Louis XVI., and describes the entry of the French monarch's soul into heaven. Bassville, whose name is given to the poem, was the ambassador of the French Republic to the Court of Naples. In 1793 the Romans, shocked by the excesses of the Reign of Terror, and infuriated by Bassville's bold support of the same, killed the French envoy in the streets of Rome, and Monti, seeing what was the popular view of the moment, wrote his Bassvilliana, whereby he greatly enhanced his reputation. When, a few years after, Monti, who was a kind of portical Vicar of Bray, changed his views, he wrote another poem execrating Louis XVI. in the bitterest terms, and went so far as to declare that his Bassvilliana was written as a jest.

† In the sluggish rhythm of this line, Dante imitates the sound produced by a body falling to the ground.

It is most certain that the instinct of honour, which is fostered in the breast of man, is strongly appealed to when one is conscious of being nobly born.

A common proverb establishes the fact that, when men see misfortunes threaten them, they, first of all, lose their prudence.

To know oneself is a matter of great importance in this world, so also it is important to be able to estimate the strength of one's mental and physical powers.

It is so sweet to pardon when we conquer, and wrath is quickly changed to amity in the hearts that throb beneath a soldier's coat.

And all

(He drinks his wine before it is out of the press.) He is spending his capital;
he is out-running the constable.

* The reference is to the Brutus who expelled the Tarquins from Rome. Afterwards, when the revolutionists found that his own sons were plotting the return of the exiled kings, he himself condemned them to death. Brutus, the slayer of Julius Cæsar, claimed the founder of the Roman republic as his ancestor.

Egli è povero come un topo di chiesa.

il tratto a vantaggio ; perchè è così giusta difesa quella, che si fa per non essere offeso, come quella, che si fa quando l' offesa è fatta.

take the initiative ; for that defence, which is undertaken to prevent an attack, is as just as that which is undertaken after the attack has been delivered.

 tion.

It is a bad business to row against the stream.

It is a great delight to punish a deceitful lover.

Death is a great peacemaker.

'Tis a sorry game where nobody wins.

È un mal giuoco, quel che non vale la candela.

'Tis a sorry game that is not worth the candle.

Fa bene a te e ai tuoi, e poi agli altri se tu puoi.

(Do good to thyself and thine, and afterwards to others if thou canst.)
Charity begins at home.

Fa bene la fortuna questo, che ella elegge un uomo, quando ella voglia condurre cose grandi, di tanto spirito e di tanta virtù che egli conosca quelle occasioni che ella gli porge.

—Machiavelli.

This indeed is Fortune's work; she chooses a man, when she wishes to bring about great events, so full of mettle and merit that he is able to discern the opportunities which Fortune offers him.

Ha sempre dimostrato l' esperienza, e lo dimostra la ragione, che mai succedono bene le cose, che dependono da molti.—Guicciardini.

I consigli che procedono da capo canuto e pieno d' esperienza, sono più utili.

—Machiavelli.

I consigli nuovi, ed inusitati possono al primo aspetto, parere forse più gloriosi, e più magnanimi, ma riescono poi senza dubbio più pericolosi, e più fallaci di quegli, che in ogni tempo, ha appresso a tutti gli uomini approvato la ragione, e l' esperienza.

—Guicciardini.

I danari del comune sono come l' acqua benedetta, ognun ne piglia.

en, for the most part, will naturally pay chief regard to their own interests; and there are very few who know the value of glory and honour.

Beware of him that has nothing to lose.

Taste, enjoyment, zest.

Tastefully.

Tasteful; expressive.

Harmonics.

Experience has always proved, and reason confirms, that things which depend upon the efforts of many for their accomplishment, are never brought to a successful issue.

The advice which comes from a head that is grey and full of experience, is the wisest and best.

New and untried ideas may, at first sight, appear more splendid and nobler (than those in vogue), but afterwards they unquestionably prove more dangerous and more deceitful than those which, in every age, the reason and experience of the majority of mankind has approved of.

Public money is like holy water, all take some as they can.

I danari fanno correre i cavalli.

Idillio.

I due contrari fan che il terzo goda.

I fatti sono maschi, le parole femmine.

I frutti proibiti sono i più dolci.

I governi ben regolati hanno carove pubbliche da mangiare e da bere, e da ardere per un anno.—Machiavelli.

I gran dolori sono muti.

I guadagni mediocri empiono la borsa.

Il buono è buono, ma il meglio vince.

Il buon sangue giammai non può mentire.

Il cane dell' ortolano non mangia la lattuga, e non la lascia mangiare agli altri.

Il danaro è fratello del danaro.

Il diavolo non è così brutto come si dipinge.

Il diavolo tenta tutti, ma l' ozioso tenta il diavolo.

Il fine perchè i ministri sono mandati in una città è di reggere e governare i sudditi con amore e con giustizia, e non stare a gareggiare e contendere insieme; ma aversi a intender bene, come fratelli, e cittadini mandati alla un medesimo principe.—Machiavelli.

Il fine loda l'opera.

Il lupo cangia il pelo, ma non il vizio.

Il Maestro di color che sanno.—Dante.

Il male per libra viene, va via per orce.

Il meglio è l' inimico del bene.

Il merto d' ubbidir perde chi chiede La ragion del comando.—Metastasio.

Il mondo è di chi ha pazienza.

It is money that makes the mare to go.

An idyl; a pastoral poem.

(When two fall out, the third rejoices.)

When thieves fall out, honest men come by their own.

(Deeds are males, words females.)

Actions befit men, words befit women.

Stolen fruit is the sweetest.

Well-regulated governments maintain a store of provisions and fuel sufficient for one year.

Great sorrows are dumb.

(Moderate gains fill the purse.) Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

Good is good, but better is better.

(Good blood cannot lie!) True nobility always shows itself.

(The gardener's dog does not eat the lettuce himself and does not allow others to do so.) The dog in the manger.

(Money is the brother of money.) One penny earns another.

The devil is not so black as he is painted.

The devil tempts everyone, but the lazy man tempts the devil.

The end and purpose, for which magistrates are sent to administer the affairs of a city, is that they shall govern the inhabitants in a kind and just manner; and they ought not to wrangle and squabble among themselves, but to act as colleagues and fellow-citizens who have been appointed by the same ruler.

(The end praises the work.) The end crowns the work.

The wolf changes his coat, but not his nature.

The Master of the wise.*

Sorrows come in pounds, and go in ounces.

(Better is the enemy of good.) Le mieux est l'ennemi du bien.

He loses the merit of obedience who asks why the command is given.

(The world belongs to the patient man.) Tout vient à point à qui sait attendre.

* Dante speaks in these terms of Aristotle, of whom he was a great admirer.

- Il mondo è di chi se lo piglia. (The world belongs to the bold man.)
Fortune favours the brave.
- Il mondo è fatto a scale; chi le scende, e chi le sale. The world is like a staircase, which one goes up and another comes down.
- Il mondo è un bel libro, ma poco serve a chi non lo sa leggere.—Goldoni. The world is a beautiful book, but it is of little use to him who cannot read it.
- Il perdonare viene da animo generoso.
—Machiavelli. Forgiveness proceeds from a generous soul.
- Il pianger noi
Cosa fatta non toglie.—Alfieri. Our tears will not undo what has been done.
- Il più crudel tormento,
Ch' hanno i malvagi, è il conservar nel core Ancora a lor dispetto,
L' idea del giusto, e dell' onesto i semi.—Metastasio. The most cruel torment that evil-doers suffer, is the fact that they still have the idea of righteousness and the germs of honesty in their hearts, whether they wish it or not.
- Il più delle volte le avversità non vadino sole.—Guccicardini In the majority of cases misfortunes do not come alone.
- Il più forte ha sempre ragione. Right is always on the side of the strongest.
- Il poco mangiar e poco parlare non fece mai male. Eating little and speaking little have never injured anyone.
- Il poter sommo
Più si rafforza quanto men lo mostri.
—Alfieri. Despotic power is strengthened most when least displayed.
- Il sangue del soldato fa grande il capi-tano. (The soldier's blood makes his leader great.) The privates do the fighting and the generals gain the rewards.
- Il savio udendo, più savio diventa. (The wise man by listening becomes still wiser.) Lay your hand on your mouth and let your soul be instructed.
- Il secondo pensiero è il migliore. Second thoughts are best.
- Il soccorso di Pisa, cioè che viene nel tempo. Pisa's help; assistance that never comes in time.
- Il soldato per far male è ben pagato. The soldier is well paid for doing mischief.
- Il soverchio dolor t' ha fatto insano.
—Guarini. Too much grief doth make thee mad.
- Il tempo non indugia per nessuno. Time waits for nobody; Time and tide wait for no man.
- Il timor di Dio facilita qualunque impresa che si disegna nel governo. The fear of God furthers every enterprise that governments do undertake.
- Machiavelli.*
- Il vero punge, e la bugia unge. Truth stings, while falsehood soothes.
- Il voler tutto a un tempo, a un tempo spesso Fea perder tutto.—Alfieri. To wish for all at once doth often cause at once the loss of all.
- Il volto sciolto ed i pensieri stretti. (The countenance open, but the thoughts strictly reserved.) The wise keep ears open and mouths shut.

I matti fanno le feste, ed i savi sè le godono.	Fools make feasts, and wise men enjoy them.

* This term is applied to those Cardinals of the Roman Church who hold no bishopric or other benefice.

In terra di ciechi, beato chi ha un occhio.

Intrada.

Introduzione.

In tutte le azioni umane, e nelle guerre massimamente, bisogna accomodare il consiglio alla necessità.

—Guicciardini.

In un batter d'occhio.

In un giorno non si fe' Roma.

In un governo bene istituito, le guerre, le paci, le amicizie, non per soddisfazione di pochi, ma per bene comune, si deliberano. —Machiavelli.

In un governo bene istituito, le leggi si ordinano secondo il bene pubblico, non secondo l'ambizione di pochi.

—Machiavelli.

In uno stato, che sta la maggior parte del tempo ozioso, non può nascere uomini nelle faccende eccellenti.

—Machiavelli.

Io dirò cosa incredibile e vero. —Dante.

Io ho considerato più volte come la cagione della trista e della buona fortuna degli uomini è riscontrare il modo del procedere suo con i tempi.

—Machiavelli.

Io non deludo, affronto

I tiranni. —Alfieri.

Io sarei pronto a cercare le mutazioni degli stati, che non mi piacessero, s'io potessi sperare di mutarli da me solo: ma quando io mi ricordo, che bisogna far prima con altri; ed il più delle volte con pazzi e con maligni, i quali non sanno tacere, nè sanno fare, non è cosa ch'io aborrisca più che il pensare a quello. —Guicciardini.

Io sono un cacio fra due grattugie.

I pazzi per lettera sono i maggiori pazzi.

I pensieri non pagano gabelle.

I piccoli cani trovano, ma i grandi hanno la lepre.

I popoli s'ammazzano ed i principi s'abbracciano.

Istesso tempo.

In the country of the blind the one-eyed is king.

A prelude.

The introduction; the opening movement of a musical piece.

In all human affairs, and especially in war, we must subordinate our plans to the necessities of the case.

In the twinkling of an eye.

Rome was not built in a day.

In a well-constituted government, the consideration of war, peace and alliances is conducted, not with a view to the advantage of the few, but in the interest of the common welfare.

In a well-constituted state, the laws are made to further the interests of all the citizens, and not to serve the ambitious projects of the minority.

In a state, which remains inactive for the greater part of its existence, men distinguished in achievement cannot be produced.

A thing incredible I tell, though true.

—Cary.

I have often thought that the cause of the success or failure of men depends upon their way of adapting themselves to the times they live in.

I brave, but I delude not, e'en a tyrant.

I should be ready to attempt to reform institutions which do not please me, could I hope to effect these changes unaided: but when I remember that I must ask the assistance of others—men who are often fools and knaves, and who are unable to act or be silent—I shrink even from the contemplation of such an attempt.

(I am a cheese between two graters.) I am between the devil and the deep sea.

No fool's so foolish as the learned fool.

Thoughts don't pay taxes.

(The little dogs start, but the big ones catch the hare.) One sows, another reaps.

The nations slay one another while their kings embrace.

Same time.

Italia, Italia, O tu cui diè la Sorte
 Dono infelice di bellezza, ond' hai
 Fumesta dote d' infiniti guai,
 Che 'n fronte scritte per gran doglia
 porte;
 Deh fossi tu men bella, o almen più
 forte,
 Ond' assai più ti paventasse, o assai
 T'amasse men, chi del tuo bello a i rai Par che si strugga, e pur ti sfida a morte.—Vincenzo Filicaja.

Italia! oh Italia! Thou who hast
 The fatal gift of beauty, which became A funeral dower of present woes and past,
 On thy sweet brow is sorrow ploughed
 by shame,
 And annals graved in characters of flame.
 Oh God! That thou wert in thy nakedness
 Less lovely or more powerful, and couldst claim
 Thy right, and awe the robbers back who press
 To shed thy blood, and drink the tears of thy distress.—Lord Byron.

Jubiloso.

Jubilant; to be played in a lively style.

L' abito non fa il monaco.
 La carta non diventa rossa.
 La colpa seguirà la parte offensa lu grido, come suol. —Dante.

The cowl does not make the monk.
 Paper does not blush.

La comodità fa l' uomo ladro.
 La coscienza vale per mille testimoni.

The common cry
 Will, as 'tis ever wont, affix the blame
 Unto the party injured.—Cory.
 Opportunity makes the thief.
 A good conscience is better than a thousand witnesses.

Lacrimando.
 Lacrimoso.

In a weeping style.

Tearful; in a mournful style.

La diversità delle opinioni fra le oneste persone non dee mai rompere le amicizie.—Vincenzo Monti.

Difference of opinion among honest people ought never to sever the bonds of friendship.

La Divina Commedia.

The Divine Comedy.*

La donna è mobile.

Woman is a fickle thing.†

La fame muta le fave in mandole.

Hunger makes a bean taste like an almond.

La fame non vuol legge.

Hunger knows no laws.

La fiamma è poco lontana dal fumo.

(The flame is not far from the smoke.)
 Where there is smoke there is sure to be fire.

La fortuna ajuta i pazzi.

Fortune favours fools.

La gola, e 'l sonno, e l' oziose piume
 Hanno del mondo ogni virtù slandita.
 —Petrarch.

Gluttony, sloth, and luxurious idleness have banished every virtue from the world.

Lagrimoso.

In tearful, mournful style.

La lingua batte dove il dente duole.

The tongue always touches the aching tooth.

* The title of Dante's famous epic, which is divided into three parts, Inferno, Purgatorio and Paradiso, Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise.

† The name of a familiar air in Verdi's opera Rigoletto.

La lingua non ha osso, ma si fa rompere il dosso.

L' allegro.

La madre pietosa fa la figliuola tignosa.

La mala compagnia è quella che mena gli uomini alla forca.

La mala erba cresce presto.

La maraviglia
Dell' ignoranza è figlia
E madre del saper. — Mtistasio.

L' ambizione dell' onore, e della gloria è laudabile, ed utile al mondo perchè dà causa agli uomini di pensare, e far cose generose ed eccelse.

— Guicciardini.

La memoria delle ingiurie esser maggiore senza dubbio, e più implacabile in chi le fa, che in chi le riceve.

— Guicciardini.

Lamentabile or Lamentevole.

Lamentabilmente.

Lamentarlo.

L' amico mio, e non della ventura

— Dante.

L' amor che muove il sole e l' altre stelle.

— Dante.

L' Amor di Libertà bello se stanza
In cor gentile; se in cor basso e farlo
Non virtù, ma furor e soperanza.

— Vincenzo Monti.

La natura dei popoli è, come è ancora dei privati, voler sempre augmentare del grado, in che si trovano; però o prudenza, cominciare a negar loro le prime cose, che domandano: per lo concedendogli, non far fermi, anzi gl' inviti a domandar più, e con maggiore istanza, che non facevano da principio: perchè col dare spesso a bere, si accresce, ed augmenta tutta via la sete. — Guicciardini.

Languendo or Languente.

L' anima tua è da villate offesa:

La qual molte hato il uomo ingombra.

Sì che d' onrata impresa lo rivolge.

Come falso veder bestia, quando ombra.

— Dante.

(The tongue lacks bone but it gains us a broken back.) The tongue is a sharp sword.

The merry man; mirth.*

(A too fond mother has a scabby daughter.) Spare the rod, and spoil the child.

Bad company is what brings men to the gallows.

Evil weeds grow apace.

Wonder is the daughter of ignorance and the mother of knowledge.

The ambition of honour and glory is praiseworthy, and is advantageous to the world, since it causes men to think on, and to engage actively in noble and laudable enterprises.

The recollection of injuries is certainly more acute and more vivid in the mind of him who inflicts, than in the mind of him who suffers them.

In plaintive style.

Sorrowfully.

Lamenting.

A friend, not of my fortune but myself.

— Cary.

Love which moves the sun and other stars of heaven.

The love of Liberty finds its fitting home in a noble heart; but in a heart base and impure it is nothing but frenzy and wickedness.

The nature of people collectively is like that of individuals: they are always eager to raise themselves from the station in which they find themselves; nevertheless, it is prudent to begin by denying them their first requests; for by making concessions to them, you do not satisfy them, but invite them to ask for more, and with greater vigour than they employed at first; for by frequent drinking thirst is increased and made keener.

Languishingly

Thy soul is by vile fear assaill'd, which oft
So overcasts a man, that he recoils

From noblest resolution, like a beast,

At some false semblance in the twilight gloom — Cary.

* The title of one of Milton's shorter poems

L' animo fermo mostra che la fortuna non ha potenza sopra di lui.

—Machiavelli.

La notte è madre del consiglio.

La patria è un Nume,
A cui sacrificar tutto è permesso.

—Metastasio.

La pigrizia è sempre bisognosa.

La più trista ruota del carro è quella che cigola.

La plebe, sicura per la povertà di non poter' perdere è sempre per sua natura cupida di cose nuove. —Guicciardini.

La povertà è la madre di tutte le arti.

La povertà guasta l'amistà.

La pratica val più nell' grammatica.

La prima arte del regno

È il soffrir l'odio altrui. —Metastasio.

La prima carità comincia da se.

La prima peggior è quella che bagna.

L' arco si rompe, se sta troppo teso.

La reputazione che si trae da' parenti e da' padri è fallace, ed in poco si con-suma, quando la virtù propria non l'accompagna. —Machiavelli.

Largamente.

Larghetto (Largh.).

Largissimo.

Largo (Larg.).

Lascia dir le genti;

Sta come torre fermo, che non crolla

Giannina la una per sofflar de' venti.

Chè sempre l' uomo in cui pensier rami-polla

Sovra pensier, di sì dubbinga il segno

Perchè la toga l' un dell' altro insolla.

—Dante.

Lascia, lascia le selve

Folle garzon, lascia le fere, ed ama.

—Guarini.

Lasciate ogni speranza, voi ch' entrate!

—Dante.

A steadfast soul shows that Fortune has no power over it.

Night is the mother of counsel.

Our country is a god to whom we may make every sacrifice.

(Idleness is always in want.) He that will not work, neither shall he eat.

The worst wheel in the waggon creaks
the loudest.

The lower orders, feeling that they themselves are unable to lose anything by reason of their poverty, are always by nature inclined to revolution.

Necessity is the mother of invention.

(Poverty spoils friend-ship.) When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out of the window.

Experience is the best teacher.

The first qualification of a ruler is the ability to endure the hatred of others.

Charity begins at home.

(It is the first shower that wets.) It is the first step that costs.

The bow breaks if it is kept too taut.

The reputation that is derived from the possession of noble kindred and ancestors is untrustworthy, and it quickly perishes, if it is not accompanied by personal merit.

One day
For our delight we read of Lancelot, How him love thrall'd. Alone we were,
and no
Suspicion near us. Oft-times by that reading
Our eyes were drawn together, and the hue Fled from our alter'd cheek. But at one point
Alone we fell. When of that smile we read,

The wished smile so rapturously kiss'd
By one so deep in love, then he, who no'er
From me shall separate, at once my lips
All trembling kiss'd. The book and writer both

Were love's purveyors. In its leaves that day

We read no more. Cary.†

* Tennyson refers to these lines in Locksley Hall :—

"This is truth the poet sings

That a sorrow's crown of sorrows is remembering happier things."

† The story of Francesca da Rimini, as told by herself in Dante's Inferno, in a passage famous for its beauty and delicacy. Leigh Hunt's Story of Rimini has made the tale familiar to English readers. Francesca, daughter of Guido, the lord of Ravenna, was given in marriage to Lancilotto of Kimini, a man famous as a warrior, but repulsively deformed. After her marriage, Francesca became enamoured of Paolo, her husband's brother, who was a man of a very handsome presence. Lancilotto, having surprised the guilty pair, killed them both. Silvio Pellico, however, in his tragedy Francesca da Rimini, gives the story a more innocent, but not less pathetic turn.

That law, which conceals many evils under some slight advantage, will never be praiseworthy.

We cannot call a city unfortunate, which, having flourished for a long time, at last sinks into obscurity. For this is the end of human things; nor can we say that it is unfortunate to be subject to those laws, which are common to all other men; but those citizens are unfortunate whom Chance has caused to be born during the decline, rather than in the prosperous days of their country.

(You cannot turn a bramble bush into an orange tree.) You cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

Not on a couch of down set in the shade amid brooks and flowers, where Nymphs and Sirens dwell, but on the crest of Virtue's steep and toilsome hill our happiness is set.

Not too fast.

(Not to be worth an II.) Not to be worth powder and shot.

There is no rose without a thorn.

There has never been, nor can there ever be, a firmly-established state where good morals and virtue do not exist.

There has never been, nor will there ever be, a law which forbids and condemns among men the exercise of piety, liberality, and love.

Everybody can steer the ship when the sea is calm.

Ah, wretched is the man who is slain fighting, not for the land of his fathers, nor for his faithful wife and dear offspring, but is killed by the enemies of strangers, while he battles for a nation not his own. Such an one cannot say with his dying breath :
“ My country, dear motherland, the life thou gavest me, behold I now restore.”

Hence it is necessary for a prince, if he wishes to maintain his position, to learn to be not invariably good, but to be so or not as circumstances dictate.

Diligently consider the history of the past, for past events throw light upon the future. The world is always as it has ever been. Everything which now is, and whatever will be in the future, has happened also in the past;
for the same things recur, though their names and aspects change. Still, all men do not recognise them, but only he who is wise, and ponders carefully what he beholds.

* The greeting given to Virgil by the other great poets of antiquity when they meet him guiding Dante through the lower world.

His virtue growing.—Cary.

* This saying is commonly applied to pusillanimous folk who take a thrashing without resisting. According to Mr. L. Disraeli it originated as follows. The occupants of Castle Poggibonsi were in the habit of presenting some baskets of peaches to the Court of Tuscany as a kind of annual tribute. On one occasion, peaches being scarce, they sent figs instead. The pages of the Court were indignant, and pelted the messengers with the fruit. The latter, however, took the matter quietly, remarking that peaches would have hurt them more.

† These, the opening lines of Canto III. of Dante's Inferno, form the inscription written over the gates of Hell. The last line of this passage is perhaps the most often quoted line of the Divine Comedy.

When opposite opinions are expressed in councils, if any one comes forward with some middle course of action, it is almost always adopted, not because middle courses are not often worse than extremes, but because the disputants agree to a compromise more readily than to a course they entirely oppose: moreover the others present, either from a desire not to displease or from lack of brains, readily adopt that view which seems likely to involve less dispute.

* In these terms Victor Emmanuel described his occupation in the census list of Turin.

† In former days these ridotti, or gambling-saloons, were to be found in every part of Italy, and gambling was the vice of all classes of society, as indeed, so far as lotteries are concerned, it is the besetment of the Italian of to-day. Even Manzoni was in his youth bitten by the gambling mania, and was found in one of the ridotti by Vincenzo Monti. The older poet warned the young man that gambling would blight his prospects of poetic fame, and Manzoni took the warning so much to heart that he at once forswore play, and, to prove the strength of his resolution, he continued, for some time, to visit the ridotti without wagering there.

Se gli da un dito, si prende il braccio

Segno.

Segreto confidato non è più segreto

Se la donna vuol, tutto la puol.

Semplice.

Sempre (Semp.).

A short rondo.

A movement consisting of several parts, each ending with a repetition of the first part

A red sky in the evening brings fine weather, but a red sky in the morning fills the sea.

Roughly.

it speaks to thee *

A double bar

Police officers

An operatic scene

In a playful style

A light and sportive musical movement.

Bright and sparkling.

In a free and open manner

A method of tuning an instrument, in order to produce unusual effects.

In the Scottish style.

With disdain.

If one hears or reads of any man, who,
without any idea of his own advantage or interest, prefers wickedness to goodness, such a one must be considered not a man, but a beast, for his inclinations are inhuman.

Give him an inch, and he will take an ell.

A sign; a mark.

Tell a secret, and it is no longer yours.
(What woman wills, all will.) A wilful woman must have her way.

In a simple style

Always.

* The epigram that Manzoni wrote on the death of Vincenzo Monti, lamenting the loss of the friend who had encouraged his own early efforts as a poet.

Sempre a quel ver ch' ha faccia di menzogna

De' l' uom chiuder le labbra quant'
ei puote,

Però che senza colpa fa vergogna.

—Dante.

Sempre che l' inimico è più possente,
Più, chi perde, accettabile ha la scusa.

—Ariosto.

Sempre è maggior del vero

L' idea d' una sventura

Al credulo pensiero

Dipinta da timor. — Metastasio.

Sempre ha torto il più debole.

Sempre natura, se fortuna trova

Discordè a sè, come ogni altra se-mente

Fuor di sua region, fa mala prova.

E, se il mondo laggiù ponesse mente

Al fondamento che natura pone,

Sequendo lui, avria buona la gente.

Ma voi torcete alla religione

Tal che sia nato a cingersi la spada,

E fate rè di tal ch' è da sermone

Onde la traccia vostra è fuor di strada

— Dante.

Se non è vero, è ben trovato.

Senza (Sen.).

Senza ceremonie.

Senza complimenti!

Senza danari, non si paga l' oste.

Senza debiti, senza pensieri.

Senza organo.

Ever to that truth

Which but the semblance of a falsehood wears,

A man, if possible, should bar his lip;

Since, although blameless, he incurs reproach. — Cary.

The stronger the enemy is, the better the excuse of him who has been defeated.

The anticipations of misfortunes, which fear arouses in a mind too prone to forebodings, are always worse than the reality.

(The weakest is always in the wrong.)

Might goes before Right. *Macht

Nature ever,

Finding discordant fortune, like all seed
Out of its proper climate, thrives but ill,
And were the world below content to mark

And work on the foundation nature lays,

It would not lack supply of excellence.

But ye perversely to religion strain

Him, who was born to gird on him the sword,

And of the fluent phraseman make your king:

Therefore your steps have wander'd from the path. — Cary.

If not true, it is very ingenious.*

* In these words Cacciagnuda predicts the exile of Dante from Florence. This event took place in the year 1302.

Tutti fatti a sembianza d' un Solp,
Figli tutti d' un solo Riscatto,
In qual ora, in qual parte del suolo
Trascorriamo quest' aura vital,
Siam fratelli ; siam stretti ad un patto :
Maledetto colui che l' infiange,
Che s' innalza sul fiacco che plange,
Che contrista uno spinto immortal!

—Mazzoni.

Tutti gli uomini naturalmente sono buoni ; cioè, che, dove non cavano piacere o utilità del male, piace più loro il bene, che' l male. Ma sono varie le corrottele del mondo, e fragilità loro ; che facilmente, e spesso per interesse proprio inclinano al male. Però da savi legislatori fu per fondamento delle repubbliche trovato il premio, e la pena, non per violentare gli uomini a far o l' uno, o l' altro ; ma, perchè seguitino l' inclinazione naturale.—Guicciardini.

Tutti i gusti son gusti.

Tutti quanti.

Tutto è bene che riesce bene.

Tutto il frutto del vincere consiste nel usar la vittoria bene.—Guicciardini.

Tutto il male non vien per noceffe.

We are all made in one Likeness holy,
Ransomed all by one only redemption ;

Near or far, rich or poor, high or lowly,
Wherever we breathe in life's air.

We are brothers, by one great preëmption

Bound all ; and accursed be its wronger,

Who would ruin by right of the stronger,

Wring the hearts of the weak with despair.—W. D. Howells.

All men are naturally virtuous ; that is to say, that where they do not derive any pleasure or advantage from wicked courses, virtue pleases them more than vice. But so various are the corruptions of the world, and such is the frailty of men, that they often, for their own interest, incline to vice. For this reason wise legislators have made a system of rewards and punishments to be the basis of states, not to force men into one course of conduct or the other, but in order that all should follow their natural bent.

(All tastes are tastes.) There is no accounting for taste.

Every one.

All's well that ends well.

All the good results of conquest depend upon the right use of the victory obtained.

(Every evil comes not to hurt.) Some evils are blessings in disguise.

All that a prince possesses is given him for the use and benefit of others ; by keeping these things for himself alone, he defrauds others of that which he owes them, and this to his own exceeding shame.

One string.

A noble soul is, as it were, its own theatre, and there, in secret, it approves or condemns its own acting.

One hand washes the other, and both wash the face.

One swallow does not make a summer.

A new broom sweeps clean.

Una volta furfante, e sempre furfante.

(Once a rogue, always a rogue.) What's bred in the bone will come out in the flesh.

Un bel morir tutta la vita onora.

A noble death is an honour to the whole life.

Un buon cittadino, per amore del ben pubblico, deve dimenticare le ingiurie private.—Machiavelli.

A good citizen ought to forget his own private wrongs when the interests of the common good are concerned.

Un buono o savio principe deve amare la pace e fuggire la guerra.

A good and wise ruler ought to love peace and shun war.

—Machiavelli.

Un freddo amico è mal sicuro amante.

A cold friend makes an untrustworthy lover.

—Metastasio.

Un governo, che ama dominar uomini e non armenti, non solo non pone ostacolo ai progressi dell' intelletto, ma con ogni guisa di scuole li promuove.—Vincenzo Monti.

A government, which desires to rule men and not beasts, not only does not place any barrier in the way of intellectual progress, but promotes it by establishing schools of every kind.

Unisoni.

(Unisons.) Two or more parts played in unison.

Un mal chiama l' altro.

(One evil summons another.) It never rains but it pours.

Un ministro estero deve esser grato a chi è mandato, pratico, prudente, sollicito, e amorevole di suo sovrano e della sua patria.—Machiavelli.

An ambassador ought to be acceptable to those to whom he is sent, as well as experienced, prudent, diligent, and devoted to his sovereign and his country.

Uno stato ingrandisce con esser l'asilo della gente cacciata e dispersa.

A country waxes great through being the refuge of persecuted and exiled people.

—Machiavelli.

To a good hearer a brief speaker.

(To a good listener a few words.) A word to the wise is sufficient. Verbum sap.

* The bodigo is a loaf offered by the people to the priest of their church. Nuñez explains this proverb, saying that in the villages the priest abuses the man who fails to bring his offering, so that the latter is so offended that he ceases to offer anything at all.

† A cynical saying to indicate that, although honesty is the best policy, those who practise it will not become rich.

‡ Collins, in his Spanish Proverbs, says that this proverb is also used to express that we should not be too careful of the expense and labour of an undertaking when its object is useful. Σαλπάρά τὰ καλά.

§ A saying that is commonly applied to a cude man who has found his match. There is an amusing account of the origin of this saying in a very old work, entitled Alivio de Caminantes, "Travellers' Comfort." A priest was dining in an inn off a roast pigeon. Seeing a peasant sitting there, he invited him to share his repast, hoping thereby to save his own pocket. The peasant, however, replied that the pleasant smell alone of the pigeon served him as a dinner. "Then you ought to pay for the pleasure," said the priest. A dispute arose, and the village sacristan was called as arbitrator, and decided that the peasant must pay. But the witty sacristan, having received the coin, merely rang it on the table, remarking that, as the priest had demanded pay for a smell, he should be paid with a sound.

(When bread is lacking, oatcakes are good.) Half a loaf is better than no bread.
According to the custom of Arragon, good work and poor pay.‡
Desperate ills need desperate remedies.
Rain in May brings bread for the year.
Water that has flowed past will not turn the mill.
(When the daughter is wed the sons-in-law appear.) Help is always to be had except when it is needed.
Now that I own a sheep and a lamb, everybody says, "How do you do, Peter ?"
To "Out of my house," and "What do you want with my wife ?" there is no replying.
Against God's anger no house is strong.
(Praise thyself, basket, for I wish to sell thee.) A good article sells itself.
For a good woman a small bridle is enough.
Leave the jest when 'tis at its best.
To the grateful man give more than he asked.
A dowry and marriage, the cure for a bad daughter.
(In the end the greyhound kills the hare.) Time and patience work wonders.

* According to the dictionaries the literal meaning of this saying is, "Good-day -they are shearing sheep," but Sbarbi considers that this explanation is absurd. He connects esquilan with esquila, "a bell," and says that originally the saying probably originated with members of religious houses, presbyteries, &c., who would naturally be in a desperate hurry when the bell was rung for the performance of one of the offices of the church.

† Cromwell's somewhat similar maxim was, "Trust in God and keep your powder dry."

‡ This custom may be said to be common to the whole world.

- Al aldeano dale el pié, y tomarte ha la mano.
(If you give a boor your foot, he will take your hand.) Give him an inch, and he'll take an ell.
- Al amigo, manda el higo, al enemigo, el prisco.
(Send the fig to your friend, and the peach to your enemy.)
- Al amigo su vicio.
(To a friend his faults.) Make allowance for a friend's fads.
- Al amo imprudente, el mozo negligente.
(A reckless master has a feckless man. Like master like man.)
- Al amor el remedio es tierra en medio.
(The cure for love is land between. Absence does not make the heart grow fonder.)
- A' la mujer barbuda, de lejos la saluda.
(A woman with a beard salute from a distance.)*
- A' la mujer casta, Dios le basta.
(For the chaste woman God suffices.) A good woman is virtuous for virtue's sake.
- A' la mujer mala, poco le aprovecha guardarla.
(It is useless to watch a bad woman.)
- Al asno muerto, la cebada al rabo.
(When the ass is dead, barley at his tail.) After death the doctor.
- A' la viña guarda el miedo, y no viñadero.
(Fear, and not the vine-dresser, protects the vineyard.)
- Al borracho fino, no le basta agua ni vino.
(The inveterate drunkard is not sated with water or wine.) Ever drunk, ever dry.
- Al buen callar llaman Santo.
(To wise silence men give the name of saint.) Speech is silvery, silence is golden.†
- Al buen pagador no le duelen prendas.
(A good paymaster is not troubled about pledges.) A good paymaster may build St. Paul's.
- Al buen varon, tierras ajenas patria le son.
(To the stout heart foreign lands are a fatherland.) Omne solum forti patria est.
- Al cabo de los años mil, tornó el agua á su cubil.
(At the end of a thousand years the water returns to its cask.) We always return to our old loves.
- Alcalde de aldea, el que lo quiere ése lo sea.
(Let him who pleases be mayor of a village.) Petty dignities are not worth acquiring.
- Al dejar este mundo y meternos la tierra adentro, por tan estrecha senda va el principe como el jornalero.
(When we quit this world and are placed in the earth, the prince walks along as narrow a path as the journeyman.)
- Cervantes.
- Al desdichado, poco le vale ser esforzado.
(Courage is of little use to the unlucky man.) It is better to be born lucky than rich.

* The Spaniards consider that hair on a woman's chin indicates a very passionate disposition. Such a person is best avoided.

† In Don Quixote Sancho Panza changes the form of this proverb to give credit to himself. Al buen callar llaman Sancho, "To silence men give the name of Sancho." Mr. Dicks Burke, however, says that this latter form of the proverb was known before Cervantes' time.

Alegrias, antruejo, que mañana serás ceniza.	(Rejoice, Carnival, for to-morrow thou wilt be ashes.) Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die.*
Al enemigo que huye, la puente de plata.	(To the flying foe, a bridge of silver.) Make terms with an enemy when you can.
Al fin es debido el honor.	(To the end is the honour due.) All's well that ends well.
Al fin se canta la gloria.	(The Gloria is sung at the end of the psalm.) Don't halloo till you are out of the wood.
Al freir de los huevos lo verá.	(It will be seen when the eggs are fried.) Time will show.†
Algo ageno, no hace heredero.	(Another's property leaves no heir.) Ill-gotten gains do not prosper. Male paria male dilabuntur.
Algo ó nada.	(Something or nothing.) Neck or nothing.
Alguacil.	A constable; an inferior officer of justice.
Alguacil descuidado, ladrones cada mercado.	(A negligent constable, thieves every market-day.) When the cat's away, the mice will play.
Al gusto dañado lo dulce le es amargo.	To a debased palate the sweet tastes bitter.
Al hijo de tu vecino, límpiale las narices y métele en tu casa.	(Wipe your neighbour's son's nose, and take him into your house.) Seek a husband for your daughter among the people whose characters you know.
Al hijo y al mulo en el culo.	For a son and a mule a blow behind.
Al hombre bueno no le busques abolengo.	Do not trouble about the ancestors of a good man.
Al hombre desnudo, más valen dos camisones que no uno.	For the naked man, two shirts are better than one.
Al hombre inocente, Dios le endereza la simiente.	(God makes the seed of the good man to grow.) "Yet saw I never the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread."
Al hombre mayor, darle honor.	(To the greater man give honour.) Honour to whom honour is due.
Al hombre osado, la fortuna le da la mano.	(To the bold man Fortune offers her hand.) Fortune favours the brave. Audaces Fortuna juvat.
Al hombre venturero, la hija le nace primero.	A lucky man's first child is a daughter.‡

* Antruejo is the name given to the carnival time, the three days that precede Lent. Ceniza refers to the Día de ceniza, i.e., Ash Wednesday.

† A man, having entered another's house, walks off with the frying-pan. The owner meets him as he departs and asks what he has under his cloak. Al freir de los huevos lo verá, replied the thief as he ran off.

‡ Because as Nunez quaintly explains, if the eldest child is a daughter, Nature provides the man with a nurse for the male children that follow.

* This is one of the best-known, as well as one of the oldest, Spanish proverbs. It arose from the action of Alfonso VI., who, at the beginning of the twelfth century, decided whether the Gothic or Roman Missals should be used in his country. The King resolved to leave the matter to chance, and threw both into the flames, saying the one which came out unburnt should be chosen. But when the Gothic Missal survived the ordeal, he threw it back into the flames, and decided in favour of the Roman. From this act, Allá van leyes do quieren reyes, became a popular saying in Spain.

† Collins says that the gibbets for malefactors were usually erected on a hill adjoining small towns, presumably as a warning to all who approached the place. Mr. Disraeli says that this saying is applied to those persons who, when asked a favour, make a pretence of refusing before granting it.

Al sastré pobre, la aguja que se doble.	(To a poor tailor a needle that will bend.) The poor must adapt themselves to circumstances.
Al villano con la vara de avellano.	For a sturdy rogue a sturdy rod.
Al yerno y al cochino, una vez el camino.	To a son-in-law and the pig, once is often enough to show the road.
A' malas hadas, malas bragas.	Bad fortune goes badly breeched.
A' mal capellan, mal sacristan.	(A knavish parson has a knavish clerk.) Like master, like man.
A' manos lavadas Dios les dá que coman.	(God puts food into clean hands.) Honesty is the best policy.
A' maravedi de pleito, real de papel.	A pennyworth of lawsuit costs half-a-crown's worth of paper.
Amar y saber, no puede todo ser.	Love and prudence cannot go together.
Amen, amen, al cielo llega.	(Amen, amen, reaches heaven.) More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.— Tennyson .
Amigo del buen tiempo, Múdase con el viento.	A fine-weather friend changes with the wind.
Amigo de pleitos, poco dinero; amigo de médicos, poca salud; amigo de frailes, poca honra.	Friend of lawsuits, little wealth; friend of doctors, little health; friend of friars, little honour.
Amigo reconciliado enemigo doblado.	(A friend reconciled is twice a foe.) Offended love never forgives.
Amigos deste siglo, rostros humanos, corazones de fieras.— A. Perez .	Friends nowadays have human faces, but hearts of beasts.
Amigo viejo, tocino y vino añejo.	A friend, bacon, and wine, are all the better for keeping.
A' mi padre llaman hogaza, y yo muero de hambre.	My father's name is Baker, yet I die for lack of bread.*
A' mocedad ociosa vejez trabajosa.	An idle youth brings a laborious age.
Amor de asno, coz y bocado.	(The love of an ass is a kick and a bite.) Rustic lovers are given to horseplay.
Amor de niño, agua en cestillo.	A boy's love is water in a basket.
Amores nuevos, olvidan viejos.	(New loves, the old forgot.) The new love, the true love; the old love, the cold love.
Amor mio; mis amores.	My love; my darling.
A' moro muerto gran lanzada.	(Great stabbing of a dead Moor.) Even hares can insult a dead lion.
A' mucho hablar, mucho errar.	(Much talking, many blunders.) Silence is wisdom for the fool.
A' muertos y á idos, pocos amigos.	(The dead and the departed have few friends.) Les absents ont toujours tort.
A' mula vieja, cabezadas nuevas.	(To an old mule new trappings.) Fine feathers make fine birds.
Anda el gato en el palomar.	(The cat is in the dovecot.) There is a man among the maids,

* Literally, "My father's game is Loaf," &c., but I do not think that Loaf is to be found among British names of persons.

Andando y hablando, marido á la

(To go after rabbits with a dead ferret.)
To pursue a quest without proper means.

(To go a-hunting wild-fowl.) To go on a wild-goose chase; to wait expecting something to turn up.

(To go from clogs to buskins.) Out of the frying-pan into the fire.

To walk between the cross and the holy water.†

Before the door of a man who is always praying, never leave your corn to dry.

The nightingale will cease singing ere a woman ceases chattering.

(Tell before they tell.) Have the first

After a miserly father comes a spendthrift son.

To foolish words turn deaf ears.

To an old dog never say cuz, cuz.§

Application and natural ability. Without both these it is impossible to attain eminence; and, when they are both united, the highest eminence is reached. A moderate intellect, combined with application, succeeds better than mere genius. Work is the coin that purchases a reputation, and that which costs us little is of little value.

Poverty has no shame.

* The story is told of a woman whose husband was condemned to death. He wished to linger in order to give his wife his last instructions, but the good woman, impatient of the delay, said, Andando y hablando, marido.

† That is, to be at the last gasp. A crucifix and holy water are brought to the death-bed of the dying Catholic.

‡ The almond-tree blooms early, so is liable to be blighted by severe weather. Hence the proverb is used of precocious children, who seldom fulfil their early promise.

§ Cuz, the word used by Spaniards for calling a dog. Nuñez explains that it would be needless to call an old dog, as it would follow close to its master's heel. But the saying appears to be equivalent to the English, "You cannot catch an old bird with chaff."

A' poco pan, tomar primero.

An apprentice from Portugal, he does not know how to sew, but wishes to cut out.*

(Good fortune comes by punching.) The timid dog gets no bone; no gains without pains.

Those are friends who do friendly acts.

Those who possess good friends are truly rich.

Beggars must not be choosers.

You surrender your liberty to him to whom you tell your secret.

He whom God loves is fed well in Seville.

To him to whom God wishes well, his house is sweet.

He to whom God has wished well, in Granada gets plenty to eat.

He who stays in his own shop, is not accused of being mixed up in the brawl.

(God helps him who rises betimes.) Heaven helps him who helps himself; the early bird catches the worm.

He who is feared receives his own.

No black pudding is given to him who kills no pig.

He who has nothing, has nothing to fear.

God exalts him who humbles himself.

(To him who gives the capon, give the leg and the wing.) One good turn deserves another.

To him who has a good wife no sorrow comes that he is unable to endure.

(Plough a deep furrow, and you will reap an abundance of corn.) Spend, and God will send.

* This saying illustrates the antipathy of the Spaniards towards the Portuguese.

Armas y dineros buenas manos quieren.

Así es el marido sin hecho, como casa sin techo.

Asna con pollino, no vá derecha al molino.

Asno cojo, mas habias de madrugar.

Asno cojo, y hombre rojo y el demonio, todo es uno.

Asno con oro, alcanzalo todo.

Asno de muchos, lobos le comen.

A' suegras beodas, tinajas llenas.

A' tí lo digo, hijuela, entendedlo vos, mi nuera.

A' tu hijo, buen nombre y oficio.

A' un asno, bastale una albarda.

Aun no asamos, y ya empringamos.

Al trabajo es favorable.

Aunque la mona se vista de seda, mona se queda.

Aunque manso tu sabueso, no le muerdas en el bezo.

Aunque seas prudente, viejo, no desdenes el consejo.

A' un traidor, dos alevosos.

Ausencia enemiga de amor, quan lejos de ojo, tan lejos de corazon.

A' veces lleva el hombre á su casa, con que llore.

Weapons and money should have good hands to hold them.

A husband without experience is like a house without a roof.

(An ass, when with her colt, does not go straight to the mill.) A mind full of cares, a field full of tares.

(Lame ass, you ought to rise earlier.) Dull wits need more labour to polish them.

A lame ass, a red-haired man, and the devil, are one and the same thing.

(An ass laden with gold overtakes everything.) It is money that makes the mare to go; the rich fool is accounted wise.

(The ass with many owners is devoured by the wolves.) Everyone's business is nobody's work.

To drunken mothers-in-law give brimming jugs.*

(I tell it to you, daughter; hear it, daughter-in-law.) I speak to the post that the gate may hear.

To thy son leave a good name and a profession.

(One load is enough for one ass.) His own troubles are enough for every man.

(We are not yet roasting, but already we baste the meat.) We are counting our chickens before they are hatched.

Although Fortune is fickle, she smiles on work.

A monkey is still a monkey, though it is dressed in silk.

(Though your bloodhound be tame, do not bite him on the lip.) Beware the anger of a patient man.

(Although you are prudent, old man, disdain not advice.) None are so wise that they need not to learn.

(To one traitor two treacherous comrades.) Set a thief to catch a thief.

(Absence is love's enemy; far from the eyes is far from the heart.) Out of sight, out of mind.

Sometimes a man takes home what may cause him to weep.†

* That is, in order that they may speedily kill themselves. The unpopularity of mothers-in-law appears to be almost universal.

† The records of the Divorce Court show that it is often the friend of the husband who leads the wife astray.

Boda de negros.	(A wedding of negroes.) A noisy frolic; an Irish wake.
Bofeton amagado nunca bien dado.	(A threatened blow is never well given.) Cowards are often loudest in their threats.
Bonete y almete hacen casas de copete.	The student's cap and the helmet make houses great.*
Buen abogado mal vecino.	A good lawyer is a bad neighbour.
Buena de mejores, por mengua de seguidores.	Virtuous of the virtuous, through lack of followers.†
Buena es misa misar, y casa guardar.	(It is good to hear Mass and good to look after one's house.) Religious duties should be attended to, but domestic ones should not be neglected.
Buena fama hurto encubre.	A good reputation conceals theft.‡
Buena vida, padre y madre olvida.	(Prosperity forgets father and mother.) The man who has "got on" does not remember his poor relations.
Buen corazón quebranta mala ventura.	A stout heart overcomes bad fortune.
Buen jubon me tengo en Francia.	I have a good jacket in France.§
Bueno, bueno, bueno, mas guarde Dios mi burra de su centeno.	Good, good, good, but God keep my ass out of his rye.
Buenos dineros, son casa con pucheros.	(A house and a stock of provisions are good money.) The man whose necessities are satisfied does not feel the lack of money.
Buen principio, la mitad es hecha.	Well begun is half done.
Buey viejo surco derecho.	An old ox makes a straight furrow.
Burla burlando vase el lobo al asno.	All in the way of fun the wolf attacks the ass.
Burlaos con el asno claros ha en la cara con el rabo.	(Jest with an ass, and he will flap his tail in your face.) Too much familiarity breeds contempt.
Burlaos con el loco en casa, burlará con vos en plaza.	Jest with the fool at home, and he'll jest with thee in the market.
Buscáis cinco pies al gato.	(You are looking for five feet on a cat.) You are on a vain quest; you hope for the impossible.
Buscar á Marica por Rabena, ó al bachiller en Salamanca.	(To look for Mary in Ravenna, or for the bachelor in Salamanca.) To look for a needle in a bundle of hay.

Caballero.	A gentleman.
Caballo que vuela , no quiere espuela.	Do not spur a free horse.
Cada buhonero alaba sus agujas.	(Every hawker praises his own needles.) Every man cries up his own wares.
Cada cosa en su tiempo, y nabos en adviento.	Everything in season, and turnips in Advent.
Cada día gallina amarga la cocina.	Fowl every day makes bitter fare.*
Cada gallo canta en su muladar.	Every cock crows on his own dunghill.
Cada semana tiene su disanto.	(Every week has its Sunday.) The blackest cloud has a silver lining.
Cada uno alega en derecho de su dedo.	(Every man claims his right to his own finger.) Every man has a right to his own.
Cada uno case con su igual.	Let each marry with his equal.
Cada uno en su casa, y Dios en la de todos.	(Every one in his own house and God in all of them.) Every man for himself and God for us all.
Cada uno es como Dios le hijó, y aun peor muchas veces.— Cervantes .	Every one is as God made him, and frequently much worse.
Cada uno es hijo de sus obras. — Cervantes .	(Every man is the child of his own works.) A man is the architect of his own fortunes.
Cada uno estornuda como Dios le ayuda.	(Every one sneezes as God pleases.) A man's heart deviseth his ways; but the Lord directeth his steps. — Proverbs xvi., 9.
Cada uno mire por el virote.	(Let each man look out for the arrow.) Let every man mind his own business.†
Cada uno sabe adonde le aprieta el zapato.	Every one knows best where the shoe pinches him.
Cada uno se entiende, y trastejaba de noche, y hurtaba las tejas á su vecino.	Every one knows what he is about, mends his own roof at night, and steals his neighbour's tiles.
Cada uno tiene su alguacil.	(Every man has his constable.) All are subject to the laws.
Callar como negra en baño.	(Silent as a negress in a bath.) Silent as the grave.‡
Callate y callemos, que sendas nos tenemos.	(Be mum, let us both be mum, for we both have means.) Silence is good counsel for thieves.
Calle el que dió, hable el que tomó.	Let the giver be silent, let the receiver speak.
Callen barbas, y hablen cartas.	(Let beards be silent, let writings speak.) Documentary evidence is always the best.

Casa hospedada, comida y denostada.	A house given to hospitality, is devoured and reviled.
Casarás y amansarás.	(Marry and be tamed.) Marry in haste and repent at leisure.
Casar, casar, suena bien y sabe mal.	Marry! Marry! sounds well but has a bad taste.
Castillo apercebido, no es decebido.	(A castle prepared is not surprised.) Forewarned is forearmed.
Ciencia es locura si buen seso no 'la cura.	Knowledge is folly if not controlled by good sense.
Ciencia es para pobres riqueza, para ricos primor, y para viejos contentamiento.	Learning is wealth to the poor, an adornment to the rich, and contentment to the aged.
Cierra tu puerta, y harás tu vecina buena.	(Keep your door shut, and you will make your neighbour a good woman.) Opportunity makes the thief.
Cobra buena fama, y echate á dormir.	Acquire a good name and go to sleep.
Cochino fiado, buen invierno, y mal verano.	A pig bought on trust, good in winter, bad in the summer.†
Come poco y cena mas.	Lunch lightly, and dine well; sleep high up, and you will live.
Duerme en alto y vivirás.
Comida hecha, compañía deshecha.	When good cheer is lacking friends will be packing.
Como canta el abad, así responde el sacristan.	As the parson chants, the clerk responds.
Como se vive, se muere.	(As one lives, one dies.) A good beginning makes a good ending.
Compañía de dos, compañía de Dios.	(Two in company is God's company.) Two's company, three is none.
Comprar en feria, y vender en casa.	Buy at a fair, and sell at home.
Comunicado el color.	Sorrow, when told to another, is appeased if 'tis not cured.
Se aplaca si no se vence.— Calderon.
Con agena mano sacar la culebra del horado.	(To draw the snake from the hole with another's hand.) To make a cat's paw of another.
Con buen traje, se encubre ruin linage.	Fine clothes conceal a bad ancestry.

- El puerto de las miserias es la paciencia. (Patience is the haven of sorrows.) Time heals all things.
- El que callar no puede, hablar no sabe. He who cannot be silent, knows not how to speak.
- El que ha ovejas, ha pellejas. He who has sheep, has fleeces.
- El que hoy cae puede levantarse mañana. He who falls to-day may rise to-morrow.
- El que merca y miente su bolsa lo siente. He who trades and lies, his purse feels it.
- El que muere pobre, no muere antes de tiempo. (He that dies a poor man, dies not prematurely.) It is better for a man to die than suffer want.
- El que no sabe gozar de la ventura cuando le viene, que no se debe quejar si se le pasa. — Cervantes. He that does not know how to enjoy prosperity when it comes to him, ought not to complain when it passes him by.
- El que tiene el padre alcalde seguro va á juicio. He whose father is the magistrate goes fearlessly to trial.
- El que tiene tejados de vidrio, no tire piedras al de su vecino. Those who have their house tiled with glass, should not throw stones at their neighbour's.
- El rey es mi gallo. (The king is my cock.) The strongest is the side for me.†
- El rey va hasta do puede, y no hasta do quiere. The king goes as far as he can, not as far as he would.
- El río pasado, el santo olvidado. The river crossed, the saint forgotten.

* The gardener's dog corresponds to our "dog in the manger." Calderon wrote a comedy with the title El perro del hortelano. In this play a noble lady acts the part of the dog in the manger, for, being enamoured of one of her servants, she will not allow him to marry, nor will she, until love proves too strong for her, wed him herself.

† Cock-fighting is a popular sport in Spain.

* Anchuelos is situated between two hills. The proverb is said to have arisen from the habit of an amorous shepherd and shepherdess, who, tradition declares, were wont to shout loving messages to one another from hill to hill, oblivious of the listeners below.

† Escalona is a small town situated some eight miles from Toledo. It is situated on the crest of a hill, and, according to Collins, when a fire broke out in the place it was impossible to bring water from the bottom of the hill soon enough to prevent the flames from taking a firm hold.

‡ This saying is commonly attributed to Charles V., although Schopenhauer gives the credit of it to Philip II.

§ This is the old form of the proverb. Mangorrero is given in the dictionaries as meaning "hafted," but, as Don José Sbarbi points out in his Biografía on Spanish proverbs, such a sense makes the proverb meaningless. In its correct sense, the proverb is equivalent to our "Who goes worse shod than the cobbler's wife?"

God give thee luck, my son; as for wisdom, a little sufficeth thee.

Fortune and Reputation. While the former is inconstant, the latter abides; while Fortune concerns the present life, Reputation affects the after time; the one is a bulwark against Envy, the other against Oblivion. We desire Fortune, and sometimes can assist it, but Reputation we must earn. The desire for Reputation is the child of a virtuous instinct; it was, and is, the sister of giants, for it always runs to extremes, producing either monsters that excite our loathing, or prodigies that gain our applause.

* As to the origin of this proverb, I derive the following information from Mr. Ulick Ralph Burke's admirable work, Sancho Panza's Proverbs. Pedro the Cruel engaged in a fight with his brother Don Enrique. Both brothers fell to the ground. The page of Don Enrique assisted his master to rise, with the words Ni quito Rey, ni pongo Rey, pero ayudo á mi señor. "I oppose not the King, nor do I set him up, but help my master."

To offer too much is a kind of denial.

* Mr. U. R. Burke says of this proverb, "Zamora is a very ancient fortified city in Leon, whose very name, says Ford, awakes a thousand recollections of mediæval chivalry. An important frontier town on the Douro, it was recovered from the Moors by Alonso el Católico, in 748; and stood a long and bloody siege by Abderrahman in 939, when 40,000 Moors are said to have been slain. Finally, it was taken in 985 by Al Mansûr. Zamora was again besieged in 1072, by Sancho II., of Castille, who failed, in spite of the assistance of the Cid himself, to take the city—and was killed outside the walls. Zamora is at the present day a city of some 12,000 inhabitants, and of little modern interest."

* A proverb applied to those people who are always inclined to praise all things but those at their own door.

Make hay while the sun shines.

There are rules of success, which is not merely a matter of luck with the wise man; for success can be assisted by care. Some folk are content to plant themselves with a cheerful smile at the gates of Fortune, and hope that she will open to them. Others act more wisely in pressing onward, and they profit by their wise audacity; for borne along on the wings of their courage and boldness, they overtake Fortune, and coax her to favour them.

Goats get fat by change of pastures.

A smiling face, and forgiveness, are the best way to avenge an insult.

The request of a lord coerces thee to act.

Poor comfort is the mob's applause.

* The inhabitants of Biscay are proverbial among the Spaniards for their stupidity, just as the French regard the inhabitants of Auvergne as typical for their boorishness. Sometimes, however, a man is not such a fool as he looks. So the story goes that a Biscayner was dining at an inn with two other Spaniards. When the fish was brought to table, one Spaniard asked for the head, while the other chose the tail, meaning to divide the whole fish between them. But the Biscayner exclaimed, Viscaino necio, tarazon de en medio, and helped himself to the best part of the fish.

Fallar sem cuidar, é atirar sem apontar.	To speak without thinking is like shooting without taking aim.
Fazer bem a velhacos, é deitar agua no mar.	To do a kindness to knaves is to throw water in the sea.
Fazer d'uma via dous mandados.	(To perform two errands on one journey.) To kill two birds with one stone.
Gato escaldado d'agua fria tem medo.	The scalded cat is afraid of cold water.
Guarde-vos Deus de amigo reconciliado.	God keep you from a friend who was once your foe.
Guarde-vos Deus de physico experi- mentador, e de asno ornejador.	God keep you from a doctor who tries experiments, and from an ass that brays.
Guar-te dos azos, e guar-te-ha Deus dos peccados.	Keep thyself from the occasions, and God will keep thee from sin.
Homem apercebido, meio combatido.	A man prepared, is half the battle.
Homem farto não é comedor.	(The sated man is not an eater.) Enough is as good as a feast.
Homem morto não falla.	Dead men tell no tales.
Homem põe, e Deus dispõe.	Man proposes, God disposes.
Homem, que padrugá, de algo tem cura.	The man who rises early has something on his mind.
Ira de irmãos, ira de diabos.	The wrath of brothers, the wrath of devils.
Isto é outro cantar.	(That is another song.) That is quite another pair of shoes.
Lançar o gato ás barbas de outrem.	(To throw the cat on the face of another.) Escaping from a difficulty by implicating another.

Lá vão leis onde querem cruzados.
Lá vão os pès onde quer o coração.
Leis em favor do Rei se estabelecem,
As em favor do povo só perecem.

Levar agua ao mar.

Longe da vista, longe do coração.

Mãe, casai-me logo, que se me arruga o rosto.

Mais leve cousa é padecer qualquer tormento que esperar-o.

Mais valem amigos na praça, que dinheiros na arca.

Mais vale um passaro na mão, que dous que voando vão.

Mal vae ao fuso quando a barba não anda em cima.

Matar dous coelhos de uma cajadada.

Melhor é o anno tardio, que vazio.

Melhor é uma casa na villa, que duas no arrabalde.

Melhor é um pão com Deus, que dous com o demo.

Melhor he merecel-os, sem os ter.

Que possuil-os, sem os merecer
